Why couldn't Charlevoix have deer in the city park on Lake Michigan? Two fawns were brought here Sunday from Newberry and will be kept in a pen on the court house grounds until big enough to transfer to Beaver Island. It is understood the island will be stocked with deer, as an attraction for tourists. The same idea would be a good one for this city.

VICTORY GARDENS

Michigan Council of Defense

With tomato plants now up approximately eight inches, it's about time to start staking them to poles. The stakes should be set 16 to 18 inches apart—which is just where you planted your tomatoes, if you did things correctly—and should be about an inch or an inch and a half thick. Height: five to six feet. Advice: The shorter poles require less labor in setting and are the most common support.

Some growers place the supports before the tomatoes are planted; others prefer to erect them after the plants are set. If you plan to stake at all you better do it soon, as the roots will be disturbed if there is much delay.

While tomato plants are small, weekly pruning of the side buds is recommended, if required, to remove all side shoots. As growth progresses, the plant may be tied to the stake with coarse twine or tape. Tie the twine first to the stake so that it will not slip down, and then tie up the plant, allowing ample space for the stem to grow thicker. When—and if—the center shoot or tip of the plant reaches the top of the support, nip it off. Tomatoes which are staked produce higher quality fruits because the fruits do not lie on the ground and are subject to less decay.

Cauliflower

If you wish top success with cauliflower you should have moisture-laden air, well enriched soil and liberal feeding with liquid manure. Cauliflower heads, when beginning to gain size, must be shielded in some way against drying winds and sunshine to insure perfect development, spotless whiteness, tender flesh and spicy flavor. A simple and effective way in which to do this is to bend down and draw over the plants the nearest of the upper projecting leaves; or to cut large, green cabbage leaves for a covering, renewing from time to time.

Garden Calendar for July

In the Garden:

Spray cucumbers, tomatoes, potatoes and such vegetables as are subject to blight with Bordeaux mixture (copper sulphate (blue vitriol) 4 lbs.; caustic lime (unslaked) 4 lbs.; water, (50 gals.)

Plan successive plantings of beets, radishes, lettuce, spinach. Apply nitrogenous manures to all crops grown for their leaves.

Transplant late cauliflower, cabbage, kale, broccoli, and Brussels sprouts to permanent quarters. Stop cutting asparagus. Thin out New Zealand spinach.

Keep constantly cultivating. Tie up leaves of early cauliflowers when heads are forming. After they are matured and it is desired to hold them for some time, cut the roots half through. Stake up the tomatoes.

In the Flower Garden:

Cultivate everything frequently. Give sweet peas plenty of water or mulch.

Prune climbing roses now that have finished blooming.

Sow seeds of perennials, especially digitalis and campanula.

Spray all plants to control insects and diseases. Keep blooms and seeds picked from all annuals.

Sweet alyssum, babybreath and other short-season annuals may be sown for fall bloom.

LANSING LETTER

Third, railroad and bus facilities are good to Michigan's vacationland. If vacations are started mid-week, instead of at week-end periods, these facilities should be adequate to meet the additional travel demands.

Fourth, Michigan comprises not only one peninsula, but two peninsulas. Our coastline is greater than any other state, even including Florida. Consequently, water transportation is possible to such isolated points as Mackinac Island—an attraction that many vacation states do not possess.

And here is a typical report of summer prospects:

"Things are a lot better than we thought they would be. In fact, there are signs that we may have a better season than usual, as some families prefer to travel short distances from the cities rather than make long motor trips."

Upper Peninsula towns in mining and lumbering areas are humming with industrial activity, but the resort owners are still apprehensive. Many resorts in the U. P. lack good transportation facilities except by automible. Distances are great.

A bright spot appears to be Sault Ste. Marie where thousands of United States soldiers are stationed at Fort Brady and surrounding cantonments and a ship lock and airport are under construction.

"A colorful drama of war defense is presented 24 hours a day at this great transportation artery which in peacetime is visited by tourists and sightseers from all over the world," writes John R. Merrifield, secretary of the Sault Ste. Marie chamber of commerce.

"Just now barrage balloons float over the locks and city all day long, and many a powerful searchlight stabs the sky at night.

"Soldiers of the United States Coast Artillery man the anti-aircraft batteries that are installed everywhere. The guns are of many sizes and their crews are trained to a high pitch of efficiency.

"St. Mary's majestic river whose scenic charm has been celebrated for centuries is now patrolled for miles north and south of the city. A strategic shore road is being constructed from end to end of the mighty stream.

"Building of the new lock will keep 600 men busy for two years or more. Widening of the west ship canal has been started by the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock Company."

Frank Davis of the Eastern Michigan Tourist Association reports philosophically, "People are going to take a vacation somehow. The biggest headache is local transportation to and from resort areas.

"Many of our tourists will be without cars and will demand jitney service, or some other means of transportation, into towns. Guests are not going to seek amusement by riding around the country-side in an automobile, but will stay at resorts. Shuffleboard, camera hikes, horseback pack trips ping pong, tennis, bicycle riding, softball games—these are some of the possibilities for stay-at-camp vacationers."

Davis gives this advice, too, to resort owners: "Don't talk war, or be a 'worry wart' about national affairs. Your patrons are at your resort to escape from the strain of war work, and are seeking relaxation to build their morale."

That is the spirit of the 1942 vacation industry in Michigan.

The northland country, scenic in lakes and streams and forests, offers an ideal haven for war workers who want to keep fit.

Nearby to Michigan industrial centers are shore beaches and parks and small lakes—something which Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, and Illinois, for example, cannot provide for their metropolitan populations.

Michigan is more than an arsenal of assembly-line production. It is an arsenal of outdoor recreation, important to war-time morale.

the Great Lakes an aggregate of 10 black bass, northern pike and walleyes, of which 10 may be walleyes, but not more than five may be black bass and not more than five my be northerns. While the skipper and crew would give out nó informstion whatsoever, that queer looking hox-shsped craft in port Tuesday morning had all the appearaaces of a military invasion barge. According to my observations it was manned by a Navy crew, was enroute somewhere from some Great Lakes port, was of all steel conatruction of three sections bolted or welded together and diesel-powered. In view of its shallow draft, it appeared it might be sboved up on shore most anyplace for landing purposes.

Nurse: "Yes—and so did his wife."

Pearl Johnson, located right in the middle of some of the West Coast's best angling grounds, wants to know how the trout fishing is here. A letter from his wife reads, in part, as follows: "We sure eajoy the paper out here. Look for it every Monday. See there have beea a lot of improvemeats there since we left, so hope we'll know the old town when we come back. Note you have all the war rationing there. The dnrn little devils (the Japs, we suppose) are getting closer to us, as Astoria, bombed Sunday night without dsmage, isn't so far from where we live. Pearl has gone fisbing this morning with bis brother. They got a catch of flounders yesterday and some aice crabs. He surely loves the sea food they get. Charles See aad wife visited us a week ago. They were returning home from a visit with his son and passed right by our door. It was a pleasant surprise. Both of us ara fine and enjoy the west very mucb."

Traverse City chamber of commerce officials expressed surprise that a survey revealed beavier resort patronage at this time than the same date a year ago. We hope it is true.

Northern Michigan is witnessing its first car-less vacation season. Not alone is tourist traffic down to the lowest point in history due to vacationless wartime employment and automobile and tire rationing, but those who are accupying summer homes in the resort area are doing noticeably less driving; in many instances using smaller cars. The trend toward utilization of bicycles for transportation is most apparent. Michigan is having an opportunity to show its summer guests that a car is aot necessary to vacatioa and the tourists and resorters who have spent their bolidays "on wbeels" in the past will ao doubt find new adventurea and thrills, not inconvenience, ia meeting the transportatioa problems of a vacation in America at war.

HOLIOAY TRAVEL, BUSINESS GOOD

SHORTER AUTO TRIPS INDICATED BY SURVEY

Straits Traffic Drops 49 Per cent, Anto Camps, Taurist Cabins Fillad to Capacity

Travel in northern Michigao was fairly heavy over the Fourtb of July week end, according to a survey of hotels, tourists camps and business places of this region.

A two-day week end, instead of a three-day holiday as last year, combined with the present trend to cut down use of nutomobilee, made a noticeable difference in patronage of hotels. However, tbe local auto camp snd tourist cabins near the city were filled to capacity. Gasoline stations reported a steady business for Friday, Saturday and Sunday, indicating a steady etream of travel both north and south for the holiday period. Restaurants, hotel and club dining rooms served large numbere of meals.

The holiday week end saw meny summer residents located in their cottages for the season. Travel on Pere Marquette trains was good, indicnting that many week end visitors and summer people preferred to come by train rather than by auto.

While travel was considered good for this area, visitors apparently made shorter trips and there were fewer cars going across the Straits to points farther north.

A 49 per cent drop in traffic across the Straits of Mackinac was recorded. State ferries tranferred 2,839 nutomobiles on July 4, compared with an all-time record of 5,938 cars during the same 24-hour period a year ago. It wns pointed out, however, that while this year's holiday traffic showed a ehsrp decline from 1941 figures, it was but slightiy below the 1940 Independence Day figure.

WELFARE CASES URGEO TO WORK

COUNTY BUREAU APPEALS TO THE EMPLOYABLES

Present Emergency On Farms and In Orchard Districts Cauld Thus Be Aleviated

It is reported today that the State Bureau of Social Security ie encouraging all recipients of public assistance, who are physically able to work, to assist with the present employment eituation, eepecially on farms where the nation's food is produced.

Those willing to take employment may obtain details from the Department of Social Welfare and Bureau of Social Aid for Charlevoix county, at the office located on Petoskey avenue.

It is understood that those who secure regular employment sufficient to meet their budgetary needs will be temporarily cancelled. Those who pick cherries only would probably not be cancelled beenuse it is of a temporary nature.

In the past people hnve hesitated to accept employment because of the delay in being reinstnted on the assistnnce rolls after work has ceased. They need no longer fear such delny.

Each person now receiving assistance has had a letter from the State Supervieor, F. E. Faurl, and has already been advised of the employment emergency nnd that their grants will be reinstated when unemployed and no other means of support.

If a public assistance person, Old Age Assistance or Aid to Dependent Children, accepts employment, their assistance will be reinstated immediately when they stop work unless there is other means of support.

Most persons who can work will be able to earn more than they could receive in an assistance grant. Those whose earnings will only meet part of their needs will receive supplementary aesistance.

If recipiente of puhlic aesistance wish to find employment, they may register at the Employment Service, Charlevoix City Hall, on Tuesdaye, or at the office in Petoskey. Peoplo who secure employment ehould immediately notify the county bureau.

ANNUAL MEETING SCHOOLS JULY 13

IMPORTANT PROPOSALS WILL BE BROUGHT UP

Boerd Will Seek Vote an Operation of Parochial School and Additional Finances

Attention is called to the annunl meeting of Chsrlevoix school district No. 1, city and township, to bo held in the high school session room at 8 o'clock Monday evening, July 13.

Purpose of the meeting is election or re-election of school officers and transacting such business as may properly come forward. Tho terms of two members of tho school board expire this year. They are Carl Kohler, present treasurer, and Harold Withers, who was elected to fill the unexpired term of Dr. Carlton Dean.

One matter which will be brought up is a proposal to integrate the parochial school with the public school. It is possible, with permission of voters, for the school board to enter into contract with the parochinl school, allowing enrollment of the Catholic institution to that of the public school, resulting in increased state aid approximating $3,000. The school board then would supervise the parochial school, paying costs of instruction, operation, supplies, etc. but not paying for permanent improvements.

This would eventually result in a small profit to the local school district and will greatly assist patroos of the porochial school who are nt present pnying the cost of grade education for 55 pupils in addition to their share of taxes for the public schnol. Such an

MID-YEAR STATUS BANKS IS SHOWN

DEPOSITS INCREASE IN TWO LOCAL INSTITUTIONS

Drop in Customer Loans and Decrease In Earniog Noted; Increase Government Bonds

Mid-year etatements of Charlevoix banking inetitutions are published elsewhere in these columns this week and reflect the trend in bank earnings.

The Charlevoix County State Bank shows an increase in deposits of $47,000, but earnings for the year were not as large as in 1941. The bank paid a 6 per cent dividend to etockholders on June 30, same as for the past five years and added materially to surplue and undivided profits accounts. Surplus increased $2,000 and tha undivided profits account remained practically the same as a year ago.

Loans to customers and individuals have decreased during the year from $336,000 to $306,000, while holdings in government bonds have increased from $82,000 to $96,000 and in municipal bonde from $47,000 to $57,000. The low rate of return on these securities shows in the net earnings of the bank. This trend in earnings is general throughout the country and many banks have fouod it neeessary to reduce or eliminate interest on savings deposits to offset the decrense in returns on investments.

The baok shows a fine liquid position with $173,000 cash and $96,000 in government bonds. Tho cash necount is coosiderably lsiger now than it was on June 30, 1941. The bank has shown a steady gain in deposits since opening in February, 1034.

The Charlevoix State Savings Bank stntement shows a parallel trend with a deposit increase af $22,379.31, surplus the same as last yenr, an increase of $1,147.57 in undivided profits.

Loans to customers decreased from $171,649.72 to $137,200.05, holdings in government bonds increased from $77,490.00 to $111,394.38 snd municipal honds decreased from $20,640.00 to $10,090.00. The hank showed an increase in cash from $03,720.58 in 1041 to $105,517.78 as of June 30. With this cash account ond government boods tntaling $111,394.38, tho bsnk shows an excellent liquid conditlon.

Jones eeeme to be a successful man and it le suppoeed, in accordance with the old saying, "He made hay while tha eun shone." It wasn't only that, though, he made it from the grass that other people let grow under their feet.

Any mention of bueiness district improvements most certainly ehould include the new eign being installed by Wayne Belding on the Schroeder & Hovey drug store (formerly Fessenden's) and tha new imitation brick siding placed on the Ed. Helso plumhing shop.

Taurist patronage over the July 4th week end, I believe, was far better than earlier anticipated. It did not come up to last year's record proportions when people slept in their cars on the etreets for lnck of better accommodations, but a survey of the city's hotels, rooming places, cabin camps, tourist park, trolling camps and restaurants, etc., showed a whopping business from Saturday noon until lata Sunday. If accomplishing nothing more, this holiday spurt sort nf eliminated the gloom attending a elow-starting season.

And while on the eabject of business patronage, one local merchant—a fellow not disposed to be an optimist as a general thing—told me his business was better than a year ago despite the absence of eo many young men in the armed forces and local people working in defeuse plants and the difficulty, becauso of restrictions, of obtaining merchandiee. Another local busineee place reported n 50 per cent increaso during the month of June over last year. So there you have it!

Practically every business place in the area eurrounding Traverse City, and particularly reeorts and resort hotels, were represented in the recent annual "Resort Edition" of the Traverse City Record-Eagle. They really make an effort to tell people what tbey have in tha way of recreational facilities at Traverse. And now that I think of it, perhaps that'a one of the reasons

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Aesociation

Salute your home-town war heroes next Friday, July 17.

Tho occasion will bn "American Heroes Day."

And the sponsors ara Michigan's 00,000 retailers who exceeded quotas of bonds and etamps of all other states in May nnd who are out to do it again in July:

Tho national quota is a billion dollars' worth of insurance for freedom, a goal which may decide the fata of the eystem of voluntary savings. The alternative, already proposed, is enforced payroll deductions. So buy war stamps from your rotailers next Friday!

Michigan retailers, like in other states, find themselves literally "twix the devil and the deep blue sea."

On the one hand is price control whoee wholesale and retail ceilings were set for March, 1942. Small retailers who must replace merchandise, much of which was bought last fall at pre-March wholesale prices, are finding the profit margin of many items at current whoelsale levele to be small indeed.

Manufacturers are being asked to absorb eome of the wholesale price increase. Tbie cannot be done in many cases, it ie admitted, based on the experience of Canada which controls wages as well as prices. Either tho ceiling must be rnised, as has already been done for soveral commoditiee, or Congress must provide subsidies to manufacturers. Such is the picture as given to us by Otis Cook, manager, Michigan Retail Institute.

And even then, according to Leon Henderson, federal price administrntor, the thrent of inflation etill exists as long as ceilings are not placed on wages and farm products.

In testimony before the House appropriations committee, Henderson expressed belief that there was "n very real danger" that "our present price ceilings will not hold."

AT THE MOVIES

Gay Comedy Scene in "Gold Rush"

When Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush" is unreeled at the Palace Theatre, July 12-13, through United Artists release, audiences will see King Clown performing as he has never performed before.

Among the most touching and humorous scenes in the film, Charlie is seen doing the Oceana Roll in his shabby little cabin on New Year's eve, entertaining the lady of his heart—present only in his dream. Later his cabin totters on the edge of the precipice — and eternity, but the little tramp goes merrily about his business. And when he and his fellow prospector are slowly but surely starving to death, Charlie boils an old shoe and eats the laces with relish as if he were doing away with a plate of delicious steaming-hot spaghetti.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: To keep Norland Airways in business, Alan Slade has agreed to fly a so-called scientist named Frayne and his assistant, Karnell, to the wild Anawotto country of northern Canada, where Frayne expects to find the breeding ground of the trumpeter swan. Slade suspects Frayne of having other plans than swan-hunting, but he has paid them enough to enable Slade's partner, Cruger, to buy a Lockheed they have been needing. Meanwhile, Alan goes with Lynn Morlock, daughter of the local doctor, to give first aid treatment to a flyer named Slim Tumstead, who has been hurt in a fight. He learns that Tumstead knows about the new plane and about Frayne. While Slade is on his way north with Frayne and Karnell, someone holds up Cassidy, night watchman for Norland Airways, and steals the Lockheed. All Cassidy can tell Cruger is that the thief wore a mask and that he headed north in the plane. Now Slade and his passengers are flying into a head wind, and Frayne has just complained that they are not making good time.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VI

"It is very empty country," the swan-hunter observed.

Two ragged old figures emerged from the shack door and ran about.

"Fine and empty," said Karnell, who looked up slightly startled by an admonishing elbow dig from his companion.

"It'll be better in an hour or two," Slade told them. "We'll be coming out on scrub timber and heavier ridges. Then you'll see your last mine camp or two along the Ashibik."

He went on for half an hour of silence, conscious of the two heads bent over the chart, the mumble of voices, and the repeated studious peering through the poised binoculars.

"Weather's clearing," he cried out, half an hour later, when he sighted blue through the torn wisps of gray. "That means less wind to buck."

But a glance at his fuel-gauge suddenly lowered his spirits.

"We can't make the Anawotto," he announced as he retarded his throttle to conserve fuel. "We'll have to land at Lake Avikaka and fill up."

Slade, pointing to his gauge, could see Frayne's face tighten a little with annoyance.

"What is at Lake Avikaka?" questioned his passenger.

"Just two old sourdoughs who have a camp there on the fringe of Nowhere."

"Sourdoughs? What are they?"

"Just two funny old birds who happen to be friends of mine. I keep a gas cache in their back yard."

He could hear the two voices conferring. It gave him the feeling of being excluded from something that might be of importance to him.

"That's the Kasakana there, just ahead of us," Slade explained, "the stream that looks like a twisted wire. We'll have about sixty miles of it. Then we'll land just where it empties into Lake Avikaka."

Frayne, tight-lipped, inspected his chart.

"Who are these—these old sourdoughs as you term them?" he asked.

"Just two old lone-fire prospectors who've panned gold and staked claims all the way from Arizona up to the Circle," Slade explained. "With an itch," he added, "to be always pushing out to what seems like the last frontier. They're pretty good old scouts. You'll like 'em."

Frayne's expression failed to confirm that claim.

"For what do they prospect?" he exacted.

Frayne's side-glance seemed in search of possible second meanings.

Slade looked for some sign of life from the cabin between its sheltering rock shoulders. All he saw, as he nosed cautiously down to the lake end, was a gray plume of smoke from the shack chimney. It impressed him, in the midst of the gloomy ridges lurred with stunted timber, as a sort of pennon of valor, a flag defying the forces of nature.

It was a brave little outpost, the river repeated as he swung lower. But he could catch no glimpse of either Minty Buckmao or Zeke Pratt. And it was seldom he found them far from that cockeyed old windjass and hoist of theirs.

Then his heart lightened. They must have heard him, after all.

For two ragged old figures emerged from the shack door and ran about the rock slope in small circles, waving arms as they went.

One figure wore an apron of butcher's linen which he tore from his shoulders and whirled in the air while the other executed a creaky dance step about him.

"Those old wilderness waifs are sure glad to see us," Slade observed as his ship landed and lost headway.

Frayne did not share in his excitement.

"We go on to the Anawotto," he suggested, "as soon as you have refueled?"

Slade, stiff and tired, rose from his seat.

"Not on your life. We bunk with these bushwhackers tonight. I want a hot meal and seven hours of sleep."

"But your friends," said Frayne, "are not my friends."

"But come and meet 'em," said Slade, leaping ashore with his mooring line. He was halfway up the bank when the two old sourdoughs descended on him. They circled about him and slapped his shoulders, shouting with shrill and childlike excitement at the unlooked-for break in their solitude.

"How are you, puddle-jumper! By crickety, it's Lindy!"

Slade knew, even before he felt their hearty handclasps, that he was among friends. They may have looked uncouth in their patched and ragged Mackinaws. But in the crow-footed old eyes above the grizzled whiskers he could see open affection.

"Bring me them darnin' needles, son?" questioned Zeke when the body-slapping was over.

"Sure thing," said Slade, producing a package from his jacket pocket. "And that oilstone you've been hankering for." Then he lowered his voice. "How's the color been showing?"

"Swell," said Minty. "We struck a vein that'll make your eyes bug out. But keep it under your hat, son."

Slade glanced toward his plane.

"I've got a couple of visitors for you," he announced.

The two old faces promptly hardened.

"What're they after?" was Minty's quick inquiry.

"They're after swans' eggs," announced Slade.

"Swans' eggs?" said Zeke. "That don't sound natural."

"I know it, Zeke, but we've got to take their word for it. They're headed for the Anawotto to dig out the breeding ground of the trumpeter."

Zeke, from under his shaggy brows, inspected the strangers.

"How'd you know they ain't field scouts?"

Slade smiled at the concern on the seamed old face.

"I'll bring 'em up," said Slade. Solitude, he had long since learned, always left a bush-worker morosely suspicious of unidentified intruders. He had even known some of those lone-fire gold-seekers to greet the casual prowler with a flurry of buckshot.

Yet he himself was a little puzzled, when he reached the landing stage, to find that Frayne had decided to have his man Karnell remain in the plane cabin.

"You're the captain," said Slade. But his meditative eye passed casually over the gas drums that stood on the spruce rack which made them so easy to roll aboard. And it was always better to be safe than sorry.

He was whistling as he climbed into the cabin and busied himself for a minute or two with his instrument board. Then, as his two passengers conferred at the water's edge, he quietly abstracted the motor's breaker assembly and slipped it into his pocket. He felt that it was as well, all things considered, to know that his Snow-Ball Baby was definitely bedded down for the night.

"You'll like these two old codgers," Slade persisted as he followed the reluctant-footed Frayne up the shore slope.

Frayne, however, remained silent and abstracted as he entered the shack where the smell of frying bacon mingled with the aroma of three sourdough bread-loaves just turned out of their baking pans. He noted the glowing cookstove and the orderly dish shelves, the spring traps and the shooting irons in the shack corner, the wall bunks with their abraded Hudson Bay blankets, the floor rugs of wolfskin, the home-made table and chairs darkened by time and smoke. Everything bore an air of frontier roughness, of ingenious expediencies in a land of strictly limited resources. But the general result was one of craftily-won comfort, of security obtained through toil and persistence. Even the meal the two old-timers prepared for their guests was an ample one.

But as the meal was made away with an odd constraint hung over the men seated about the rough table.

"I see you have a radio," Frayne observed as he sipped at his second cup of coffee.

Minty's saddened eye regarded the instrument.

"She's been dead for seven months now. Battery's plumb gone. And this-here air-robber's freight-enarges 're so high we jus' can't see our way to a new one."

Frayne, Slade thought, looked relieved.

"You are very much alone here," he observed.

"You're tellin' me," said Minty. "But we don't reckon that as a drawback," amended Zeke, "seein' the two of us have kind of a hankerin' for elbow room. Only time I feel right lonesome is when there's folks around. Then I git a feelin' o' bein' hemmed in."

Frayne's eye wandered to the shelf that held a pestle and mortar, a long-handled quartz-roaster, a dust-scales under a cracked canopy of glass, an assortment of variously mineralized rock of all colors and shapes.

"How long," he inquired, "have you been here?"

"Well over two years now," acknowledged Minty.

"Have your labors been rewarded?" was the next casually put question.

Slade could see the two pair of crafty old eyes suddenly become expressionless.

"Not by a long shot," protested Zeke. "I natcherally git a little out o' my winter trappin', and this shorthorn mate o' mine brings in enough game meat to keep us goin'. But we ain't had what you'd call a strike."

"Reckon we never will," said Minty.

"It's been hard goin'," chimed in his bunkhouse mate.

"How do you do your mining," asked the man of science, "without power and machinery?"

The two old sourdoughs exchanged glances again.

"Oh, you'd scarce call it minin'," ventured Zeke. "Most we do is strip a bit along the back slopes or hawk a speck o' dust gold from the Kasakana sandbars."

"Then it's gold alone you are interested in?" was the next question.

"That's right, stranger. And we've been that way for forty-odd years now," Zeke conceded.

"All the way from the old Rio Grande up to the Porcupine," added the dreamy-eyed Minty, "not omittin' the Klondike. Now your main interest, this young cloud-clipper tells me, is swans' nests."

"My only interest," amended Frayne as he pushed back his chair. "I am an ornithologist."

The word seemed to puzzle Minty.

"Why, I seen a black-billed swan on the lake here three days ago," Zeke announced. "He sure was a beauty."

"It is the trumpeter I am in search of," said the ornithologist.

Zeke scratched his head.

"And what'll you do with him when you git him?"

"It is my wish to obtain their eggs," said the other, "before they are extinct."

Minty got up and crossed to his ore shelf.

"Speakin' of eggs," he said, "could you be spottin' the bird laid this one?"

His cackle was slightly derisive as he produced an ellipsoid mass of black and burnished material almost as big as an ostrich egg. The luster of the oblate spheroid with the feathering of light streaks made it look as if it had been polished by hand.

"It looks like tar," Frayne casually observed.

"Tar my eye!" croaked Minty as he placed the burnished spheroid on the scarred table end. "You're missin' it by a mile."

"Then what does it happen to be?" inquired the swan-seeker.

"If you was more of a minin' man," Minty was saying, "you'd know it was pitchblende."

Frayne shrugged and let his wavering glance come to rest on the pictured bathing beauties tacked above the wall bunks.

"The eggs I am in search of," he finally observed, "are of another color."

"But they won't hatch what this'll batch," averred Zeke, bent over the table end.

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

A good deal of the news from our fighting fronts has been bad of late. There never has been any excuse for easy optimism in this war.

We know we are going to win; but we know, too, that it will be victory the hard way.

The mounting roar of war production breaks through the gloom of battle defeats. Nowhere is this more marked than in the automotive industry, key unit in our industrial offensive. Reports from 432 plants, representing 72 per cent of the industry on the basis of employment, show that war shipments increased from $239,000,000 in Februnry to $349,000,000 in April, an increase of 46 per cent. Mnn hours on war work increased 92 per cent, from 39,000,000 in February to 74,000,000 in April.

The U. S. Army will be 4,500,000 strong by the middle of 1943. The Army food bill will be $1,290,000,000 next year.

Agricultural Secretary Wicknrd said the U. S. will have the rely more nnd more on the contribution smnll farmers can make toward meeting wartime food needs. He said the Agricultural Department is doing everything it can to help these small farmers purchase new equipment and stock for expanding crops.

He asked Americans to substitute cheese, chicken or dried beans to replace 40 per cent of pork production which is being sent abroad to our soldiers and allies. The 1942 pig crop was estimated at 105,500,000 head compared with 85,000,000 in 1041—an all time record.

Milk production on June 1 wns more than 3 per ceot grenter than last year. One fourth of the season's total pack of eanned apricots will he bought for lend-lease.

Farm employment on June 1 was reported at 11,917,000 persons, 1,121,000 more than on Mey 1. Farm wages were 183 per cent of the 1010-14 level.

If you can find two pounds more of scrap rubber around the house, turn it in, for that'll be enough to make a gas mask, which may save the life of an American soldier.

As soon as the scrap rubber drive is over on July 10—and that doesn't mean to stop saving old rubber—a new campaign will be launched for scrap iron, steel, copper, aluminum, fats and greases.

It's not going to be an easy war. We'll need every bit of materials that can be salvaged. Your saving and salvage must be continuous.

Our huge ship-building program is limited only by the available steel plate, said Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson said that if price ceilings hold during the next 20 months, the entire war effort will cost 62 billion dollars less than it would if prices rose as they did during the last war. Passenger service on railroads and busses is 50 per cent greater than it was last year. The Office of Defense Transportation has called for an end to all unnecessary travel for the duration. Beginning July 13, beef and veal must be graded according to government standards and must be plainly stamped. From now on the housewife will know exactly what she is paying for. Bicycle rationing will start July 9 to persons who need them to get to and from their jobs. There'll be 240,000 adult machines for distribution. Safety razors will continue to be produced at 70 per cent of their 1940 rate. The CAA has embarked upon a program of training 13,350 pilots for the Army Air Forces Enlisted Reserve as glider pilots, airplane co-pilots, service pilots and pilot instructors. Men between 18 and 37 are eligible. The national income for 1942 is estimated to reach 117 billion dollars, of which 31 billion dollars will be returned to the government in taxes and war bonds, leaving 86 billion dollars to be spent for 69 billion dollars worth of available civilian goods. Unless controlled, this surplus buying power will inflate prices which would be the equivalent of a 25 per cent cut in wages.

HEARTS and FLOWERS

TOM: Gosh, Ann, I'm glad I could get back in time for our wedding anniversary. Being on the road as much as I am, it seems like I'm never home. Here's something for you.

ANN: You darling! Flowers!

TOM: It could have been a new hat if that blamed car of mine hadn't had to have a new set of piston rings.

ANN: I know wives shouldn't interfere in their husband's business, Tom, but Mrs. Reardon was telling me how much money Jack saved on the maintenance of his car. He drives even more than you do.

TOM: What all did she tell you, Ann?

ANN: Well, Jack Reardon uses Conoco Nth motor oil. That's the oil that OIL-PLATES the engine and saves a lot of wear and tear. And it contains a new synthetic that helps keep the oil from fouling up, too. Mrs. Reardon says Jack has to make his car last two or three years longer now and Conoco Nth motor oil will help him do it!

TOM: That settles it, Ann! I'm going to change right now to Conoco Nth!

ANN: Good boy! And maybe I can still get that new hat?

You'll agree that it's orchids to Conoco Nth motor oil, once you prove to yourself how it is so economical, clean-running and wear-saving. See Your Conoco Mileage Merchant today! Continental Oil Company

THE CCC

There are two sides to this CCC business, as there usually are to any disputed question. The obvious one is that the CCC was instituted in the depression to keep boys off the streets when there were no jobs. Now there are plenty of jobs—why keep on spending the money? That's a reasonable point of view.

The other side is that the CCC has turned out to be no charity, but a valuable aid to the Army and the Forest Service. The young men who belong to it are many of them too young for Army or Navy, and haven't the necessary technical training to be very useful in war industries. But they do work which saves the forest from fires worth far more than the keep of the boys would be, and near Army camps they release soldiers for military duties by clearing roads and doing work of similar nature.

The wise solution doubtless lies in compromise—to keep the CCC insofar as it is really needed, but to hold it down, not to expand either its numbers or expenses connected with it.

Some of the measures of the early thirties were depression-emergency measures, pure and simple. But is does look somewhat as if the CCC had justified itself on a more permanent basis.

Ruby Kerr and Mrs. James Kerr of Battle Creek, were week end guests of Mrs. David Kerr.

Mr. and Mrs. Ole Lyngklip and sons, Jack and Bill, are spending several weeks in their summer home.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Taylor, of Oak Park, Ill., are spending the summer in their cottage neur the Nursery.

Sam Alexander, Sr., spent the past week end in Lake City with his daughter, Mrs. H. L. Barnum and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dixon and daughter, Hazel, of Detroit, spent the past week end at the Roy Meyers home.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Harris and son, Allen, of St. Louis, Mo., arrived Saturday to spend the summer in their cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Gerrie, of Toledo, Ohio, friends of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Meyers, are vacationing in one of Johnson's log cabins.

Mrs. C. A. Todd and granddaughter, Louise Miller, of Dixon, Ill., arrived the past week and will spend the summer in their cottage.

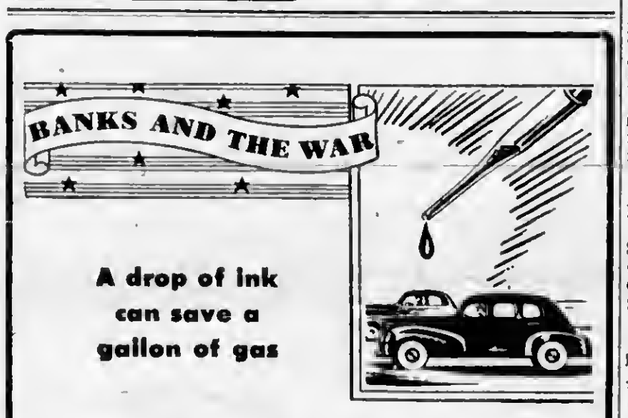
Jay McAllistor, of Detroit, spent the past week end at the Walter Williams home. Mrs. McAllister and small daughter returned home with him after several weeks' visit with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Williams, of Detroit, spent the past week end in their cottage. Their children, Evelyn, Shirley and Sonny, remained for several weeks.

Lt. Robert A. Barnum, grandson of Sam Alexander, received his new commission as Captain in the 57th Pursuit Squadron of the U. S. Army Air Corps last week.

The Concerners Club served a lovely chicken dinner in the church dining room last Friday evening to about 85 guests. The tables were decorated with flowers and red, white and blue candles. They made $50 for the benefit of the church. We hope to have more of them.

Although civilian building has been halted, war construction is booming at the rate of 12½ billion dollars a year.



DOES that sound like an extravagant statement? Consider these facts. A drop of ink is enough to write at least one check — probably more. You can mail the check anyplace, and that's all there is to it. However, if you pay by cash you may have to drive quite a few miles, and a gallon of gas goes mighty fast. You save time too when you have a checking account at this bank. Start one.

RUBBER COLLECTION ENDS FRIDAY NIGHT

Good Response in City; Residents Asked to Make Second Check

Charlevoix residents are asked to make a second check of their property for scrap rubber, as the ten-day extension period of the rubber collection drive will end Friday night, July 10.

The 25 tons of scrap rubber collected up to July 1st in this city is calculated to average nearly 20 pounds per person. Considering that the per capita quota for the entire state was only a little over three pounds, local residents are entitled to feel proud of their effort.

The search for scrap should not be relaxed in view of this good response, for if some region in the state is unable to produce a reasonable amount of material, the additional poundage which Charlevoix residents turn in will help to offset shortages in other points.

Ili Chum:

How's the local talent doing when it comes to competing with Walter Wincholl,

This is just a note to let you know that we Charlevoix boys appreciate the home town paper, regardless of age. All the more so since we're no longer in the States—also to let the home folks know that the representatives from Charlevoix are keeping their end up—at least in Australia, as you can plainly see from the "hello's to all" by Sgt. Carl Smith, Corp. Ed. Radle and Corp. David Matchett.

We'll all do our part in adding glory to the already nationally famous "Charlevoix - the - Beautiful."

FAIRS TO CONTINUE, ASSOCIATION STATES

Unanimous Opposition to Cancelling Was Held by Board

Preparations for Michigan's county fairs this fall are proceeding without interruption despite recent developments which threatened for a time to result in their cancellation.

The green signal to go ahead was decided upon by members of the Michigan Fairs Association, after considering requests by Joseph B. Eastman, director of the office of Defense Transportation, that the public refrain from attending such expositions to save rubber and gasoline and that fairs, conventions and similar gatherings be suspended for the duration of the war.

Members of the association met in Lansing with A. C. Carton, director of fairs for the state department of agriculture, to discuss Eastman's announcement. Opposition to cancelling the fairs was unanimous, the opinion being held that little, if any, rubber or gas would be saved by such a move.

It was pointed out that Eastman's statement did not include theatres, horse races, and many other forms of amusements whose patrons use hundreds of times the amount of rubber in their transportation than is consumed by those attending fairs.

In addition to the valuable stimulus that fairs give to agriculture, including this year the Victory Gardens, it was stated that the government is urging all who can to take vacations for needed rest, and for many farmers the fairs will be their only holiday.

The fair officials said, however, that if it is essential to the conservation of rubber, they will be glad to comply with any government closing order or request if it is applied to all forms of amusement that should come within such a classification. Unless there is some such development the fairs will be held as scheduled.

FOREST FIRE LOSS LOWER THIRD MONTH

Department Expressed Appreciation for Civilian Cooperation

Prolonged rainy weather following the abnormally dry spring explains much of the forest fire record of 9,248 acres burned-over in the first month, 252 acres burned-over in the second month, and 96 acres burned-over in the third month of the current forest fire season.

Conservation department forest fire fighters, however, are expressing their thanks to civilian cooperators for their help in holding to 515 the number of fires to be extinguished, and the current average of 18½ acres per fire is credited in part to radio coordination and fast dispatch of mechanical fire fighting equipment.

Though the woods are now so green as to make fire prevention relatively easy, conservation officials are nevertheless cautioning campers, picnickers and fishermen bound north to be careful with camp fires.

EIGHT CROSS BOYS AT FAMILY REUNION

SALE OF BONDS AND STAMPS IN STORES

Merchants Report Good Response to Campaign Begun Last Week

Charlevoix merchants are cooperating in the effort to raise this city's quota of $7,700 in war bonds and stamps during July.

Window decorations serve as a constant reminder to customers to buy stamps and bonds along with their regular purchases. Most stores report that the public is responding well to the merchants' campaign.

The July quota for Charlevoix county is $25,000, divided as follows: Charlevoix, $7,700; East Jordan, $5,000; Boyne City, $7,700; rural districts, $5,300.

Time to Line Grain Bins

Approach of grain harvest time brings a reminder to farmers to give the granary a thorough cleaning and to line the bins with hard finish building paper. The lining will make it easy to fumigate if insect trouble develops later in the stored grain, says C. R. Dible, Michigan State College extension specialist in insect control.

CAMP CHARLEVOIX WEEKLY COLUMN

Ken Smith, Camp Scribe

Here we are well into the second week and camp running along very well. Old Man Weather could warm up a bit to the pleasure of everyone, but our weather prophets predict hotter weather this week, so here's hoping that their predictions are better than they usually are.

The high-light of the week was the Annual Lamb Bar-B-Q on July the Fourth. Harry Bingham and his committee, Joe Craig, Paul Meech and Dave Tyner, prepared a great feast and with everyone getting their fill of lamb bar-b-q sandwiches. It was quite a sight to see the lambs on the spits being cooked down on the shore in a big pit. Several campers helped turn the spits during the day. Among the boys who cooperated in this enterprise were: Al Birdsall, Bob House, Tom Dancer, Bill Usher, Bob Black, Bill Kerr, Cary Bachman, Paul Winans, Bud Grimes, Chas. McGuire. That evening the Initiation Campfire was held down in the Council Ring. It was a very impressive service with the new boys being duly initiated. Paul Meech dug up the spirits which were buried there at the final council fire last year. They came through the winter in fine shape and will be an inspiration for boys this season.

At the Sunday morning chapel service, "Chief" was the speaker and gave a splendid talk on overcoming obstacles. Wes Brashares assisted in the service, as did Larry Rossler, Bill Kerr, Fritz Steketee, Jimmy McGerry and Don Neisch, who sang a solo. In the afternoon the Intermediates canoed across the bay, the Pioneers sailed and the Juniors enjoyed a trip in the truck. A huge fire in the fireplace in the evening was the center of attraction for everyone, with camp songs and other songs being learned. "Chief" read a chapter from the old favorite, "Old Siwash" and the crowd got many a laugh at the antics of "Ole."

The campers have chosen their cabin representatives for the camp council and these boys were elected to this high and important order: Fritz Steketee, Cary Bachman, Jim Lewis, Hal Caldwell, Mike Brand, John Hunting, Howard Kay, Tommy Thompson, Peter Morley, John Davis and Charlie McGuire.

Cabin "15" with "Tex" as the leader just left camp a few minutes ago to hike into Charlevoix. They will cook their supper along the way and go to the movie (an Abbott-Costello picture) and then hike back. The boys who are making the trip are: Sammy Greenwalt, Larry Rossler, Doc Culver, Barclay Newell, Charlie McGuire and Bill Newcomer. Needless to say they will all return tonight, tired, but happy at the experience of the first long hike this season.

Here's news for the mothers and fathers. The staff, feeling that programs should be planned so as to conserve tires and gas, has decided on August 8th as the official Dad's Rodeo Day. These have been two separate days heretofore, but this year they will be combined and what a day we are looking forward to. Last saw about 140 parents here, so this year we are hoping to at least tie that mark by combining both features, Dad's Day and the Rodeo. So take out that blue pencil and mark that date on your calendar so that we can have another great day together—parents, boys and staff.

Tonight the new diving tower and float will be duly christened. Everyone in camp voted on a name and also voted for a "queen" to reign over the ceremonies. Rumor has it that the name which won is either "The Chief" or "Lewie," and that Bob Mackenroth is to be the "queen," but more of that next week when we can give you complete information. This is a bright sunny day, warm and just fine for the christening.

"Tex" and Barclay Newell went fishing early one morning and came back in time for breakfast with a 2 1-2 pound bass. The "Isaac Waltons" are gradually getting into stride and we'll probably have some other fine catches to report before the season is over.

Well, folks, be sure to mark August 8th on that calendar and do try to come up for Dad's Rodeo Day. It is the high spot of our season. So until next week when we shall chat again,—adios and cherrio.

The state treasury is enriched by $1,691,371 as the Michigan Bell Telephone Company makes its semi-annual property tax payment to the Primary School Fund. The company's total State and Federal tax bill for 1941 reached a record peak of $9,826,000.

The state treasury today was enriched by $1,691,371 as the Michigan Bell Telephone company made its semi-annual property tax payment into the primary school fund.

Frank L. Hall, tax attorney for the company, this morning presented the check for the largest half year tax payment in the history of the company to Louis M. Nims, commissioner of the Michigan department of revenue. It marked the first time the check was handed to that official, previous poyments having been made to the auditor-general. Under the new Revenue Act, state tax collection duties are consolidated in the newly-created department of revenue.

Hall said that the company's 1941 total tax bill vaulted to a new peak of $9,826,000, or nearly $2,000,000 above the previous high, which was reached the year before. Of the total, $9,294,000 or more than 94% of the company's revenue was chargeable to operating expenses. That amounted to a tax of $10.59 per average telephone operated by the company during the year, compared with $9.71 for 1940.

The company's Michigan property tax of $3,382,743 thus was only about a third of the total 1941 tax bill. Other levies included $5,148,000 in Federal income and capital stock taxes; $713,000 in social security taxes to the Federal and state governments; and $50,000 in miscellaneous levies, chiefly municipal taxes on company properties not used at present for telephone purposes.

The Michigan Bell property tax is the largest single payment into the primary school fund. Taxes paid into that fund are returned for school purposes to the 83 counties in proportion to their school population.

Final payment on the company's $3,382,743 state property tax is due by October 31.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

One hundred sixty-six years ago last Saturday our forefathers signed the Declaration of Independence and we declared our freedom and independence from those with whom we now stand shoulder to shoulder to guarantee that we shall maintain that freedom and independence and above all that we shall assure our children the continuation of the American way of life as we have known it.

I think on this Fourth of July we can turn our thoughts to, and speak with reverence of, some of the heroes of this war and again dedicate ourselves and our lives to the task before us. Let us promise them again and again that they shall not have died in vain.

The Japanese caught us asleep at the switch at Pearl Harbor on the morning of December 7th. History will record in time where the responsibility should properly be placed; but even though we were caught off guard, the stories of heroism of the officers and men of our armed forces in battles to date will long be remembered. We know now from reliable reports the extent of our damage to our forces at Pearl Harbor. We know that the Japanese for all of their treacherous planning did not plan far enough and missed the boat at Pearl Harbor. Had they planned far enough ahead to send a strong supporting fighting fleet with a strong landing force to follow up their air attack, Hawaii might have fallen. But Hawaii will not fall, nor will we be caught sleeping at the switch again—the Midway battle proved that.

The fate of Luzon and Bataan was sealed just before one p. m. on December 8th, barely 10 hours after the attack on Pearl Harbor. In testimony before the Naval affairs committee recently, Admiral Thomas C. Hart said that he had long been suspicious of the true intent of the Japanese in their so-called peace negotiations with Washington, and, consequently had put his Asiatic fleet on a No. 1 alert early last July. He had brought his fleet as far as possible up to war strength and had prepared it for instant action. Later events proved he was on the alert and his fleet gave a good account of itself. The Admiral went even further than that, he begged Washington for more fighting planes and bombers for the Philippines. General MacArthur pleaded for reinforcements; some of which he got but all too little and too late. Both of these splendid fighting men in their reports repeatedly stated that they felt that given a force of 200 modern fighter planes on the Philippines that these islands could be held for a considerable length of time and the Japs denied a landing. They felt, and probably justly so, that if the Philippines could be held, and if sufficient land-based air support could be given the Asiatic fleet, the Japs could have been prevented from rushing reinforcements needed to subdue the Malay Peninsula, Singapore, the Island of Java; and furthermore, Burma and the Burma Road might today still be in Allied hands.

Unfortunately, MacArthur and Hart did not get these reinforcements. We are told that our total force defending the Philippine Islands was about 36,000 men; of these perhaps not more than 7,000 were white troops of the American Army. The Philippine Constabulary, officered by American Army officers, numbered several thousand and then there was the Filipino Army which General MacArthur had been detailed to train at the request of President Quezon of the Philippines. MacArthur had one bomber group of about 30 planes and one squadron of pursuit ships—far too few of both. The Japs on December 8th destroyed the greater portion of these planes and those which were not destroyed on the ground in the initial attack were openly outnumbered. Some of our bombers got away and were flown to Australia from which base they have performed yeoman service ever since. A few of the pursuit ships that were salvaged were repaired and rebuilt time after time and we recall numerous super-heroic feats performed by them on sporadic dive bombing crusades against Jap vessels in Manila bay.

On December 8th, Cavite was all but destroyed in the initial bombing attack and so Admiral Hart was without a home base from which to operate. General MacArthur's problem in the Philippines was to fight a delaying action and retire with his small force to Bataan. The Philippines troops under him had been untried in combat and so it was up to the American soldiers to fight the brunt of the rear guard action and to prove to those Filipino troops that the Japs were not super men and be it said to their undying credit that the Filipino soldiers proved to all the world what it means to be fighting for one's freedom. They proved their loyalty to their benefactor, Uncle Sam.

As early as February 5, 1942, the heroic Bataan defenders were eating only rice and mule meat, their own pack animals. They continued fighting against unsurmountable odds and when Bataan finally collapsed it was because aside from being pitifully outnumbered, the men were suffering physical exhaustion; malaria because of lack of quinine; malnutrition, etc.

The story of Corregidor was almost a repetition of the valiant stand on Bataan. Much of the Philippines is gone, but there are still brave Americans and many Filipinos who will continue to fight as long as physically able.

Yes, the tales of heroism of this war are many—Pearl Harbor, Bataan, Corregidor, Wake Island, the battle of the Coral Sea, the battle of Midway, and others. We must also remember the spectacular raid on Tokyo led by Jimmy Doolittle and his crew.

This year while celebrating the day on which we declared our Independence we are fighting another war to insure the survival of the freedom declared July 4, 1776. The Declaration of Independence lives on today in the heart of every true American. It will continue to live. It will be defended to the very last in a spirit which would have made the signers of that document proud.

VICTORY GARDENS

Michigan Council of Defense

Contrary to popular opinion, the planting season is not over. Many crops—including beans, carrots, beets, cauliflower, brussels sprouts, endive, Chinese cabbage, peas, radishes, lettuce, spinach and sweet corn—planted now will grow so much faster that the harvest will not be relatively as late as was the seeding.

Beans, carrots and beets from summer sowings will be better flavored and more tender than the older vegetables which may be harvested late from early sown seeds. Sweet corn, too, is best when grown from late planting.

Some vegetables such as peas, early radishes, lettuce and spinach require cool weather. Very early kinds of these vegetables may be sown in July and August, and will mature in the autumn. Cauliflower and brussels sprouts are fall crops and seeds should be sown now so that plants may be transplanted later.

There are two salad crops which are at their best in the fall—endive and Chinese cabbage. Endive will produce crisp, curly leaves which will be bitter until frost comes, making the most delicious salad of the season. Chinese cabbage grown in the summer will sometimes run to seed, but in the short days of autumn it has beautiful, elongated heads of crisp leaves.

Vegetable crops including peas, early radishes, lettuce and spinach require cool weather, and you may sow very early kinds in July and August, so they will mature in the autumn.

Sweet corn is a crop for late sowing and the finest corn is produced by late sowings.

Certificates Praised

Michigan's plan of awarding certificates to persons who register their Victory Gardens with the Victory Garden division of the Michigan Council of Defense was endorsed at the first national conference on Victory Gardens at Highland Park, Illinois. Victory Garden directors from 11 states declared their intention of following a similar procedure.

The conference agreed on the importance of food in the war effort, illustrated by the fall of Bataan where food shortage was the principal handicap to American forces. The importance of Victory Gardens in creating a food reserve was emphasized.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

War Shows Need for Land Policy

Strengthening of county and township land use policies to cope with the present and the post war problems of use and protection of natural resources became one of the goals suggested in the recent state-wide county agricultural agent summer school held at Michigan State College.

"Destiny of no community should be left to chance," remarked L. A. Wolfanger, professor in land use at the college. "A community that refuses to plan and zone its own land is not playing fair with its citizens, either present or future."

That many important areas now have protection against unwise land use is admitted. Sixteen counties have completed intensive land use studies and boast operating land use committees. These are in the counties of Alcona, Calhoun, Cass, Charlevoix, Dickinson, Genesee, Iron, Manistee, Mason, Menominee, Midland, Oakland, Oceann, Oscoda, Otsego and St. Joseph.

Out of 583 political townships constituting 47 northern counties, all but 57 townships in 7 counties have submitted recommendations of local committees concerning state-owned lands.

Rural planning based on natural, human and governmental resources is to be projected statewide, but particularly in communities where local interest indicates need, the county agricultural agents were informed at East Lansing. Land owners, including farmers and representatives of farm organizations will be invited to provide further local leadership in Michigan's plan for land use protection. Other aid will be available from Michigan State College, agencies of the United States Department of Agriculture and departments of state government.

LETTERS FROM THE ARMY CAMPS

31st Repair Squadron
31st Air Depot Group,
Hill Field,
Ogden, Utah

Dear Ken:

Received the Charlevoix Courier today (Monday) having gotten it on Saturday mornings at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and you can bet I was a happy soldier to get it, too.

You certainly have a lot of great news around Charlevoix since I left. The buddies here think it is quite a paper. A lot of them never even heard of the town of Charlevoix and you ought to hear me tell them of the city being on three lakes and of the good boating and great fishing spots we have up there.

This country is full of scenic mountains and deserts, but I prefer Charlevoix for fresh air same as Pvt. Dnie McCann said in the letter which I read in the Courier today. The Charlevoix boys in the armed forces should certainly appreciate your sending them the Courier. I certainly do and want to thank you a million times myself.

Today I received my Chapman (Power Squadron book) which I sent for from home, so I think I will do a little pastime reading on navigation, seamanship and piloting so that I won't be too stale on my return to Charlevoix. I sure miss the fresh water at home—that clear blue fresh water.

Here we're not so far from the Great Salt Lake and it is white with salt, 65 miles long and 25 miles wide.

We have about a half dozen B24 bombers in the hangar today—U. S. A.'s largest bombers which are now in England. You should see them. Sure is a sight.

Your member of Charlevoix Power Squadron—
Pvt. Charles Krulik.

Camp Robinson, Ark.
June 28, 1942

Dear Ken:

I know it is my duty as a friend as well as a soldier to let you know how much I appreciate your paper. It keeps me well informed and I feel quite at home most of the time.

I am in the Medical Corps of the United States Army. I have been here since the 12th of April. Naturally, I was down in the dumps when I first arrived here, and it was quite some time before I became accustomed to Army life. Now I enjoy it very much and find it rather fascinating at times. For instance yesterday, June 27th, we had our final Regimental Review. It surely was a thrilling sight because there were 2,500 of us doing our best to please and impress the general. I shall always remember it as one of the most outstanding moments of my life. I might add this review was only the 103rd and 104th Battallons. You see, we have to take our turns as there are over 35,000 men in this camp and there isn't room for all of us on the drill field when we pass in review. I wish everyone in Charlevoix could have seen it. It was very impressive and beautiful. I am the lead-off man in the first platoon of Company C and that only means I am one of the tallest men in our company. I don't know whether or not this is a distinction, but I will say I am the only man who represents Charlevoix at Camp Robinson in the Medical Corps. However, there are several boys here from Charlevoix but they are in the Infantry, namely Gibson Clark, Amos John and John Walker.

My basic training period is over and I am leaving very soon and I would suggest that you hold my paper until you hear from me again, but, please send me every edition because I don't want to miss anything.

With every good and kind wish to you and Mrs. Usher, believe me to be, ever,

Sincerely yours,
Jay J. Oliver.

The British Medical Journal reports that during the first two years of war deaths from tuberculosis increased in Glasgow about 41 per cent. The 1941 record shows no improvement. Overwork, strain, ill-spent leisure are thought to be responsible for the rise.

As an illustration that the purchase of war bonds and stamps has a direct relation to the fate of price control, Henderson went on to explain:

"What we will be able to do rests on the tax bill, and not only the amount of it but the nature of it, how much is withdrawn from current spendable income. It depends upon the amount of savings; it depends on the degree to which wages are stabilized; and it depends upon the course of farm prices and it depends upon the rate at which the war effort proceeds."

With their business already in jeopardy, as the fate of the present price control determines in part whether we are to have further inflation, Michigan retailers are out to sell war bonds and stamps in July in an aggressive campaign.

Both independent and chain stores are participating in the July drive.

The Independent Food Distributors Council, representing 200,000 independent grocers, has built its promotion around the Revolutionary war heroine, Molly Pitcher. There are Molly Pitcher war bond booths, and there are Molly Pitcher wardens selling 26 and 10 cent stamps.

The Institute of Distribution, the national chain store clearing house for 16,000 retail outlets, is operating separately under a slogan, "Buy War Stamps — This Store's Best Buy."

Within a few weeks another big war campaign will break.

Following the current collection of scrap rubber by the petroleum industry will be a steel salvage drive sponsored by the American Steel and Iron Institute, a glorified name for American junk dealers.

Endorsed by the War Production Board as a greatly needed effort, the junk salvage collection will seek to get every available piece of unused metal in Michigan.

An old flatiron will provide enough iron scrap to make two steel helmets or 30 hand grenades. An old heating radiator would make seventeen .30 calibre rifles; a medium sized garbage pail, one thousand .30 cal. cartridges. Even a wash pail can be converted into three bayonets.

That is putting scrap in terms everyone can understand.

The tremendous demand for steel in war production has created a serious problem. The collection of scrap iron and steel is said by the War Production Board to be urgently needed.

A heavy tank, for instance, requires 56,000 pounds of steel for which 28,000 pounds of scrap can be used.

A 3-inch anti-aircraft gun, which might possibly protect the Sault Ste. Marie locks during an air raid, requires 20,000 pounds of steel for which scrap iron can be used for 10,000 pounds.

Communities will be asked to spur their efforts by a house-to-house, or farm-to-farm collection of scrap iron. This war is getting serious. We are not winning yet. Hence, Michigan is being asked to do its part, not only for buying of more war bonds and stamps, but in turning over to local junk dealers every available piece of unused metal and rubber.

As the slogan makers put it, "Keep 'Em Firing—With Junk."

Synthetic rubber

AND STANDARD OIL COMPANY (INDIANA)

Rubber . . . let's get it. Fast . . . and plenty of it!
No matter who makes it or what it's made from!

● We want to see America get the rubber it needs, whether natural or synthetic. We want America to get that rubber in the quantities required and in the shortest possible time, whether it is made out of petroleum, out of alcohol, dandelions, guayule, or sawdust. The main thing is to get the rubber!

To those who are working to make rubber out of materials other than petroleum, we say, "God speed your efforts." Solving the rubber problem is necessary for winning the war and winning the war is our main concern.

Much has been said about making rubber from alcohol derived from farm crops. We do a great deal of our business with farmers. We should like to see them having a hand in supplying the raw materials for rubber.

We are working with petroleum because we understand it. At the request of the Government we have helped form Rubber Synthetics, Inc. In 1943 that company expects to put into operation at Gary, Indiana, a large plant financed by the Defense Plant Corporation to produce butadiene, which is one of the principal ingredients of synthetic rubber. Negotiation is now under way with the Government to supply that plant with a part of the petroleum raw materials required in its operation.

Nevertheless, we urge a "green light" and all speed for any other practicable method of making synthetic rubber.

Maybe Charlevoix isn't located in the wilds, but some wild things frequently happen here. For example there is the deer which last Saturday rampaged through the Belvedere Hotel—breaking up furniture, jumping through windows, etc., much to the surprise and bewilderment of guests. Reminds us of the incident of a few years ago when a buck deer charged through Bill Meyer's garage, went out through a back window and nearly ran down several pedestrians before entering Lake Michigan near the municipal bathing beach.

Aside from the fact that matters of great import will be decided at the annual school meeting scheduled next Monday evening at the high school assembly room, it is every taxpayers' civic duty to attend. If there's anything more important than the proper education of children, then I'm wrong and will retract what I've said.

Violets are blue,
Sugar is sweet,
Remember?

No tourist angler need be deprived of fishing or have to route a local hardware dealer out of bed because he happens to arrive here on a Sunday without a fishing license and finds the places where you usually get them are closed. As an added tourist service, arrangements have been made to sell fishing licenses at the board of commerce information bureau on Sundays and holidays. Remember this, and if you hear of anyone trying to get a fishing license on these days, tell them about the new service.

Charlevoix county residents should be able to "keep sweet" for a while, at least. The county rationing board reports 3,438 applications for canning sugar were received and that 128,438 pounds—roughly 64 tons—was rationed.

GAME LAWS OPERATE ON STANDARD TIME

Attorney General Rushdon Overruled Former Decision

Attorney General Herbert J. Rushton last Friday overruled a battery of assistant attorneys general by declering that when the small game season comes around hunters must wait until 8 a. m. even if the law says 7 a. m. Eastern Standard Time.

Rushton said his ruling also applied to the 0 p. m. to 6 a. m. prohibition against fishing through the ice for bluegills and that the prohibited period was really 7 p. m. to 7 a. m.

Several months ago the attorney general's office issued an opinion to the effect that there was no such thing at law as Eastern War Time. Rushton did not see the opinion. It set forth that since the conservation law set up time limits on the basis of Eastern Standard Time, hunting and fishing periods moved up an hour.

Rushton in his opinion Friday said that Congress in moving up the clock did so to conserve power and not to control conservation programs.

TB SEALS WORK TO HALT TUBERCULOSIS

Two Suspected Cases Found In X-Ray Clinic at Boyne City

The Christmas Seal you bought is still working to protect Charlevoix county from tuberculosis. Its latest report states that no active tuberculosis was discovered in the recent X-ray clinic held by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association in cooperation with Dr. James W. Chapman, director of Health District No. 3.

Among the 42 persons X-rayed in Boyne City, two suspect cases of tuberculosis were found. There were also two "arrested" cases—persons who had the disease and recovered.

Seven cases of primary infection were also shown. A person with "primary infection" has caught the germs from some one who has active tuberculosis. However, by observing general health rules he may avoid ever breaking down with the disease. Famphlets on the care necessary for primary infection cases are available upon request from the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, Lansing.

Charlevoix still has a serious tuberculosis problem, the Michigan Tuberculosis Association points out, reminding us that in 1941 four of our residents were killed by the white plague. Every five hours some one in Michigan dies from tuberculosis. To save those lives is the purpose of the X-ray clinics which are made possible by Christmas seals.

CHARLEVOIX WINNER IN HOLIDAY GAMES

Defeated Detroit Mavericks 14 to 3 and 11 to 2 Over Weekend

Charlevoix's independent baseball team pounced upon the highly-touted Detroit Mavericks for a pair of victories in the holiday weekend series played here. They chalked up a 14 to 3 win in Saturday's tilt and won Sunday's contest by a 11 to 2 score.

The Detroit team, short-handed because of injuries to four of their players in an auto accident Friday night at Pontiac, were without two regular pitchers and had to borrow from Charlevoix to complete a line-up. Other players were bandaged and taped because of cuts and bruises.

Charlevoix played superb ball Sunday. Saxton, allowing the visitors but two hits was backed by strong fielding and 12 hits by his teammates off Wright, Detroit hurler. In Sunday's tilt, Charlevoix was limited to six hits, but counted 11 runs off three Detroit hurlers. Cihak, pitching for Charlevoix, allowed only three hits.

In what promises to be one of the season's feature contests, Charvoix meets the strong Cheboygan team at south side athletic field next Sunday afternoon. Cheboygan defeated Charlevoix in two of three games last season and the local team is out for revenge.

HUGE SALES TAX MAILINGS BEING PREPARED

Licenses for 1942-43 Will Be Sent Out About July 20

Many hands are working overtime in the state department of revenue these days preparing for the annual mailing of 95,000 books of returns to sales tax licensees for the fiscal year 1942-43. The mailing will be made about July 20 and will weigh 11 tons. Postage will cost the State of Michigan $2,850.

The envelopes will also contain the official licenses for which sales taxpayers have paid one dollar. Old licenses will be honored until the new licenses are received. This is said to be the largest mailing made by any Michigan state department.

This year sales tax returns will also include provision for use tax returns by retailers which are fully explained. Commissioner Nims requests all sales tax licensees to study carefully the requirements for declaring use tax purchases. Act No. 04 of 1037, the use tax law, will be strictly enforced. Taxpayers in the Detroit and Upper Peninsula areas are reminded that hereafter all monthly sales tax returns are to be addressed to the Lansing office of the department of revenue.

arrangement must be made on a year-to-year basis. The school board at Monday night's meeting went on record as favoring this arrangement and discussion of the matter will be encouraged at the annual school meeting.

For 15 years the district has been taxed from 3.5 mills to 7 mills for building debt. This obligation has now been paid. Due to valuation having been lowered during that time from $3,500,000 to $2,700,000, and due to the lowering of total enrollment and lessening of delinquent taxes, the school board will ask permission to spread an extra tax in order to carry on with increasing costs.

With the election of officers and consideration of these important questions, there should be a large turn-out for next Monday night's meeting.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Of interest to all 4-H club members throughout the county is the announcement that the annual county round up will take place at Whiting Park on Wednesday, July 15th, beginning promptly at 10:00. This day will serve to decide the winners of the various judging contests and demonstrations and who will represent our county at the Gaylord Club Camp.

Mr. Rood will be in charge of all the contests and demonstrations that pertain to crops and livestock, while Miss Corbett will handle the clothing, canning and foods contests. With our greatly expanded 4-H club program the largest attendance ever to attend this round up is anticipated.

All club members and club leaders are invited to bring their lunch including table service. It is suggested that each club bring sufficient variety of food to make a potluck dinner. A soft drink will be contributed from our 4-H club funds to supplement the dinner. Delegates will be selected from garden, crops and livestock contests. In the same way delegates will be chosen from the other contests such as canning, foods, and clothing. Parents and friends of club members are cordially invited to attend the activities.

In addition to contests there will be sports so that you may have a real good time.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

As most farmers of Charlevoix county know, there is a critical shortage of terminal warehouse facilities for storage of this year's crop of grain, especially wheat, there being enough wheat now stored for a year's supply. The government is urging farmers to store this year's wheat on their own farms. To facilitate this action, the Commodity Credit Corporation has made contracts for the manufacture of pre-fabricated wood bins which farmers, eligible for commodity loans, can purchase through their county AAA committee. A large bin 12x16x10 foot capacity, 1,610 bushels, costs $205 f. o. b. Bay City, or $225 delivered at local delivery point. They can easily be converted into several bins. A small bin, 8x14x10 foot capacity, 770 bushels, costs $116 f. o. b. Grand Rapids, or $130 delivered to local delivery point.

Any farmer interested in securing these bins may place their order at the AAA office in Boyne City.

It is especially important this year to make the bins you already have rat-tight, clean and dry for the coming harvest. Now is the time to construct additional bins needed in your granaries or barns.

CHERRY FRUIT FLY INSPECTION IS UNDER WAY

Cherry fruit fly inspection is now well under way in Michigan, with 17 inspectors working in 14 counties throughout the cherry belt, it is reported by Leo V. Card, state commissioner of agriculture.

The cherry belt extends from Berrien county through to Charlevoix county. Cherry fruit fly cages are set in the various areas and the inspectors check them daily in order to observe the day when the fly emerges. After the emergence cherry growers are notified to spray their trees in order to protect the crop from infestation.

Inspectors also visit the orchards in their hunt for the fly and samples of fruit are examined in the agricultural department's traveling laboratory to determine if maggots are present.

The inspectors list approved orchards and those that are condemned, and where fruit is found to be infested with fruit by maggots the owners are advised to destroy it as may not be offered for sale.

Because of the early season it is expected the inspection work will require a fewer number of days than in previous years.

THREE ENTER RACE FOR U. S. SENATE

Judge Homer Ferguson, Detroit, In G. O. P. Primary Contest

Judge Homer Ferguson, of Detroit, who has become nationally famous as a one-man grand jury, has announced himself as a candidate for the United States Senate. Elton R. Eaton, Plymouth publisher, and L. K. Smith, of Detroit, a Louisianna henchman of the late Huey Long, are also seeking nomination.

The winner of this primary fight will challenge Democratic Sen. P. M. Brown, of St. Ignace, for the right to represent Michigan with Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, at Washington.

In Michigan, Harry Kelly, Secretary of State, apparently has the unanimous backing of the Republicans for governor; as there does not appear to be any others who will be in the race. However, for Lieutenant-Governor, there are already three announced: Dr. Keyes, of Dearborn, who two years ago was the candidate. Thomas Read, of Shelby, who was defeated in the primary two years ago, and State Sen. D. Hale Brake, of Stanton. Sen. Brake has been in the senate eight years, and appears to have the backing of the Republican organization.

MANY ATTENDED SCHOOL MEETING

BIGGEST TURN-OUT IN YEARS BROUGHT 164 TAXPAYERS

One hundred sixty-four taxpayers, lorgest group in many years, attended the annual meeting of Charlevoix school district No. 1, city and township, Monday evening.

Two directors were elected for 3-year terms. Harold Withers, whose term expired, was chosen over Walker A. Miles to succeed himself. Mr. Miles waa elected to aucceed Carl F. Kohler, other retiring director, who was not a candidate for re-election.

A proposal that the school district cnter contract with St. Mary's church for operation of the parochial school for a period of one ycar, was defeated by a vote of 100 to 03. The proposal had been put forth primarily to relievo patrons of the parochial school from a doubla school maintenance burden as taxpayers of the school district and individual supporters of the parochial unit.

A secoad proposal, providing an additional 2 mill tax for operating expenses, carried by a vote of 120 to 41. A reduction in the tax rate will prevail, however, due to final payment last January of all bonded indebtedness allowing elimination of the school debt levy. Lust year's tax rata for schools was 8.8 mills, while this yenr's, including the extra two mills voted, will be 6.7 mills.

The treasurer's report revealed total recoipts, including balance on hand July 1, 1941, of $49,387.94 and disbursements of $48,047.81, leaving a balance on hand June 30, 1942, of $450.43. The final payments on bonded indebtedness of $11,051, was met January 1, 1942.

Tho secratary and treasurer reports, togother with a statement of receipts and expenditures, will appear in theso columns in the near futura.

One of the outstanding features of the afternoon was a 30-minute diving exhibition by John Nesgaard, who incidently is state amateur diving champion of Wisconsin. Nesgaard, who, together with Wyant Wilson, acted asjudges, thrilled the crowd with some really fancy diving. He has offered his services to instruct local youngsters wishing to learn diving and will be at East Park ot 9:30 Saturday morning for this purpose.

Duc to the success of this initial diving contest, such events will follow on subsequent week ends during the summer.

OCKRANT SPEEDBOAT DESTROYED BY FIRE

One Occupant Soverely Burned; Two Others Uninjured

The 30-foot speedboat "Sirene," owned by William Ockrant, of Cincinnati, Ohio, Charlevoix summer resident, caught fire in Round lake harbor Thursday afternoon from a carburetor backfire and was completely demolished.

Sol Hassenbusch, of St. Joseph, Mo., received severe burns on his legs and back. Other occupants, Miss Elaine Ockrant, daughter of the owner, who was operating the boat, and Miller Weisman, of Detroit, escaped injury. All swam some distance to shore after abandoning the boat.

Library Receivos Aid

The Charlevoix public library today received a check for $63.12 from the State Board of Libraries, according to Miss Minnie Earle Payton, librarian. This represents the final payment on a grant of $112.44 from the general library fund.

"I heard the lady say 'stop'," said the taxi driver.

"Well, she wasn't talking to you."

A lot of water will go over the dam before November election rolls around, but even so, it's not too early to be thinking about a forthcoming ballot proposal to hold a constitutional convention to streamline Michigan's constitution. Perhaps many of our laws do not fit in with the present era, but the trouble usual is that remodeling is carried too far when

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Home rule for Wayne county (Detroit) and a state constitutional convention are two propositions which will appear on the November ballots.

The proposed reapportionment referendum failed to obtain sufficient petition signatures.

Home rule for Michigan's most metropolitan county and a state constitutional convention are two separate, distinct issues. Yet they will be inevitably linked together in the public mind because each seeks to accomplish the same thing: Reform of local government. The Wayne county amendment to the state constitution would effect governmental reforms for Wayne county, with the permission of the rest of the state. The constitutional convention would tackle the same need on a state basis.

And there are signs at hand that rural interests, as represented by the farmers and small town residents, are downright suspicious about any announced plans to streamline their own home-rule.

The rural viewpoint was stated this month by Stanley M. Powell of the Michigan Farm Bureau. Because it illustrates well the issues involved, we are quoting some excerpts of Mr. Powell's statement as follows:

Late in 1941 Governor Van Wagoner appointed a commission of 32 men and women to study our present state constitution and to issue a report advising the people of Michigan as to whether or not the commission would recommend the calling of a constitutional convention to draft a new constitution, or whether there were certain specific amendments which they desired to propose and recommend to the voters.

"Among the 32 members of this commission, there were only a few having a rural background. Those

Four Experimental Plots For Producing Sugar Beet Seed Located In County

This last week four plots have been established in the county to show whether sugar beet aeed can be successfully raised in northern Michigan as a cash crop. Up to the present time all of the seed used by Michigan Sugar Beet growers has come from foriegn countries or from far western states

P. A. Reeve, representing the Michigan Sugar Beet Manufacturers and Crowers Association has observed that sugar beet seed has come through the winter and has made seed in a limited way. He believes that with the natural snow covering in northern Michigan that the seed can be sowed in July, protected through the winter with the natural covering of snow and will make seed the following summer. Realizing that many farmers in northern Michigan are seed minded these plots have been established to determine the feasibility of producing our own seed for the sugar beet growers in southern Michigan. These plots were planted on July 9th at the following locations: Elmer Hott nnd Claude Gilkerson, East Jordan, Charlevoix County Infirmary East Jordan and Rowley Williams, Charlevoix. These plots will be watched carefully and the results made known as they are avnllable. Certainly it will be good news if n new cash crop can be developed in this area.

Cherry Harvest Now In First Stages; Need Pickers

Not only the cherry producers, but also the public in general should be highly pleased over the prospect of a good cherry crop throughout the county. When this paper reaches the public it is expected that the canning factories will be opened and that the cherry harvest will be in its first stages. Certainly the prospects for a good yield of high quality cherries has been greatly increased. Present indications are that the East Jordan canning factory will can around 500 to 000 tons of cherries, which approaches the record yield of 1940.

Best of nll is the news thnt the cherry growers aro to receiva approximately 5c a pound for the fruit. This will be the highest price paid during the last decade for charries except the abnormal yenr of 1041 when practically no cherrios were harvested, and of course, which rasulted in an unusually high price. My contact with growers indicates that at least in the majority of orchards the genornl price will be 30c per lug for picking, which makes cherry picking both profitable and attractive. Now coming to the main point of this article—if you aro availabla and can find the time, hy all means help the cause along by picking cherries. Indications are that there will be a shortage of nvailabla pickers within the next week. You do not have to be experienced to pick cherries. Neither do you hava to be exactly 25 years of ago and physically perfect. Remember, the young, the middle aged and tha old can all do their share with profit to themselves. Your county agant is more than willing to help in making contacts between the growers and the pickers. If interested, the namos of the growers nearest you will be gladly offered. Other services we can render to make the cherry harvest mutually successful will be our bit in this great "Food for Freedom" program. The government has already contracted to buy a large percent of the total crop. The armed forces need these wonderful cherries. Let it be said that the entire crop will ba harvested without any losses. This means that if there is a cherry orchard that lacks pickers, step right up and offer your services and thus help harvest every cherry that should be utilized.

Joe Leu, East Jordan, and Clinton Blanchard, Charlevoix, Stand High In D. H. I. A. Yearly Report

The Northwestern Michigan Dairy Herd Improvement Association yearly report ending June 30, 1942, has been recently compiled by its tester, John Evans. Among the many interesting facts indicated by the summary are that the average cow produced 5,141 pounds of milk, 264 pounds of butterfat and an income over feed costs of $65.41. Also the average cow consumed 7,191 pounds of roughage, 2,018 pounds of grain and produced butterfat at a cost of 18c.

The three highest herds in the Association were the Guernsey herd of 15 cows owned by Joseph Leu, of East Jordan, averaging 8,366 pounds of milk and 381.1 pounds of butterfat; the Guernsey herd of 13.7 cows owned by Edward Wiltse, Ellsworth, with 0,-294 pounds of milk and 362.1 lbs. of butterfat; and the mixed herd of 9.7 cows owned by Clinton Blanchard, Charlevoix, averaging 7,924 pounds of milk and 311.9 pounds of fat.

In the individual cow class the two highest 2-year olds were owned by Joseph Leu and Clinton Blanchard, with 318.5 and 317 lbs. of fat. In the 3-year old class, Glenn Cotton & Son. Kalkaska, and Clinton Blanchard had the two highest with 366.1 and 338.7 lbs. of fat. In the 4-year old class, the two highest were owned by Joseph Leu with 409.9 and 389.6 pounds of fat. In the aged cow class again the two higbest were owned by Clinton Blanchard and Joe Leu with 466.3 and 439.1. In this latter group the Charlevoix County Infirmary came in third with a cow producing 430.9 pounds of butterfat.

We are sorry to state that the D. H. I.A. will be discontinued for the duration. This is due to the fact that it is impossible to obtain a tester and the fact that we are unable to sign up enough herds to make the Association operate successfully. The authorities at Michigan State College are having great difficulty in furnishing testers for the eigbty associations in operation. The big difficulty is that the majority of testers uro within the draft ages and replacements are not obtainable.

Don't waste anything, for that means wasted money. Wasted money is wasted lives in wartime. Every dollar you can save should go toward War Bonds to help your state meet this quota.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Because he and his partner, Cruger, need the money to keep Nicland Airways in business, Alan Slade has agreed to fly a supposed scientist named Frayne to the Anawotto country in search of the breeding ground of the trumpetor swan. Slade's suspicions about Frayne are aroused when he watches the swan-hunter and his partner, Karnell, put their supplies on the plane. They appear to be carrying prospectors' equipment. While in town on an errand Alan goes with Lynn Morlock, daughter of the local doctor, to give first aid treatment to a flyer hurt in a fight. The flyer is Slim Tumstead, who has already lost his license for drinking and who, to Slade's displeasure, appears to know all about Frayne's expedition and about the Lockheed Cruger bought with the money Frayne paid them. During that night the Lockheed is stolen by a masked man who heads north in the plane. Slade, en route to the Anawotto with Frayne and Karnell, runs out of gas and is forced to land near the camp of his prospector friends, Zeke and Minty, whose one interest is gold. Frayne shows no interest in either gold or the black egg-shaped object Minty has just told him is pitchblende.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VII

"It was for this, I take it, that you came into such empty country," Frayne quietly suggested.

Minty laughed.

"Not on your life, stranger. It's only the good old yellow metal'll ever git me and Zeke steamed up to the boilin' point."

"Of course," said the other. He inspected his nails and snapped shut his knife blade. "But there is more of what you call pitchblende in this territory?"

"Oodles of it," chimed in the quavery-voiced Zeke. "The dang stuff bothers us in our strippin'."

"From what you say," observed Frayne, "I assume it to be some sort of mineral. But I remain unenlightened as to either its use or its value."

Minty, however, was not to be sidetracked.

"If you'd been around Great Beer for a spell," that old sourdough was saying as he reached for the egg of pitchblende, "you'd sure have seen 'em scramblin' for this stuff like a she-bear scramblin' for a honey tree. Goin' down through five hundred feet o' rock for it! And then totin' it three thousand miles to that Port Hope plant where it takes sixty tons o' chemicals to git one gram o' what they went out of it!"

The ornithologist's reaction to that statement seemed perfunctory. He merely shifted back a little from the heat of the stove.

"For this, stranger," pursued the indignant Zeke, "is what they git radium from. And radium's worth just thirty-five thousand smackers a gram."

"But such things, my friends, stand remote from the field of my immediate interest," maintained the quiet-voiced ornithologist.

"Same here," concurred Minty, "seein' it takes million-dollar machin'ry to squeeze a pinprick o' color out of a ton-load of ore. And the surface pitchblende in this district, that assay-office sharp reported, ain't as rich in radium as the deep-lyin' Great Bear stuff. What this seems t' have, accordin' to essay, is an overdose o' helium."

"I know what helium is, of course," Frayne admitted with an accruing note of irritation. "But I am not interested in such things."

Slade felt the need of putting in an oar.

"You get more than helium, Minty," he announced, "and more than radium. You get uranium. And, in pitchblends like that, uranium is just about a million times more abundant than radium."

"And what good's uranium?" demanded Minty.

"It's the key," said Slade, "that's going to unlock the new Age of Power."

Frayne's gaze wandered about the cabin.

"You are no longer young," he observed. "Life owes you a little comfort."

She lingered on the rock point and looked up at the aerial migration.

But Slade, as he made his way down to the lake front, was troubled by some small voice of uncertainty that refused to articulate itself.

Then his thoughts went to other things. For on the shore point beside the moored plane he saw the huge figure of Karnell, with the hooded pigeon cage beside him.

"Feeding them, I suppose?" Slade questioned as he bent lower.

At the same time that he saw the cage was empty he heard the guttural voice beside him.

"They got away," mumbled Karnell. "They slipped off, before I could stop them."

Slade studied him for a moment.

"That's just too bad," he observed. And in spite of the quick and hostile glance of the other man he was able to laugh a little.

Yet that sense of being enmeshed in movements that were unpredictable returned to him the next morning when, a brief half-hour after his take-off, his passenger barked out an unexpected command to land.

With one hand Frayne held his binoculars poised; with the other he pointed to a lake that lay off to the left, framed in its encircling crewel of spruce ridges.

"That," he announced, "is where we shall land."

"Why there?" asked Slade.

"I think," said the ornithologist, "I spotted a trumpeter swan."

Slade's one-sided smile seemed an announcement of his doubts as to the truth of that claim. But he remembered Cruger's warning about pilots not being supposed to wonder.

"Okay," said Slade as he turned into the wind and dropped lower. "But you're still a long jump from the Anawotto."

He could hear the mumble of foreign voices as his ship lost headway and drifted slowly in to the shoreline.

He saw the massive-shouldered Karnell wade ashore with an ax in his hand. Two minutes later he could hear the forest stillness ring with the familiar music of an ax blade against tough northern spruce trunks. The sullen giant seemed to know just what was expected of him. In less than half an hour he had his spruce poles trimmed and lashed together in a neatly made landing platform. His movements, Slade observed, were made with the automatic precision one might expect from a military engineer.

Slade sat on a sun-bleached rock and lit a cigarette. He sat there with an achieved air of remoteness, watching the swan-hunter as he made ready to land his equipment. Then the hush pilot's casual gaze wandered out to the empty ridges that ended in an equally empty skyline.

"A nice place to summer," he observed.

Frayne turned and faced him. And when Slade caught the unexpected flash of fire that came from behind the bifocal glasses he realized how some ghostly armistice between him and his passenger had ended. He didn't like the man, and he never would.

"When you are interested in more than engines," that passenger was proclaiming, "you will perhaps learn that uncomfortable localities quite often have undisclosed advantages."

Slade didn't quite know what that proclamation meant. But his smile was condoning as he tossed his cigarette end into the lake and rose to his feet.

"I guess you're right, Doctor," he said with a casualness that carried a note of insolence. "And here's where I pass out of the picture. But before I leave you to your swans' eggs I'd like to tip you off to just one thing. My interest sometimes extends beyond engines."

And this time, apparently, it was the man of science leaning out from the cabin hatch who didn't quite know what the speaker meant.

Lynn could feel spring in the air. Against a softening sky she could see eiders and snow geese, in vees, heading for their breeding tarns between the slowly greening muskegs. Every swale and slough was noisy with mating whistlers and waveys and loons. But that clamorous love-making failed to lighten her heart. Even the sight of her father, mooring his plane between two saddlebacks in Ivluk Inlet, failed to take the cloud from her brooding hazel eyes.

"What's on your mind?" questioned the Flying Padre as he joined her on the rock point.

"I'm worried about Alan," she admitted. "We haven't had a word about him getting out of that Anawotto country."

The Padre laughed.

"That cloud-wrangler can take care of himself," he proclaimed with slightly forced lightness. "I've been shooting out messages from Fort Norman to the Pelly, telling him what supplies to fly in as soon as he's free."

"Then why doesn't he come?"

"He's got his work to do, the same as the rest of us," was the Padre's reply to that. "And here's where we get busy. I've got to change the dressing on Ukeresak's leg wound and pull a couple of teeth for his glamour girl of the igloos."

Lynn watched her father as he strode up to their rough-boarded surgery.

But instead of following him she lingered on the rock point and looked up at the aerial migration above her.

Those relentless wings made her think of the equally relentless advance of the white man, the steady and stubborn northward trek of pioneers in their search for earth's bright-colored metals. It was affecting more than the wild life of the country. It seemed to disrupt both the modes and the mores of the natives, breaking up their tribal traditions and leaving them more and more dependent on the palefaces who took their hunting grounds away from them. Both the Eskimo and the Indian, her work along those scattered littoral villages had taught her, were a perishing people.

Yet she liked these people. They so stubbornly claimed their human right to survive; they stood so valorous in their fight against hunger and cold. They were, she felt, the most courageous people she had ever known. They demanded so little of life that a plug of trade tobacco could make them happy for a week, a mouth-organ could turn a funeral into a fiesta, a bright-colored handkerchief could bring raptness to a sloe-eyed face under its wall-oiled locks.

Lynn recalled the expression of the girl Kogaluk, after bringing her aged father, whose hunting days had been ended by blindness, to the Flying Padre. Old Umanak had undoubtedly lost his vision. But a quick examination by the man of medicine had shown that the blindness was due to cataracts which an operation might remove. The Eskimo girl still had faith in the father whom she had to lead about by the hand, like a child.

"Him good hunter," she had said in her hesitating pidgin-English. "Him always good hunter until two winters ago."

"What would you say," questioned Dr. Morlock, "if I flew him out to Fort Smith and brought him back as good a hunter as ever?"

"I say you work good magic," said the daughter of the wilderness.

But difficulties had interposed. Umanak had no wish to enter the devil-bird of the white doctor and be flown away from his people. Rather than be taken away from the friendly fish smell and the husky howls of his home he would prefer remaining with darkened eyes.

"I could patch the old boy up here," the Padre had explained, "if we only had the equipment."

"Then why not get it?"

"How?"

"Perhaps Alan could fly in with it," Lynn had suggested, coloring a little before her father's smile of comprehension.

"So it's Alan you want?"

"I want to see Umanak cured," she had contended. "And I'd stay on, of course, to look after him."

"Then we'll take a chance," the Flying Padre had agreed.

Africa's Leopard Men avenging their dead King with their claws. The strange Jungle Killers are again on the Hunt with their fearsome masks and steel talons, to wipe out the colonial agents because of the arrest of their ruler, whose death has never been explained. This interesting article by Brian O'Brien appears in The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with next week's Sunday Chicago Herald-American.

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

In order that we may preserve liberty, all of us are sacrificing a measure of freedom-temporarily.

This is only a surface paradox, of course, because the sacrifice of freedom is free and voluntary. It is as old as the concept of liberty. It emerged when the first group of freemen banded together and pledged their all to resist despotism.

Today, we are hedged about increasingly by all manner of restrictions. We can not live as we did in the days of peace, because the things which went to make that full life of peace are needed now for the work of war—a war we must win to preserve our liberty.

Towns, villages, cities, counties and states also have been called upon to make sacrifices, to give up construction and projects which normally might be carried out in the course of progress.

A Bureau of Governmental Requirements, within the War Production Board, must pass upon the needs of some 130,000 governmental units. These needs very from a few dollars worth of paper clips to a$300,000,000 aqueduct for the U. S. A.'s greatest city.

These restrictions mean a saving of thousands of tons of steel, copper, rubber, aluminum, concrete and other materials for the war effort. They mean greater sacrifices for the people whom these improvements would benefit—you and me.

Ships and planes and tanks and guns and shells will win the war. None could be made without steel. Steel, rolled into staunch plates and riveted into hulls of warships and cargo vessels, is the answer to the axis subs—the key to the battle of the oceans.

America's steel industry is doing a job. Last month, the steel industry shipped 1,050,962 net tons of plate, an all-time record and the second successive month in which plate production topped a million tons.

Behind the rising curve of plate production lies a triumph of American ingenuity. Conversion of the automotive industry to war work left many steel mills without a job. These mills had been in the business of rolling thin steel sheets used in motor car production. They were "strip mills". To change from making steel sheets 1-25th of an inch thick to turning out sturdy plates a full inch thick meant heavier equipment, more space and other changes. It has been done—and swiftly. In June, "strip mills", which were not producing a single war plate a few months ago, turned out 489,704 tons

Steel mills require scrap—GET IT IN!

An intensive nation-wide salvage program now is under way. The War production program faces a crisis unless we immediately salvage at least six million tons of scrap iron and steel. This stockpile must be completed before winter.

All non-ferrous metals, fats and greases, rags, manila rope and burlap bags also are needed.

The salvage campaign is so important that it needs the help of every individual, every business, every village and city.

Donald Nelson, WPB Chairman, says, "It is a problem that can be licked only by American initiative, American organization ability, American muscle and the American will to win."

That extra two-pound ration of sugar you'll get (or already have bought) with Ration Stamp No. 7 is a bonus won for you by American shipping which braved axis mines and subs to bring it in—Farm wives also have been granted an extra sugar allowance of half-pound a week for each hired hand boarded on a seasonal basis—A total of 181,500 farm jobs were filled during May by the United States Employment Service—An A-2 preference rating has been given to manufacturers for the purchase of cotton and rayon cloth to be used in making American flags-Long may it wave.

STAMP TAXES

When you consider the origin of this familiar institution, the tame acquiescence with which Americans have come to accept every new "stamp tax" is rather surprising. History-minded people have not yet forgotten the storm which arose in this country in the year of 1765, over the Stamp Act passed by the British Parliament to raise revenue for the mother country in the American colonies. It required the use of stamped paper and stamps for legal and official documents, commercial writings, and so on. Opposition was so intense that the British Parliament soon had to repeal it.

Now we seem to have new issues of federal and state stamp taxes in evergrowing number, scope and cost, and free-born citizens merely groan a little as they lick the nasty things and paste them in their appropriate places.

The famous British tax, it may be recalled, which the British people themselves had to pay, was adopted to help meet the expenses of a costly war. Thus, as the Frenchman said, "the more things change, the more they remain the same."

'42 ATTENDANCE AT STATE PARKS IS OFF

Discloss Heavy Drop Over Fourth of July Holidays

Continuing a decline evident in a one-third reduction on Memorial day, state park attendance on Independence day averaged about half what it was a year ago, the conservation department's parks division discloses.

Sample attendasce figures quoted show the least drop near Detroit, where Cass Lake state park had 12,600 visitors this year as against 19,000 on the same day last year, and on the the west coast, where the much improved Muskegon state park had 15,500 visitors, as compared with 18,500 on the same day in 1941.

Farther from the henvily populated southeast corner of the state the drop was heavier: at Island lake, from 18,200 last year to 8,200 this season; at East Tawas, from 12,000 to 5,100; at Bay City, from 75,000 to 35,000; at Sleeper (Huron) from 13,430 to 3,700; and at Hartwick Pines, from 2,500 to 1,500. In the upper peninsula, attendant at Wells park dropped from 5,500 to 2,500; at Big Spring it was down from 1,750 a year ago to 900; and at Gogebic Lake it fell from 1,000 to 450.

All parks reported fair weather Independence day, but at some park beaches the weter was still too cool for many swimmers. The number of camp permits issued showed a decline proportionate to the decline in day use. Earlier impressions of park superintendents in some parts of the state were that the number of campers would he greater than last year, because of the threat of gasoline rationing.

COUNTY FAIR CANCELLED BY BOARD ACTION

Emmet County and Traverse City Exhibitions Called Off Also

At a meeting of the Charlevoix County Fair Board last Tuesday at East Jordan, it was voted, in accordance with the request of federal officials, to cancel the 1942 county fair.

With the rubber shortage facing the nation, it was decided holding the annual event might be a risky undertaking.

The Emmet county fair at Petoskey and the Norwestern Michigan fair at Traverse City, have been cancelled also.

BOMBER AN HOUR REQUIRES SERVICES 98 OFFICERS EACH DAY

Ford's Willow Run plant will soon achieve the amazing production miracle of a bomber an hour. But these bombers cannot get into the war and help to win it without men to fly them. Each bomber will require a pilot, co-pilot, navigator and bombardier, plus a crew of enlisted men. That means four graduated Aviation Cadets, four officers, for each ship, or a total of ninety-six officers per day. A bomber can be built in an hour but it requires an average of nine months' time to train and graduate each officer needed to ny it! Ford will biuld the bombers—it is up to young America to fly them.

As plane production is speeded up we must speed up the enlistment of Aviation Cadets,, so planes will not have to remain on the ground, and out of the fight, because of the lack of trained manpower. Air power will win for the United Nations, but men as well as pinnes are needed. Boys botween the ages of 18 to 26 inclusive are eligible for Aviation Cadet training. College diplomas are no longer necessary. The District Air Corps Recruiting Station is located on the third floor of the Armory Building, on the corner of Michigan and Ionia, in Grand Rapids. Office hours are daily, except Sunday, from 8:30 until 5:00 o'clock.

CAMP CHARLEVOIX WEEKLY COLUMN

Ken Smith, Camp Scribe

Old Man Weather was right last week when he predicted that warm weather was coming, as the last five days have been hot and ideal for camp program and activities. Things are running at top speed with these hot days making everyone feel that life is worth living and that Camp Charlevoix is the place to live it.

This is certainly far from being a blue Monday, as the day is sunny and hot and the only thing blue around the camp is the water in the lake. If some of you have never seen Lake Charlevoix, you have a real treat in store for you when you come up to visit your son on Dad's Rodeo Day, August 8th. Several of the boys have expressed their thanks for being at such a swell place this summer. The lake is higher this year and it has never been more beautiful.

Last Tuesday afternoon Cabins 13 and 14, under the leadership of Bill Rankin, Chuck Niffenegger and "Bo," the cowboy, took an overnight horse trip to Mt. McSnuby, on Lake Michigan. They had a great time, with even the horses enjoying it, I'm told. The boys on the trip were Sarge Harvoy, Gene Davenport, Bob House, Cary Bachman, Paul Winans, Louis Scher, Robert Daniels, Jim Lewis and Jack Tanner.

Wednesday noon we started the first of the Music Appreciation periods. After the noon meal about ten minutes is given over to the entire dining room—listening to some good music. A short explanation is usually given of the music to be heard and then in the quietness of our dining room, we hear some of the world's great music, which sometimes boys at this age are apt to forego for the popular 'stuff,' Last Wednesday we heard two recordings, "Blue Danube" and "Prayor of Thanksgiving." Several of the boys remarked afterward how much they had enjoyed it, so this is one place where we can do a little education along musical lines. We have been doing this for several years. Wednesday evening the entire camp gathered in the clubhouse to hear Chuck Bach, our swimming instructor, tell two stories. He is one of the best story-tellers (no pun intended) we have ever had in camp and already the boys are asking for more.

Thursday was just the usual day in camp with my own cabin taking to the snipes for its overnight. We spent the night down the lake about ten miles at Young State Park and everyone had a great time. Fritz Steketee, Al Birdsall, Don Korten, John Craig, Jim McGerry, Bill Kampe and Bob Black made the trip, arriving in camp Friday morning.

Friday was a usual day in camp, but Saturday developed into a great day for everyone. In the afternoon the Camp Battle was held up on the athletic field. Bill Rankin, Wes Brashares and their committee were in charge, and it certainly was a well-organized, well-run affair. The Juniors had their own battle and the Greys won there. However, in the Intermediate and Pioneer sections, the story was different, with the Greens gathering the victory in both groups. The hospital didn't receive any patients from the battle, so all were happy. In the evening the first camp dramatics this year were put on and it was the finest show I've ever seen put on by Juniors alone. They were coached by Bob Mackenroth, an assistant counsellor, who did a splendid job. Among the boys in the cast were: the Pryor twins (who had the two leads and did a swell job), Frank Smith, Jimmy Gross, Bill Scher, "Kip" Kipke, Tommy Thompson, Dennis Croghan, Peter Morley, Alan Becker, John Church, David Harding and Rex Emery (who also did a nice job). It was a swell show. Don Neisch explained some Indian sign language and an enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the singing of Taps.

Yesterday morning at the chapel service, Tom Hart (Prof. and Dr., etc., etc.,) gave the talk and it was one of the finest camp talks I have ever heard. He spoke on the subject, "Growing Up" and took as his text "And Jesus grew in wisdom and in stature and in favor with God and Man." The choir sang "Fairest Lord Jesus" as the offertory anthem. It was a most impressive service, held on the porch of the clubhouse, overlooking the lake—a great place, a great place.

In the afternoon several of the boys went into Charlevoix to enter the diving contests, and you'll probably read elsewhere in this paper, the results. Modesty prevents me from rambling on and on over the victories we captured, but do let me say that we took ALL first places and several seconds and thirds. The Juniors took a hike down along the beach to Strawberry Cove, the Intermediates had a free afternoon which developed into a lo-o-o-ng swim, and a hare and hound race, while the Pioneers sailed and swam all afternoon. The dock was a popular place with swimmers and sunbathers.

I suppose that by now you have AUGUST EIGHTH all circled on your calendars. We DO want you to come up that day, so go easy on the tires and the car so that your boy will have the pleasure of having you up here.

Many of you will be sorry to hear that Joe Craig, head of the Junior section, was called into the service last week and it was with much sadness and Godspeed that we sent him on his way. Joe started here six years ago as a camper and came up through being an assistant counsellor, then counsellor, then section head. He left Thursday night during the supper hour and the boys literally deserted their desserts to bid him off, and I'm sure that Joe will remember that sight a long time. He is a mighty fine fellow and Camp Charlevoix will miss him.

Until next week (picture us up here with cool breezes, a fine lake and everyone having a great time. Adios.

DRAFT BOARD SEEKS VOLUNTEERS 1-B MEN

Several Needed to Fill County's August Draft Quota

The Charlevoix County Selective Service Board is now receiving volunteers for army service from the county's list of class 1-B selectees.

Several men are wanted from this county to fill a call for this class of army service and the local board members have expressed hope that enough will volunteer so that none will have to be added to the regular list of men.

MILDRED WITHERS AND JAMES HILLER WERE WED FRIDAY MORNING

Miss Mildred Withers and Pvt. Ernest James Hiller were married Friday morning, July 10, at 9 o'clock, at a simple ceremony performed by Leigh H. Hagle at the Methodist church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Withers, former Charlevoix residents now living in Wyandotte, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hiller, of this city.

Attendants to the couple were Miss Esther West and Lee Hiller, brother of the groom.

A brown and white tailored linen suit was worn by the bride, with white accessories and corsage of red roses. Miss West wore a rose print dress, with pink roses in a corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiller left immediately after the ceremony for a trip to Grand Rapids, Lake Odessa and Detroit. They will reside at the See apartments following their return.

Both bride and groom are graduates of Charlevoix high school, class of 1937 and attended Davenport-McLachlan business school at Grand Rapids. The bride is secretary at Charlevoix high school. Mr. Hiller is now on a month's furlough from the U. S. Army Air Corps, and expects to leave July 29th for Wright Field, Spokane, Wash.

SUGAR CLARITY

Is the sugar situation clearly understood? If not, here's how: Stamp No. 5, for two pounds per person, is good up to July 27th. Then Stamp No. 0 follows for the same amount, good until August 22. These are the regular rations.

Stamp No. 7 may be turned in any time between July 10th and August 22 for the bonus. This is not regular ration nor the canning allowance of 11 pounds per person. Stamp No. 7 gives everybody an extra two pounds.

The rationing is continued for the sake of fairness to all, but a temporary welcome glut is thus divided up and stored on home shelves.

Mud Pies Harm Garden

Farmers could give many Victory Gardners some practical lessons in good soil management. Mud pies in the garden come from cultivating when the soil is too wet. At Michigan State College the horticulturists are suggesting to gardners that they adopt for their cultivating theme the old time tune "Wait till the sun shines, Nellie." Weeds laid low when the blazing sun will hit their roots are easier killed and the soil is not abused by puddling.

Big Game, 1943 Model

One production line not affected by the war is the one that is turning out wildlife in Michigan's north woods, where a bumper crop got a good start in favorable weather this season. This black bear cub, photographed in the woods near Roscommon, is one of the smartest of the woods youngsters. Like unattended fawns, bear cubs ought never to be picked up when found in the woods. They are at home there, and state law protects them from kidnapping.

MORE BEEKEEPERS IN STATE BECAUSE OF SUGAR RATIONING

"If we can't get sugar from the grocer, we'll get honey from the hive." That, apparently, is the slogan of a good many Michigan families that have become beekeepers in order to obtain a supply of honey as a substitute sweetener during the sugar shortage. According to Leo V. Card, state commissioner of agriculture, there are now more than 11,000 registered beekeepers in the state, a gain of about five per cent over a year ago. The increase is attributed largely to a number of persons who have installed two or three colonies of bees in order to get honey for their own use. There has also been an increase in commercial apiaries.

There are nearly 200,000 colonies of bees in Michigan and the yield of honey is between fifteen and twenty million pounds a year. Michigan bees out-produce those of other states.

Honey may be used in a variety of ways in the place of sugar, including cooking and baking and in soft drinks.

MSC Gets $1,000

Six officers of the Allied Seed company of Fort Wayne, Ind., are appreciative of the training they received in farm crops at Michigan State College. So they recently voted to present a check for $1,000 for use by the college in aiding students. The money has been accepted by the State Board of Agriculture and will be administered as a student loan and gift fund, especially for students in agriculture and principally for those studying farm crops. A. L. Bibbins, graduate of 1915, was seconded in the move by vice-presidents L. D. Kurtz, '20, and W. F. Russow, '30; secretary-treasurer C. N. Silcox, '20, and board members John Hammes, '20, and George Wenner, '26. E. L. Anthony, dean of agriculture, and Mr. Bibbins will direct use of the fund.

LAND BANK LOANS TO BE CONTINUED

Land bank commissioner loans for farmers in Charlevoix county, served by the national farm loan association office at Boyne City, will continue to be available for another year, as they have been since 1933, it is stated by H. C. Bedell, secretary-treasurer of the associations in this area.

Legislation signed by President Roosevelt has extended the life of commissioner loans from June 1, 1942, the date when they were to have expired, to June 30, 1943.

Commissioner loans were designed to provide eligible farmers whose credit needs could not be met within the limits of a land bank loan. That they have been of great service to farmers is shown by the fact that in this state there are in round numbers 17,000 loans aggregating $17,000,000. In Charlevoix county alone there are 138 commissioner loans, totaling $135,000.00. They have helped many tenants to become farm owners, and have saved hundreds from foreclosure that could not have been otherwise avoided. Their usual term is 20 years, and the payment schedule provides for complete paying of the debt thru semi-annual payments within that time. These loans are made thru the local national farm loan association office and are serviced in the same way as federal land bank loans.

Recent Gallop poll showed that American production lost 23,000,000 man-days last December thru illness. The poll also revealed that the illness responsible for more lost man-days than any other is the common cold, and that for defense industries 14,000,000 man-days were lost. This lost labor was enough to build 48,000 combat tanks. These figures make obvious the relationship of public health to the war effort.

MICHIGAN COUNCIL OF DEFENSE

To Pick Fruit In Michigan

The Michigan Council of Defense in cooperating with the U. S. Employment Service and U. S. Department of Agriculture War Boards in recruiting an army of pickers to handle the bumper fruit crop of Michigan orchards.

Sour cherries are now being harvested, and other fruits will soon be ripe. With an abundant yield of fruits probably this year, there are indications of a serious labor shortage for the remainder of the harvest season. A large portion of Michigan's fruit crop has been contracted for by the armed forces.

Gaylord Meeting July 22

The second of two "work shop" meetings on Civilian Defense Volunteer Office organization will be held July 22 at Gaylord. Approximately 90 persons attended the first meeting July 8 at Michigan State College, where delegates discussed general problems of civilian defense volunteer recruiting, and swapped ideas on organization. John Dillencourt, representative of the regional Civilian Mobilization office in Chicago, will be the principal speaker at the Gaylord session.

Michigan Leads Region

Michigan continues to set the pace for the Sixth Civilian Defense Region in the training of volunteers, according to a report from regional headquarters. A total of 78,473 protective service workers had completed their training on May 31 or 70 per cent of the number of trained volunteers in the whole region. Michigan's Citizens' Service Corps comprised 87,226 trained personnel, as against 184,782 for the region. Seven counties in the state have 100 per cent of the necessary number of civilian defense workers as estimated by the Office of Civilian Defense, and two others have more than 90 per cent of their quotas.

Vacations For War Work

Two employees of the Wayne County Library—Mrs. Corn Bunte and Mrs. Evelyn Allen—are devoting their 1942 vacations to war work. They offered to spend the month of July on a patriotic "business holiday," touring northern Michigan in the interests of the Victory Book campaign. They will receive no remuneration whatever for travel or other expenses.

Rubber Drive Successful

Michigan residents exceeded the five pounds per person quota in the national rubber drive. Release of exact figures is restricted by government regulation. Exceptional averages include Rockford with 80 pounds per person, Marenisco in the Upper Peninsula with 136 pounds per person, and Beaver Island, whose residents gave an average of 160 pounds. The effort is now being directed toward collection of fats and greases a valuable source of glycerine.

BUY BROILERS NOW TO SAVE ON PORK

The broiler season will be on, July 16 to 25, says an announcement by the Agricultural Marketing Administration.

Michigan food merchants are stressing broilers as a part of the "Victory Food Special" campaign centering attention on certain foods of which there is a surplus. At this season, broilers are at their best, say the authorities, and housewives, by buying now, substituting chicken for pork, can vary the family meat diet, and at the same time save the pork and beef which are so necessary for the men in the armed forces.

The surplus in broilers is a natural result of the current drive to increase the supply of eggs. More chicks were hatched, and as a result, there was a greater number of broilers. By serving broiled or fried chicken, it is expected the surplus can be removed during the time set.

The marketing administration points out that the campaign is good news to Michigan women who set before their families three good meals a day, as chicken, fried or broiled, is not only good food, but one of America's favorites for summertime eating.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

A car of AAA wheat from the Surplus Commodity Corporation was unloaded at the East Jordan Co-Operative elevator last week. This will cost $1.80 per 100 lbs., if farmers supply their own bags. Also, a car of AAA surplus corn is on hand at the Boyne City Co-Operative Company at $1.85 per 100 lbs. Bring your own bags for removal. Inasmuch as congress may ban the sale of these surplus commodities at less than open market price, it will pay farmers to stock up while the supply lasts.

Wheat harvesting will soon be underway. Have you secured your wheat marketing card for 1942? No wheat may be sold without it. Cards may be secured on application at the AAA office in Boyne City.

There are about 1ve and a quarter million trucks and automobiles on farms in this country. We cannot market our crops economically without them. When the present tires are worn out, what will you do? It will be too late then to igure the solution. Do it now. In order to conserve tires, farmers should being to cooperate with their nearest neighborn immediately. Take extra good care of the tires you now have; pool your transportation with your neighbors—double up, and alternate with your neighbors on trips to town. Even if we beat and force Japan out of the Dutch East Indies, to-morrow, (from which came 08% of our rubber supply) we could not procure rubber in any quantity until new trees were set out and grown to size large enough to tap. The other sources of supply, only 2% of our needs, are being enlarged and developed, but we will get none of that for the duration of war--all will go for military needs.

KEEP STOVE CLEAN: IT'S ALL YOU GET

"Your kitchen range, if treated right, will make the work of cooking light," is an old saw that is now being emphasized by home economists at Michigan State College.

With supplies of steel and chromium out for the duration, and supplies for repairs limited, care of the kitchen range becomes more necessary than ever, says the experts. Because the kitchen range is so valuable a part of the household equipment, it must be given special attention. If something goes wrong which the housewife does not know how to "fix" she should call in a repair man as soon as possible.

A few prscautions will add life to the range, and preserves its beauty. Some of these suggestions offered by the home economists are:

Keep your range clean. Give it a quick "once-over" after each use and remove spatters of grease and drops of food. Use soft paper, a dry cloth, or a cloth wrung from hot water for immediate cleaning while the stove it still hot. When the range has cooled, you can clean it more thoroughly.

Use warm, soapy water to clean all surfaces and racks. For spots, use fine cleaning powder or 00 grade steel wool, but never scrape. Wipe off grates, burners, and enclosed surface units after each meal. Wash removable pans beneath surface units as you would any cooking utensil. Wash or wipe off drip trays under the cooking surface whenever necessary.

The broiler compartment needs cleaning after each use and the inside of the oven also when it is grease-spattered or stained. Use a soapy cloth for both, rinse with a cloth wrung from clean water, and dry thoroughly. Also use soap and water on bright metal trim. Polish such trim with a soft, dry cloth. Heating units on a range need special cleaning care, the method depending on whether they are gas or electric.

CAN WITHOUT SUGAR? GRANDMOTHER DID

Grandmother canned her fruit without sugar. So can we, Miss Ruth Griswold, home economics professor at Michigan State College assures.

After all, says Miss Griswold, it is not the sugar that preserves the fruit, it is sterilization that makes it keep or winter use. Although the present outlook for an ample supply of sugar is brighter than it was a few weeks ago, Miss Griswold advises housewives if they wish to be on the safe side, they may can their fruit sugarless.

Crushed or sliced fruit can be heated in a double boiler to draw out the juice, then packed in jars and processed as usual. Juicy fruits, such as berries and cherries may be canned in their own juice. The juice is prepared by crushing, heating and straining the ripe fruit.

When canning fruits that are not juicy, such as peaches, pears and apples, just enough water should be used to cover the fruit.

Where sugar is available in only small amounts, a light syrup may be made, to use instead of the water. In any case, says Miss Griswold, the process is the same.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley

• • • • • • • • • •

Much has been written and said about the probability of a gasoline rationing program being adopted thruout the nation. The only possible necessity for rationing gasoline on a nation-wide basis can be predicated on the need for conservation of our rubber tires which we know cannot be replaced for at least several years unless we can find some quick domestic sources of rubber to supply our annual civilian needs of around 600,000 tons of crude rubber plus an enormous war demand. Even if we should be successful in obtaining several hundred thousand tons of used or reclaimed rubber thru the present rubber salvage campaign our war needs will consume that supply and present reserves on hand.

We hear much in Washington today about the production of synthetic rubber from various bushes or plants such as the Guayle shrub or the Crytostegia bushy vine—sometimes called the Rabbit-bush, and the production of artificial and synthetic rubbers from various other commodities.

Dr. William J. Hale, of Midland, one of the nation's outstanding organic chemists, in testifying recently before the Mines and Mining Committee, of which I am a member, explained the situation in this way:

The question of rubber should be looked upon in a three-fold light. First, natural rubber; second, synthetic rubber, and third, artificial rubber. Natural rubber is a co-polymerization product consisting chiefly of a methyl butadiene. Such rubber is found in the Hevea rubber tree, Guayule and Rabbit-bush. Synthetic rubber is made up chiefly of butadiene itself in co-polymerization with styreno or with acrylic nitrile. The product with styrene is known as Buna-S and that product involving acrylic nitrile is known as Buna-N. These rubbers show a very great resistance to wear and are superior to natural rubber in every respect, save in elasticity, where both natural and synthetic are practically at par. Chemically speaking, Dr. Hale describes synthetic rubber as an approach to the composition of natural rubber and structurally closely related, but carrying no atoms foreign to natural rubber.

The artificial rubbers comprise various assortments of polymerized molecules of which one of the most important classes is Thiokol, manufactuured by the Dow Chemical Co., Midland. Another type is Koroseal, manufactured by the Goodrich Rubber Company of Akron, Ohio, and still another type is Neoprona, manufactured by the Dupont Company. These and quite a few others find particular use, and in various capacities, but with the exception of Neoprene they are not chemically akin to natural rubber oven though they look and act like rubber. For that reason the word artificial in defining them is appropriately used.

Synthetic rubber may be made in a dozen or more ways. The principal method in fact the only method of any consequence up to today—is based upon the dehydration of 1, 3-butylene glycol which arises from the condensation of acetaldehyde with itself, which acetaldhyde in turn may arise dehydrogenation of ethyl alcohol or by the hydration of acetylene obtained from coal or natural gas.

Said Dr. Hale: "Recently it has been proposed by oil interests to set up plants in this country for the dehydrogenation of butane found in certain gases and oils; though little progress has been made in this direction, the powers in Washington have seen fit to set aside 500 million dollars dollars for the purpose, and the oil companies displayed greatest care and concern that this 500 million dollars was not allowed to trickle into industries that might use farm products as a source of alcohol and eventually a source of butadiene; and all of this care and concern on the part of oil companies to divert the entire 500 million dollars into their own pockets, leaves the public quite uninformed on the ridiculous situation. In the entire history of synthetic rubber, not more than 25,000 tons of butadiene have been made from petroleum products whereas over 500,000 tons have been made from alcohol and its congeners. It is to be hoped that in some way this Administration can be induced to speed up the production of butadiene frum farm products. In this way we not only strengthen agriculture as an industry, but we contribute largely to the self-sufficiency of this nation."

Dr Hale believes that 100 million dollars will amply provide for the chemical plants necessary to yield the approximate quantity of 500,000 tons of butadiene, which could be manufactured by the rubber companies into about 700,000 tons of rubber. The rubber companies have already been allotted 150 million dollars for this particular purpose.

Buna-S and Buna-N are fully satisfactory for use in automobile tires, conveyor belts and such other normal uses for rubber that we have known in the past. The Russians were the first to test out the practicability of this rubber to any large extent. All of their synthetic rubber was manufactured from alcohol. The Poles and Germans followed the procedure of the Russians but bettered it in many particulars to such an extent that the Germans in 1934 took out their first patents on Buna-N. American rights for all these patents were handed over to the Standard Oil of New Jersey, but these patents today are open to American industry thru their seizure by the Alien Property Custodian.

In 1938 Germany was able to prepare only about 25,000 tons of synthetic rubber, although she made use in that year of 75,000 tons. The difference naturally was purchased from Great Britain and Holland. In fact, it is reported that the very day before war was declared between Britain and Germany, an entire boatloud of rubber arrived in Hamburg. Since that day, Germany has stepped up her synthetic rubber production to over 100,000 tons per year; and although much of that originally was made from acetylene, we now understand that alcohol made from the potatoes grown in Poland constitutes that first source of supply of the butadiene necessary thereto.

• • • • • • • • • • • •

definitely rural in interests were Clark L. Brody, executive secretary of the Michigan State Farm Bureau, and W. G. Armstrong, master of the Michigan State Grange. Rep. Audley Rawson of Cass City was also appointed, but, although he happens to be a farmer, he probably was chosen on the commission because he is majority floor leader in the House of Representatives."

The commission held its first meeting January 6, 1942. Twelve committees of five members each submitted reports or recommendations on April 7. The final meeting of the commission was on June 23.

Continuing the Farm Bureau statement: "The whole structure of local government in rural areas would probably be drastically remodeled if the commission had its way. It urges removing from the Constitution all reference to Justices of Peace. It would permit cities to form separate counties. It would empower the legislature to merge, dissolve, or disorganize counties in the more sparsely settled sections of the state.

"It would empower the legislature to organize, consolidate, and dissolve townships. Wide latitude as to optional forms of county government was favored by the commission.

"Elimination of the uniformity clause, which has often stood in the way of attempts to modernize our Michigan tax system, was favored unanimously. The commission favored retention of the 15-mill limitation with amendments to facilitate long-term financing of permanent improvements. It recommended that the time limit in the proviso be increased from five to twenty years, and that the two-thirds majority in the proviso be reduced to a bare majority of those voting. These changes might be rather drastic and dangerous when coupled with the other recommendations which propose elimination of the property owning qualifications for voting on school bond issues.

"A provision that the legislature be empowered to enact a graduated income tax was approved."

The commission also recommended, so the Farm Bureau spokesman explains, "a complete shake-up of the Michigan election system."

"Spring election would be abolished entirely, and even school elections would be forced on to the November ballot. Rural spokesmen—attempted to explain that this plan does not seem workable in the farming areas. There are several school districts in most rural townships and the situation is further complicated by fractional school districts.

"The annual school meeting seems the ideal time and place for the election of local school officers. Even if these officers were elected in November, there are other items of business which would properly be transacted at a school meeting."

Terms of most elective state and local officers would be doubled. The governor, lieutenant governor, auditor general and state highway commissioner would be elected to serve four-year terms. The governor would appoint the secretary of state, state treasurer, and attorney general.

A state board of education would select the state superintendent of public instruction to serve a six-year term. Elective state officials would be chosen at the November elections mid-way between presidential elections in what is known as the "off" year.

Substantial increases in salaries for state officials were recommended," says the Farm Bureau leader. "For instance, the salary of the governor would be raised to not less than $15,000 annually, instead of $5,000 a year plus $5,000 for expenses, and that of the other administrative state officials (Lieut. governor, secretary of state, state treasurer, auditor general, attorney general, superintendent of public instruction and state highway commissioner) from $5,000 to not less than $10,000 annually.

"The commission also urged raising the pay of state senators and representatives from $3.00 a day to $3,000 a year."

Domination of upstate by Detroit is feared by farm interests. The commission's approval of the proposed reapportionment (which will not appear on the November ballot) is condemned by the Farm Bureau because it "would give practical control of both branches of the state legislature to the senators and representatives from Wayne county."

Such is the case as presented by the State Farm Bureau. However, Michigan is no longer a rural state. Voters of the industrial centers possess majority control; Wayne, Kent and Genesee counties alone have controlled many political conventions and tipped the scales on election day.

The cities may determine the fate of home rule for Wayne county and the state constitutional convention at the November showdown.

you give the legislature a little rope. The subject will be discussed in future weeks in columns of this paper and it is suggested you read these articles as a means of finding out what could happen and then prepare to see that it don't happen by voting NO.

And speaking of election reminds me that July 21st is the deadline for filing nomination petitions by candidates for county office. There hasn't been much stir on the surface yet, but you can be sure that when there's an election there'll be office seekers.

It seems that about the only bright spot on the local fishing front is that bass are coming good in the channel between Round lake and Lake Charlevoix and on the various grounds in Lake Charlevoix. It's been the leanest year I've ever known for mackinaws in Lake Michigan. Warm weather surely ought to drive the big fellas down into deep water where the wire line trollers can get at them pretty soon.

The Cartiers had a hurry-up family reunion over the week end. With wartime pressure demanding they be back on their jobs in a week's time, Harold managed to get here from New York, while Doc Clair and Stan and their wives came from Grand Rapids.

That's a mighty fine job the U. S. Engineering Department is doing of rebuilding the wooden portion of the Lake Michigan channel entrance piers. A lot of the local boys were sorta disappointed because the north pier isn't being extended a couple hundred feet to form protection for boats entering in a heavy nor'western, but maybe that will be done some time in the near future.

The next time you get bored, buy a can of crushed pineapple and try to fit the pieces together.

URGE SALVAGE RUBBER DRIVE CONTINUE

July 10 Deadline Closed Purchase Plan Only; Need All Rubber

Kenneth M. Burns, chairman of the stato salvage committee, appealed in a public statement Monday for continued cooperation of the public in the rubber salvage drive.

Burns said there has been widespraad misunderstanding that the close Saturday of the specialized campaign in which gasoline filling stations acted as depots to collect and pay for scrap rubber ended the rubber reclamation effort.

"We cannot emphasize too strongly that July 10 merely marked the end of an agreement with the petroleum industry for the use of their facilities for the collection and payment of scrap rubber," his statement said. "Filling stations will no longer purchase scrap rubber at a cent a pound, but will still be available as permanent depots for donations of all scrap metals and rags as well as rubber under the new automotive safety foundation plan."

"If anything," he continued, "the drive should be intensified. The need for this material is as great as ever and only the most accessible part of it has been collected. No one should make the mistake of thinking that all the scrap rubber in the country has been collected in the short drive just concluded. There is a tremendous amount still available."

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL TO BE OFFERED SOON

Training to Be Offered in Welding and Machine Tools

Employed men who desire training in arc and oxy-acetylene welding or machine shop may now obtain necessary training through a program offered by the State Board of Control for vocational education and sponsored by the Petoskey high school.

These courses are financed by federal funds and this training is available to those that desire it at no expense.

Training courses have been conducted in Petoskey high school for the past two years but employed men over twenty-four years of age have not had the opportunity of this training. This restriction is lifted in the organization of supplementary conversion courses and any employable men over seventeen years of age are now eligible for this trainiag.

These classes will be held five nights per week, Monday through Friday, for a four hour period nightly, 7 to 11 p. m.

Anyone desiring this training may enroll now at the general office of Petoskey high school, telephone 2575, or notify T. A. Treloar, Supervisor of National Defense Training Program, telephone 3409.

Classes will be held to a maximum of fifteen trainees and training will start as soon as enrollment is completed and course approved by the State Board of Control for Vocational Education. Experienced welders and machinists will instruct these classes.

These courses are not limited to residents of Petoskey but are available to any employable men desiring this training regardless of their residence.

MAY CALL MARRIED MEN JULY, AUGUST

Those Without Dependents Will Be Drawn If Necessary

Many married men without financially dependent wives may be inducted to meet army quotas during July and August, Col. E. M. Rosecrans, state selective service director has stated in directing local boards on policy in connection with recent amendments to the draft law.

"If local boards cannot fill current quotas from available single men," Rosecrans said, "they must select married registrants and others currently classified in class 1-A, where no real financial dependency exists."

He said that many registrants married after September 16, 1040, when the draft law first became effective, can also expect to be called for service in the near future if local boards are convinced that the registrant married at a time when he was considered available for military service.

Temporary reprieves granted to some married registrants by Col. Rosecrans's order of June 25 are cancelled. Stays of induction were ordered at that time to enable local boards to review such cases in the light of the new congressional policy.

Local boards have been given full authority to disregard priority or order numbers in building up a reserve of single men in category 1 who will be immediately available for military service," Rosecrans said.

PUBLIC LIBRARY RECEIVES STATE CHECK

State Board for Libraries Makes Grant From General Fund

The Charlevoix public library has received a check for $63.12 from the State Board of Libraries, according to Miss Minnia E. Payton, librarian. This represents the final payment on a grant of $112.44 from the general library fund.

A year ago this month Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner signed the bill which made state aid for public libraries legal in Michigan. For the year 1941-42 the legislature has provided $250,000 to improve existing libraries in the state and to develop new services.

These library grants are not "hand-outs," Miss Payton points out. They are a lively incentive to local initiative. To be eligible for its share in the general library fund, Charlevoix public library had to have an appropriation during its last fiscal year preceding July 1, 1041, equal to or more than the average of the last three fiscal years.

CHARLEVOIX MEETS TRAVERSE SUNDAY

Will Be Fourth Game Between Clubs; Lost to Cheboygan

Charlevoix's independent baseball team will again tackle the tough Traverse City outfit at south side ball park next Sunday afternoon.

The two teams have played three games this season, Traverse winning two at home and Charlevoix on their own diamond. The usual close contest is in prospect.

Last Sunday, Charlevoix lost to Cheboygan by a 7 to 4 count. Cheboygan scored five runs on three hits, two walks and two errors in the fifth inning and added runs in the seventh and eighth stanzas. Charlevoix scored three runs in a ninth inning rally that fell short. Charlevoix collected six hits off Perry, Cheboygan hurler, while Cihak was touched for seven.

Sunday's contest will be called at 3 o'clock, the usual hour.

CONSERVATION COMMISSION SETS RULES

No Change In Small Game and Deer Hunting Regulations

The state conservation commission, meeting Monday at Roscommon, voted to keep hunting regulations on deer and small game without change in seasonal dates or bag limits.

It voted, however, at the request of Mason county sportsmen, to prohibit pheasant hunting in that county, while opening Emmet and Cheboygan counties to the shooting of fox and gray squirrels in season.

Three hundred more hunters will be allowed to participate in the special Allegan county deer hunting season, Dec. 1 to 10, for shooting antierless deer as a means of controlling the size of the herd.

Life insurance companies extended financing aid to property owners of the United States in the form of mortgage financing, at the rate of nearly three million dollars each working day in 1041, representing an important contribution to the housing needs of the country.

AMERICAN HEROES DAY IS FRIDAY, JULY 17TH

Climax National Retailers for Victory Drive July 1-31

Friday, July 17, will be celebrated in Charlevoix and throughout the United States as American Heroes Day.

Designated as such by the United States Treasury Department, American Heroes Day will be the climax of the National Retailers for Victory drive, an all-out drive to sell a billion dollars worth of war stamps and bonds during the month of July.

The local American Legion post is in charge of sales of stamps and bonds in Charlevoix for the day. Retail merchants are promoting bond and stamp sales across their counters. American Legion men or their alternatives will man the CSO bond and stamp booth for the day.

Every merchant is asked to keep a record of sales for the day and report to Charles Hamlin, Legion commander.

Flags will be flown all day. The city band is to give a concert in East Park at 8 o'clock.

Citizens are asked to make every effort to purchase war bonds and stamps on Friday, to make American Heroes Day a real success. Although everyone cannot actually do the fighting, all can help by providing funds to assure victory at the earliest possible moment.

CONG. FRED BRADLEY TO SEEK RE-ELECTION

Rogers City Man Announces Candidacy for Congress

Congressman Fred Bradley, of Rogers City, who has represented Michigan 11th district for the past four years, announced that he filed his nominating petitions with the secretary of state Monday, July 0, and will again be a candidate for re-election on the Republican ticket.

Due to Congress remaining in session most of the year and also due to the tire rationing and probable adoption of a nation-wide gasoline rationing program, Congressman Bradley expects it will be rather difficult for him to spend much time in his district this fall for campaign purposes.

He is seeking the privilege of returning to Washington on his past record. He has endeavored to keep the people informed of his stand on the various issues which confronted Congress the past four years through his weekly news releases and weekly radio broadcasts over Sault Ste. Marie's station WSOO.

HUNTING LICENSES ARE BEING PRINTED

Department Still Puzzled On the Status of Fall Hunting

Though hunting pressure this fall is likely to remain a wartime puzzle up to the very opening of the season, the conservation department is printing licenses and back tags enough to accommodate as many hunters as there were in 1940, when 700,000 went gunning for small game and deer.

For resident hunters the department is printing 700,000 small game licenses, 240,000 deer hunting licenses, 2,000 bow and arrow licenses, 5,000 camp permits (good for antlered buck only), and 100 archers' camp permits.

For non-resident hunters, 10,000 limited northern small game licenses, 10,000 all-state small game licenses, 7,000 deer hunting licenses and 200 archers' licenses have been ordered. Fifty thousand trapping license blanks—the usual quota—are being prepared, and more than 1,000,000 game law digests will be printed.

IS UNOPPOSED FOR NOMINATION AS GOVERNOR

Popular Choice Candidate Has Shown Fitness for Leadership By Past Record

Unopposed for the republican nomination for Governor of Michigan, Harry F. Kelly, Secretary of State, officially entered the race when his petitions were filed on Monday, July 20th.

"Kelly is in an enviable position for he did not seek the nomination", said John R. Dethmers of

Harry F. Kelly

Holland, Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, in commenting on the filing. "Popular choice, demanding the selection of Kelly as the Republican standard bearer, was reflected by the unprecedented action of the Republican legislative group, which tendered Kelly a sheaf of letters requesting his consent to lead the party", Dethmers continued.

Michigan's scrap rubber collection, which netted more than 20,000 tons, averaged nearly eight pounds per person, compared with a national average of 3 pounds, Howard Coffin, head of the Petroleum Industry's special committee for the drive, reported to Governor Van Wagoner.

Coffin said some counties averaged more than 17 pounds a person.

"The people of Michigan are to be congratulated for their prompt recognition of this effort and their enthusiastic cooperation in piling up this huge supply of scrap rubber," Van Wagoner said. "It is my hope that this enthusiasm will not be permitted to slacken, now that this special campaign has ended."

In addition to drawing up a formal party platform, the delegates will nominate Republican candidates for secretary of state, state treasurer, attorney general and auditor general.

Venetian Boat Parade Eliminated Because of Fireworks Ban, Add Several Events

Charlevoix's 8th annual water carnival, sponsored by the board of commerce with the Charlevoix Marine Club, will be held Sunday, July 20.

Due to wartime restrictions on fireworks displays, the colorful Venetian boat parade, which has been a major summer entertainment feature here, has been abandoned. The water carnival program, however, has been augmented to provide a full afternoon and evening program.

Water sports events, scheduled at East Park, will open at 3 p. m. Several new features are included in the program this year. Following are the events: Swimming races—juvenile boys, 25 yards; juvenile girls, 25 yards; junior boys and junior girls, 50 yards; senior boys and senior girls, 100 yards; one-fourth mile race, free for all; balloon race for juveniles and juniors; egg and spoon race for juveniles and juniors. Other features include water skiing, model boat race and canoe tilt for senior men.

The evening program opens at 7 o'clock with diving contests for juveniles, juniors and seniors occupying 45 minutes. A deep sea fishing contest for both men and women follows. Men are to bring rod and 30-lb test line, women a bait casting rod and 12-lb. test line.

A band concert will climax the day's program, closing the evening activities.

Entries in all competitive events will be open at the board of commerce information bureau until Saturday evening. Persons desiring to compete may contact Stewart E. Coleman, activities director of the board of commerce.

CHARLEVOIX WINNER OVER TRAVERSE TEAM

Evened Season's Count at Two-All With 9 to 4 Win Sunday

The season's score between Charlevoix and Traverse City was evened at two-all here Sunday when Manager Glen Rose's outfit took the visitors by a 9 to 4 margin.

Charlevoix scored nine runs on 11 hits, while Traverse managed only four scores from eight hits. Cihak and Crowell were the winning battery, McNeil and Chandler the losers. Sommerville and Crowell shared Charlevoix batting honors with three hits each.

Due to the rivalry between the two teams, R. A. Kosnik, Traverse manager, has challenged Charlevoix to a play-off contest on neutral field. The game will likely be played at East Jordan midway in August.

Charlevoix goes next Sunday to Cheboygan with the intention of evening matters for a 7 to 4 loss by Cheboygan here July 12.

Rags make paper; paper makes money; money makes banks; banks make loans; loans make poverty; poverty makes rags.

A neighboring editor states that he has read of a number of ways by which tough meat can be made tender, but the plan he likes the greatest amount of faith in is cutting the meat off the steer a few years younger.

Says Uncle Josh in his "Well By Heck" column; "Roosevelt set the goal for the old rubber campaign at 300,000 tons, but the latest reports show that only 219,000 tons had been collected, so now comes the threat of a possible seizure of all car tires. Why not make up the 81,000 tons they are short by using the 'rubber stamp' men in government employ. Ought to be that many easy, according to accounts."

The ore carrier Buffington,, 600-footer grounded recently on Boulder reef, has been towed into Harbor Springs for minor repairs before being taken to a Chicago shipyard. I understand the captain and first and second mates were "busted" for their part in this million dollar mistake (that's what I'm told the repair bill will be). It is said the Pittsburgh Steamship Co., owners of the vessel, wanted to abandon the ship entirely and, with that idea in mind, stripped the interior of about $60,000 worth of furnishings, before the government stepped in and forced salvage of the vessel so it could be put in commission and fill its very important task of transporting iron ore for war production. The method used to float the big ship was to weld plates having bolt holes in them across the deck and down the sides on each side of the break amidships, then pump the water out of each end and when these ends floated up level, bolt the two broken parts together. Brought up on an even keel, the boat floated off the rock pile. It is understood the boat's engines were unharmed and that she would

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

The ladies, bless 'em, may win the war yet.

No kidding, folks, we're serious about it.

Michigan is in a bad spot, and Uncle Sam isn't doing so good, either.

Michigan has been given more war contracts than the average state. Why? Because the automobile industry, including automotive suppliers in scores of small towns, has demonstrated an ability to produce goods quickly.

Michigan young men are being called to the armed service in increasing numbers. Even husbands are going.

A serious labor shortage looms, and it's high time we started to think about it.

Here is a realistic picture, as we see it, and no punches will be pulled.

We're not out of the woods.

The war isn't won yet.

In fact, we can lose it on the home front—

UNLESS management and labor produce MORE AND MORE airplanes and tanks and other urgently needed arms for our Yanks and our hard-pressed Allies who, incidentally, are doing most of the fighting for us until we are ready to hold our own.

UNLESS a serious shortage of workers in Michigan can be solved in the near future.

This conclusion is inescapable in view of the facts which are readily available.

Michigan's mass production industries have been given a leading responsibility in winning the war on the home front. Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somerville, chief of the army's service of supply, and Lt. Gen. William Knudsen, chief of production, did not visit Michigan this month to extol management and labor. They came, and it might just as well be put bluntly, to plead for MORE production.

As General Somervall phrased it

Pig Costs Vary

Some idea of how to value a young pig as a feeder arises from feed cost figures obtained in trials at Michigan State College. The results are based on efficient, balanced rations fed to parnsite-free hogs. When grain averaged two cents a pound in cost, the first 100 pounds of pig cost 6 cents a pound. It took seven cents a pound to get the average pig from 100 to 200 pounds. It took 8 cents a pound to increase a pig's weight from 200 to 300 pounds. At live pork prices of around 14 cents a pound, the heavyweight hogs mean good business, says E. L. Benton, of the college staff, but hog feeders may not make a profit if they pay too high a price for a young pig.

Certified Seed Potatoes Being Grown By Six Farmers

A recent letter from the Crop Improvement Association gives us the information that six growers of certified seed potatoes have applied for certifiention on 82 acres. This is one less grower than last year but approximately thirteen more acres. In addition to Russet Rurals, there are eight acres of Chippewas and one half acre of Irish Cobblers.

All indications point to a very fine crop. The moist season has brought about rapid development. The vines are strong, healthy and vigorous. The biggest problem that lies ahead will be the control of late blight. While it is too early to have any indications of blight, in the past a wet July usually starts blight, which then becomes serious in late August and September.

The following farmers and their respective acreages are listed with the Crop Improvement Association: Leo Sneathen, Charlevoix, 24 1-2 acres of Russet Rurals and 1-2 acre of Irish Cobblers; H. C. Stephens, Charlevoix, 8 acres of Chippewas and 5 acres of Russet Rurals; Edwin Bradley, Boyne City, 5 acres of Russet Rurals; Donovan Fox, Boyne City, 7 acres of Russet Rurals; Leroy Hardy, Boyne City, 12 acres of Russet Rurals and E. P. Jensen, Walloon Lake, 20 acres of Russet Rurals, makes a total of 82 acres.

Hello Ken:

Sorry I haven't written sooner to thank you for the paper. I sure have been busy. When I left Quantico, Va., I went to San Diego, Calif., from there I went south of the equator and that's where I um now.

It's a small island and boy, is it hot. The mosquitoes work in two shifts, it ruins at least once a day. We have bananas, lemons, coconuts and some other fruit. The natives are friendly, they all wear dresses and none of them wear shoes. Well, I will sign off for now, thanking you again.

Sincerely,

Dear Ken:

Have received the Courier every week and like all the other soldiers I want to tell you that it's a mighty fine paper—and 'tis a swell city it represents.

I am very enthusiastic about army life—we lie around in bed every morning until 5:00 a. m. This of course gives us plenty of time to get washed, dressed, shaved, make our bunks, and polish our shoes by 5:10. By 5:15 we are standing outside for reveille call after which everyone dashes (gropes) our way to the mess hall. Here we have plenty of breakfast consisting of an unidentified liquid and a choice of white or rye crusts.

After gorging ourselves with this delicious repast we waddle our way back to the barrack. Then we have nothing to do until 7:10 a. m. So we just sit around and scrub the latrine, mop floors, wash windows and pick up cigaretto butts and match sticks found anywhere in a radius of 150 feet of the barrack.

Soon the Sarge comes in and safs, "O. K., boys, fall out and line up in the middle of the 'woad," —(he doesn't speak English too fluently). So-o-o—being nice little boys and being used to taking orders (I should be after five years of working at the A. & P. for Dent) we line up.

That begins a busy day at school during which time you take so much code that you swear you're going crazy! School lets out at 2:30 p. m. and the rest of the day is your own excepting for a few minor duties such as follows:

"Calisthenics"—and I love that word—to limber up you do a few simple exercises such as touching your toes with both feet off the ground and grabbing yourself by the hair and holding yourself out at arms length. After half an hour of that and an additional amount of drilling we are free.

Yes, free—but by that time I usually rush to the infirmary, or limp, providing I have athletes' feet, usually 'tie just a cold but in either case the remedy is iodine - - - ! And that really does end the day.

Guess that's about all the dope for this time Ken—thanking you again for the Courier—

I remain
Ex-civilian
Ted Agor

P. S. I sinserely hope you don't believe this tale of woe for 'tis really a falsehood. When a person starts writing or saying things such as I just did we call them "code-happy"!

(And don't believe he does all this stuff in the a. m.—I do it—the goldbricker. His pal??-Chick Gallagher.)

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

The check-up of farms in Charlevoix county, under the "Food for Freedom" program is practically completed in all but one township. In connection with this it is interesting to note that in spite of the drafting into the army of many farm boys, the program is holding to schedule. Some farmers, it is true, have reduced their expected acreages a little due to their sons being drafted, however, on the whole, it now is apparent that Charlevoix county farmers are doing even more than was expected or asked of them. Patriotism is a much used and abused word but that is the only word that really conveys the meaning properly. In spite of the unfavorable weather in May and lack of help, you have shown your patriotism in extra effort and actual deeds. The work, to be sure, as yet is only half done. There is still the harvest to come, but with the spirit shown to date, that will be accomplished and Charlevoix farmers will "go over the Top".

Your home is a "front line" on the war front and the production front. Every dollar you save on your household budget, invested in War Bonds, is a Victory dollar added to your country's quota.

PEACH CANNING SAVES ON SUGAR

Peaches or canning will soon be on the market and even with less sugar available they make a tasty addition to any meal whether fresh or canned.

The home economics extension department at Michigan State College suggests using tested methods in all canning, both for safety and best flavor. Peaches should be ripe but not discolored. Peel and cut in halves or slices. Follow either of the following methods:

1. Simmer in a light syrup for 4 to 8 minutes. Do not cook until soft. Pack in jars by placing halves with pit side down in overlapping layers. Fill jar with hot syrup, adjust tops and process in hot water bath for 15 minutes, or in a heat controlled over at 275 degrees F. or 25 minutes.

2. Pack raw peaches in jars, cover with hot syrup, adjust tops, process in hot water bath for 25 minutes, if fruit is soft, 35 minutes if firm. If processing in a heat controlled over at 275 degree F. allow 35 minutes if fruit is soft, 50 minutes if firm.

The hot pack or number one method has an advantage in preventing the brown discoloration sometimes found in the canned peaches. It is particularly advised if the processing is done in the oven.

Be sure water in the hot water bath is at a jumping boil while time is counted.

Syrup for canning 1942 will be less sweet than in former years but has the advantage of preserving the fresh taste of the fruit.

Home Canning, Extension Bulletin No. 132, may be obtained from the Bulletin Room at Michigan State College at East Lansing. Full directions for canning of fruits and vegetables are contained, with time tables for processing.

Why 60 million Americans can't prove they were born. It's because they are unable to find their birth certificates or any official record in the archives of their home towns. Read about this serious war-time problem in The American Weekly, the magizine distributed with next week's Sunday Chicago Herald-American.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Although he suspects him of being up to something, Alan Slade has agreed to fly a "scientist" named Frayne and his partner, Karnell, to the Anawotto river to look for the breeding ground of the trumpeter swan. Frayne has paid them well enough to enable Alan's partner, Cruger, to buy a Lockheed that will help Nurland Airways meet the crushing competition of the larger companies. Before leaving, Alan helps Lynn Murlock, daughter of the "flying Padre," give first aid treatment to an outcast flyer named Slim Tumstead and learns that Tumstead knows about the plane and about Frayne's expedition. During that night the new plane is stolen by a masked man who heads north. En route to the Anawotto Slade's plane runs out of gas and they spend the night at the cabin of his prospector friends, Zeke and Minty, where Slade keeps a gas cache. Frayne shows no interest in either gold or pitchblende, the latter a newly discovered source of power. But the next morning, when they have been in the air only a short time, Frayne decides to land and stay there on the Kasakana instead of going to the Anawotto. Now, while Alan is on his way back, Lynn and her father are planning to operate on Umanak, a blind Eskimo, in the hope of restoring his sight. Lynn has just suggested that they try to reach Alan and have him bring the supplies they need for the operation.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER VIII

So while the radio searched the Barrens for the whereabouts of Alan Slade the abandoned Iviuk Inlet storeshed had been taken over as an emergency hospitol. It had been scrubbed and disinfected and fitted with a homemade operating table and instrument stand.

Lynn turned from the sea front and walked up the slope to its rough-boarded walls.

She tried to tell herself that it wasn't for the man with the Viking eyes that she was waiting.

No, she stubbornly contended, it wasn't for Alan she was waiting. It was for those needed supplies he was bringing in to them.

Her thoughts, a moment later, went to other things. She crossed to the door, convinced that she had heard the faint and far-off hum of a motor. She scanned the gray-blue sky and searched the long line of the lilac-tinted horizon above the southern muskeg fields. But all she could see was an arrowhead of blue geese winging silently northward.

She was still at the door when she observed that Kogaluk was leading old Umanak through the topek-buddie toward her.

"You hear um?" Kogaluk surprised her by asking.

"Hear what?" questioned the girl, still again searching the horizon.

It was Umanak who answered.

"The devil-bird that comes from nowhere, and go nowhere. I hear um go for two days now."

"What does he mean?" Lynn inquired of the elant-eyed Kogaluk.

The young Eskimo woman found it hard to explain.

"Um a plane, a ghost plane," she finally asserted.

"But your father can't see," Lynn persisted.

"No see," said Umanak. "But hear um. Hear um two, three days now."

"But it couldn't just melt away," said Lynn. "It must have gone somewhere."

Kogaluk's braided head nodded unexpected assent.

"Um go to Echo Harbor," she asserted. "That harbor on sea, full of devil voices. Echo Herbor taboo to our people."

"But what could it do there?"

It was Umanak who answered.

"If Umanak have good eyes him go see. Me no afraid devil voices." He squared his sturdy old shoulders.

"When was the last time you thought you heard this ghost plane?" asked the young white woman. They were, she knew, countless miles away from any possible air route.

"Me hear um today," said Umanak. And he said it with conviction.

Lynn gave some thought to this. She was still trying to persuade herself that these credulous and child-hearted people were merely fabricating a mystery out of something that could and would be quickly reduced to the commonplace.

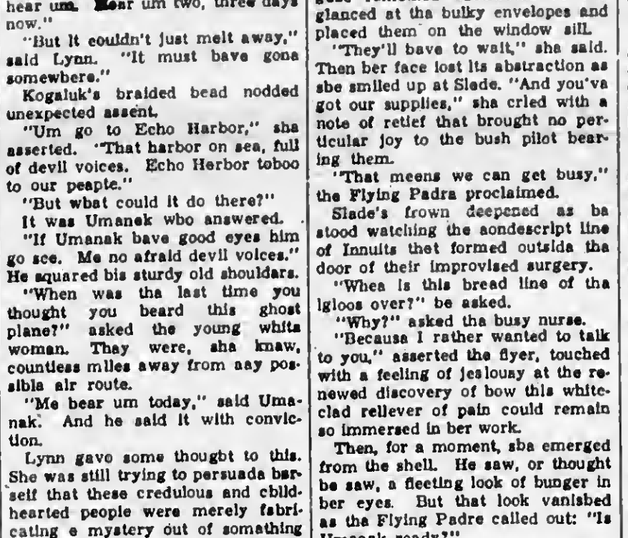
But even as she stood there she could see old Umanak stiffen in his tracks.

"Me hear um now," was his abrupt cry of triumph.

His hearing, apparently, was keener than the others'. For when Lynn stepped forward, with straining ears, she could hear nothing.

"Me hear um," repeated the old Eskimo.

But Lynn disregarded his cry. For as her roasting gaze wandered back and forth along the southern skyline



The young Eskimo woman found it hard to explain. "Um a ghost plane." she caught sight of a small speck that grew bigger as she watched.

"That's no ghost plane, Umanak," she cried. "That's Alan Slade with his Snow-Bell Baby and the supplies we've been waiting for."

The Flying Padre, waiting at the water's edge as Slade came ashore, promptly noted the sense of strain on the bush pilot's face.

"What's wrong?" promptly questioned Padre.

"A bit of bad luck," said Slade. "We've lost our Lockheed."

"A crash?"

The tired face became grim.

"That's what I have to find out." Slade indicated his armful of packages. "I shouldn't be here. But I knew you needed this stuff."

The Flying Padre's smile was an understanding one.

"Yes, Lynn's waiting for it," he casually observed. He also observed that a little of the shadow went from the Viking blue eyes.

"Then she's here?" he asked.

The Padre nodded.

"She'll be anchored here for a couple of weeks with an eye case. But she's been worrying about you."

The gaze of the two men locked for a moment.

Slade was the first to emerge from that moment of abstraction.

"I caught up this mail for you at Yellowknife," he said as he handed letters and papers to the older man.

Slade's eyes rested on that older man, bareheaded and gaunt in the revealing arctic sunlight, as the letters were examined. Lynn was right; her father was not so young as he had once been. Yet if there was any inner weariness there it was masked by a quick decisiveness of movement that spoke of a mind still active and a will still strong.

"These are for Lynn," the Flying Padre was saying as he inspected two bulky envelopes embossed with English stamps.

"They've come a long way," observed Slade.

"Yes, from Barrett. He's at Aldershot now."

Slade felt a little of the warmth go out of the sunlight.

"And these are the drugs and things," he explained as they mounted the knoll to the plain-boarded little surgery.

Slade pushed through the cluster of natives about the door, disturbed by the quicker pounding of his heart. Then he saw Lynn, all in white. She was boiling something in a test tube, over an alcohol lamp.

"Here's Alan," announced her father. "He's brought you two letters from Barrett."

She took the letters, not unconscious that two pair of questioning eyes were resting on her. But her gaze remained abstracted as she glanced at the bulky envelopes and placed them on the window sill.

"They'll have to wait," she said. Then her face lost its abstraction as she smiled up at Slade. "And you've got our supplies," she cried with a note of relief that brought no particular joy to the bush pilot bearing them.

"That means we can get busy," the Flying Padre proclaimed.

Slade's frown deepened as he stood watching the nondescript line of Innuits that formed outside the door of their improvised surgery.

"When is this bread line of the igloos over?" he asked.

"Why?" asked the busy nurse.

"Because I rather wanted to talk to you," asserted the flyer, touched with a feeling of jealousy at the renewed discovery of how this white-clad reliever of pain could remain so immersed in her work.

Then, for a moment, she emerged from the shell. He saw, or thought he saw, a fleeting look of hunger in her eyes. But that look vanished as the Flying Padre called out: "Is Umanak ready?"

"Not yet," she answered.

"Don't you think it's rather worth while?" Lynn questioned.

"I suppose so, trouble-shooter," he responded lightly. It was worth something to be there at her side.

"Then you can help me scrub up old Umanak," Lynn said with a smile. "Dod's going to do that cataractemy on him this morning. And something tells me it's the first hot-water bath he ever had."

"We'll probably have to hold him down," said Slade.

But Umanak, to their surprise, was not averse to his bath.

"Um good," he murmured.

"What kept you late?" Lynn asked as she toweled her patient dry and proceded to robe him in flannelette pajamas that were much too long for him.

"Then you were waiting for me?" he challenged. There was a tinge of hope in his voice.

"For our supplies," was her response.

"I had to swing back to Jackpine Point to refuel," Slade said in a slightly hardened voice. "There's a gas thief loose somewhere in this district. My cache at Wolf Lake was cleaned out."

"But who could have done it?" questioned Lynn. "It's such empty country."

"That's what I intend to find out," Slade told her with determination.

Lynn stood upright, fixed by the sudden thought of the ghost plane. But before that thought was put into words the Flying Padre appeared in his pontifical-looking surgical gown.

"If you've time to sit in on this," he said with one eye on the flyer and one on his waiting instruments, "you can wash up and help. It's a rather interesting bit of work."

"Will the old boy see again?"

"That's what we're counting on," said the man of medicine. "But Umanak speaks a little English, remember."

"Me see the devil-bird that go nowhere after you make eyes good," proclaimed the patient.

There was sureness in the delicate movements of the doctor's fingers, but Slade couldn't rid his mind of the thought that one small slip might mean disaster. One wrong move could mean blindness for life. He was glad when the bandages were about the swarthy-skinned old face, concealing what had been done to it.

"Is that all you do?" Slade inquired. He tried to make the question seem a casual one. But he found himself touched by a new respect for a calling which he had so recently been tempted to disparage.

"That's all we can do," said the Flying Padre, "for the present. But Lynn is going to stay on and look after Umanak. I've a couple of meningitis cases at Cape Morrow that mustn't be neglected."

"And he'll be able to see again?" persisted the skeptic-minded layman.

"Of course he'll see again," was Lynn's low-noted reply as she tucked a warmed four-pointer about her patient.

"Me see devil-bird that go nowhere," murmured Umanak.

Slade stood suddenly arrested by those murmured words. He knew well enough what a devil-bird was to a native.

"What does he mean by that?"

"He keeps saying he can hear a ghost plane, a devil-bird that comes and goes along the coast-line," Lynn explained. "And his daughter Kogaluk claims she's seen it, flying low between here and Echo Harbor."

It was Dr. Morlock who spoke next.

"I suppose," he said as he checked over instruments and bottles and stowed them away in his abraded bag, "you'll be heading south tomorrow?"

Slade crossed to the window and looked out along the empty and interminable skyline.

"No," he said, "I'm not going south tomorrow."

"What are you going to do?" asked Lynn, startled by the grimness of his face.

"I think I'll look into this devil-bird business," he said as his narrowed gaze rested on the horizon.

For just above that horizon he caught sight of a small and ghostlike gnat of silver winging its resolute way southward above the dark line of the muskeg country. It looked as insubstantial as a soap bubble. But Slade, as the silver fleck finally vanished, told himself that he knew a plane when he saw one.

"Where'll that take you?" the Flying Padre was asking.

"I don't know yet," said Slade. "But I've an idea it'll end up somewhere along the Anawotto."

"I'll go down to the plane with you," she said as she joined Slade in the doorway.

When she returned to the knoll-top surgery, a few minutes later, her waiting father detected both a new light in her eyes and a deeper line of thought between her brows. She had the look of a woman who had been kissed and, having been kissed, found the world a different shape.

The Padre's own face took on a deeper line of thought.

"How about Alan?"

Instead of answering, Lynn crossed to the window. There, after a glance out over the empty rock ridges, she took up the two letters lying on the sill.

"Let's see what Barrett has to say," she observed with a forced casualness.

VICTORY GARDENS

Early August is a fine time to plant pansies to bloom during tulip time next spring. A cold frame or a shell corner of the garden is the best place to start them, provided they have fine, loamy soil with plenty of humus, and are shaded during the hottest days. They are easy to grow when a proper bed is prepared for them.

When sowing, spread the seed thinly. Mixing in a small quantity of sand will help to prevent overcrowding. If the seed is overcrowded, the plants will be difficult to disentangle, and space for individual growth is important.

As soon as the seedlings break ground, they should be given full light and fresh air, but care should be taken to prevent them from drying out. This is especially the case in flats where the quantity of soil is small and the consequent rate of evaporation is rapid. During midday, protect them from the sun with a piece of cheesecloth or a canopy of newspaper.

When the first rough leaves appear, transfer the plants into another flat or another row in the cold frame. They should be set about two inches apart if another transplanting is planned. In any case, the plants finally should be four to six inches apart, and left to grow in the cold frame until freezing weather arrives. Then fill up the frame with dry leaves and cover it with the sash or with boards. In severe weather, the sash may be covered with straw mats or a similar covering, but this is not usually needed.

When the frost begins to leave the ground in the spring, the leaves should be taken off the pansy plants and the sash put on the frame. The plants should then be treated the same as any other spring planting.

Tips on Garden Foods

Plant dwarf peas in early August so the pods may mature during the cool fall nights. Sow winter radishes in early August for fall use and winter storage. White Celestial and Black Spinach are good varieties of winter radishes. They make a really tempting dish when served with rye bread and cheese.

Vegetables never taste as good, nor are as good for you, as when freshly gathered. Vitamins are lost from vegetables by standing. For instance, cabbage loses more than half its vitamin C content in two to four days after picking. Similarly, the sugar content of corn and peas drops within a few hours after picking.

Prepare vegetables and salad things just before using. Don't pare and slice potatoes, turnips and the like in advance. Don't shell peas or green limas, nor husk sweet corn until time to cook. Don't shred or chop cabbage, carrots, lettuce, etc., for salad or cooking until you're ready to use them. Cook vegetables in their skins when practical. Save as much of the vegetable's vitamin C content as possible.

Through use of a cold frame, one may have fresh mint late into the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Shores observed the day quietly, with a family dinner at noon and open house for friends during the day.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS WARNING IS GIVEN

Dr. H. Allen Moyer, state health commissioner, urged Michigan parents to call a doctor at once at the first signs of infantile paralysis today, warning that outbreaks of the disease occur most often during the summer and early fall.

Basing his warning on department of health records, Dr. Moyer said that the first stage of the disease, which may come on quickly, is usually indicated by slight fever, general uneasiness and often nausea and vomiting. "Children may complain of stiffness or pain in the back and neck of muscle tenderness," he said.

FEDERAL DUCK RULES ARE SET

GRANT 10-DAY EXTENSION OF HUNTING SEASON

Restrictions Liberalized In Many Instances; Await State Action on Regulations

Secretary of Interoir Harold L. Ickes last Friday announced that 1942 hunting regulations have been relaxed to permit 10 additional days of duck hunting. Other restrictions on duck hunters have been liberalized, but protection of geese has been tightened.

New 70-day duck hunting seasons will begin on September 26, October 15 and November 2 in the northern, intermediate and southern zones, respectively. Duck hunting hours will be from sunrise to sunset, instead of from sunrise to 4:00 p. m. Legally killed birds may be possessed for 30 days after the close of the season, instead of 20 days.

Regulations governing bag and possession limits of ducks and rules governing the means by which ducks may be taken remain unchanged.

For the first time since adoption of the migratory bird treaty act the open seasons apply to all ducks, including the wood duck, which last year was hunted legally in 15 states.

The new regulations continue to prohibit the use of bait or live decoys and "the taking of waterfowl by means, aid, or use of cattle, horses or mules."

Hunters may use shotguns not larger than 10-gauge or bows and arrows as formerly, and the three shell limit on repeating shotguns is continued.

State conservation department officials said Friday that the conservation commission probably would adopt, with few minor exceptions, the extended sunrise to sunset duck hunting regulations announced by the National Wildlife Service.

The commission, if it saw fit, could order a shorter season than the period between September 26 and December 4 authorized by the federal government. It also may reduce bag limits set by federal regulations.

According to H. D. Ruhl, chief of the department's game division, present surveys indicate a "mixed increase" in duck populations this year but a "decline" in some species of geese, including the Canada goose. The bag limit on all but blue geese was reduced from three to two by the federal regulations.

Engineers Hunt For Lost River

Hope to Tap Stream as New Irrigation Supply for Southern Idaho.

BOISE, IDAHO.—Reclamation engineers are hunting a hidden, underground river that courses through southern Idaho in hope of tracking down and tapping its subterranean flow as a new supply for irrigation water.

The Little and Big Lost rivers of east central Idaho are providing the locale for this search by engineers—a treasure hunt they believe may provide water to convert sagebrush prairies into fertile farm country.

The state department of reclamation has sent out a crew to sink a 12-inch test well along the Little Lost river, a stream that rises in the eastern part of the state, joins with the Big Lost river and then disappears into porous lava soil.

Long Channel Indicated.

The water doesn't just disappear, and Reclamation Commissioner E. V. Berg said tests showed that the vast, underground stream runs through almost the breadth of the state.

Water for the underground streams comes from Teton mountain peaks on the upper reaches of the Snake river. It seeps into gravel-like strata and lies between two impervious layers of stone like in a huge basin, Berg explained.

The subterranean stream, Berg believes, runs east to west across the state and empties into the Snake river by way of hundreds of springs near Twin Falls.

Purpose of the tests is to find the course of the main flow of the hidden river, Berg said. When it is located wells may be sunk to siphon off the water and send it through irrigation canals.

Cost to Be Small.

"Actually this underground river acts as a huge reservoir—one which won't cost us a cent to build," the commissioner said. "Our biggest job is to find where most of the water is running. In most cases we believe the water will rise to the surface as in artesian wells, but if not, we can use power pumps.

"Use of this water, now running to waste several yards beneath the surface, will open up a new irrigation supply for Idaho farmers if we can get it running along the top of the ground."

Farmers in the Mud lake area, a section that adjoins the course believed to be followed by the "lost" river, already have utilized water resources of the underground stream.

A large farming section was opened by obtaining water from artesian wells in the area. In most cases, Berg said, the water came to within five feet of the surface. Farmers cut 10-foot deep canals that interconnected the artesian wells and have built up an excellent irrigation system.

Evidence Put Right in Deputy Sheriff's Hands

GREENVILLE, S. C. — "What's going on up there?" demanded Deputy Sheriff A. C. Gossett when, upon entering a suspected bootlegger's house quietly, he observed a pair of legs standing on a platform, the top portion of the body in the attic.

"Don't bother about that," said the partially invisible one, "just hold these for me."

He started passing down fruit jars of illicit whisky.

Gosset waited until all jars were handed down and then set out for headquarters with the attic explorer and the fruits of his exploration.

DUNDEE, SCOTLAND, THANKS RED CROSS

Lettar Received In Appreciation of Socks Sent Last Winter

Mrs. Allen Campbell, chairman of Red Cross works production for Charlevoix county, recently received a letter from Dundee, Scotland, thanking the Charlevoix Red Cross chapter for socks sent there last winter.

Addressed only to "Charle Noix Chapter, Michigan," the lettar had a difficult trip. Sent to London, England, it was marked "Unclaimed," and enclosed in another envelope addressed to the Red Cross chairman of Charlotte, Mich. However, the words "Charle Noix Chapter" were included in the address and as Charlevoix is the only city in the world of this name, the mistaken address was finally concluded to refer to this city. The letter started its journey in January and arrived about two weeks ago.

Following is the letter:

23 Crichton Street,
Dundee.

Rear Friends:

I am writing on behalf of the Women's Volunteer Service (Dundee, Scotland branch) to thank you very sincerely for your gift of socks.

So far this town has fortunately suffered very little from air raids, but we are keeping these gifts against anything that may happen this winter, and we are grateful to you for helping us in this way.

Please convey our thanks to all the members of your chapter who contributed in any way to the making of these gifts for Britain, and tell them that it is very comforting and encouraging for us to know that we have so many good friends in America.

Yours sincerely,
Edith Lee, Secretary.

The Ellsworth cannery, Reid, Murdoch Co., is planning on packing the largest crop in its history this year.—Central Lake Torch.

Besides urging that all coal bins be filled with next winter's supply of coal now the federal Solid Fuels Coordinator is calling for early wood-cutting in areas where wood is available as a substitute for other fuels. Cut long enough in advance to permit drying, fuel wood will be valuable in case of temporary coal shortages later in the year, and will help relieve the burden on the nation's railroad and motor transport system, the Coordinator says.

TO THE VOTERS OF CHARLEVOIX COUNTY:

Announcing my candidacy for County Road Commissioner of Charlevoix County on the Republican Ticket, at the Primary Election, Tuesday, September 15, 1942.

I am interested in promoting a good roads system for Charlevoix County which is necessary to tourists, farmers and consolidated school systems; in fact to all business.

I have had 14 years experience in road building and maintenance.

I am a high school graduate and have also completed a course in highway construction and maintenance at the University of Michigan.

At one time Charlevoix County had the best roads in Northern Michigan and I believe the goal can be obtained again, considering the amount of funds available.

I will greatly appreciate your support for my nomination for County Road Commissionor.

Portable Sawmill Production High

The state's hundreds of small sawmills—as many as 1,000 in all of Michigan, according to some estimates—are producing millions of board feet of lumber in spite of a general scarcity of labor because of the draft and attractive wages in war industries. Many of these mills are set up quickly near small cuttings, like this one in Higgins Lake state forest sawing salvaged windthrown trees. Besides supplying much-needed saw timber for construction, the portable mills, by furnishing lumber for local needs, also are helping relieve the transportation load

CAMP CHARLEVOIX WEEKLY COLUMN

Ken Smith, Camp Scribe

Here we are into the fourth week of camp, and things are really hitting on all fours. Mrs. Charles Lambert of Grosse Pointe was in camp yesterday to visit her son, Chuck, and she suggested that if the weather man obeyed our wishes as well as when we wished for warmer weather, that we wish again, and wish for cooler weather for you folks down state. It has been great weather up here, cooling off enough at night that we needed blankets. . . Just say this, to make you all jealous. . . . .

The Pioneers in cabin 17 walked into town last Monday, took a swim in Lake Michigan, had supper on the beach, then went to the movie to see Charlie Chaplin's "Gold Rush". Bill Kampe, John Craig, Fritz Steketee, Bob Black, Jim McGerry, Don Korten, and Al Birdsall were in the group.

Tuesday dawned a bright sunny day, and we were all pleased at that for several of the cabins planned trips out of camp. Cabin 16 took to the road to town and saw the movie. The boys in cabin 16 were under the leadership of Charlie Bach, and were John Davis, Terry Croghan, Hud Grimes, Bill Kerr, Tom Dancer, Charlie Kinzig, and Bill Usher. . . Cabin 12 with Wes Brashares as the leader took the horses for an overnight trip over to Mt. McSauba and a great time was reported by all. "Beau" our cowboy went along and the boys on the trip were Jim Howlett, Konrad Matthaei, John MacDonnell, Hal Caldwell, Dick Noel, George Dowley, and Louis Scher. . . The entire Junior section took the motor boat and had supper and stayed overnight down the lake at Bear Cove. Chris and Bob MacLenroth and Al Birdsall were incharge of the trip which the following boys enjoyed, Millard and Frederic Pryor, Frank Smith, Jimmie Gross, Bill Scher, "Kip" Kipke, Tommie Thompson, Dennis Croghan, Peter Morley, Alan Becker, David Harding, Rex Emery, and Johnny Church. . . A great day and night for over night trips.

Many were the bright eyes that appeared Wednesday morning, as that was the day of the BIG BOXING SHOW. Coach Wes Brashares had arranged some good matches, the boys were weighed in, and excitement ran high. A training table was set up and the diet of our brawny men was watched very carefully. The men of might and main in the show were; Billy Lutz and Jimmy Fox; Johnny Hunting and Buck Dilion; Hal Caldwell and Gene Chapman; Bud Grimes and Terry Croghan; Millard and Frederic Pryor; "Kip" Kipke and Dennis Croghan; Quay Kinzig and Ernie Evans; Tommy Thompson and Rex Emery George Dowley and Bud Kampe; and Johnny Hunting and Chuck Lambert. From this list headed me, it seems that Johnny Hunting was a definite power that night, with two matches to wade thru. What-in-man Hunting, they call him.

Thursday was a usual camp day with activities and hobbies being run as usual, and a cabin evening at night. . . Cabin evenings give the cabin group a fine chance to cement friendships and these evenings are part of the highlights of the entire camp season.

Friday dawned dark, dreary, and very, very wet. But breakfast in the clubhouse, with a huge fire in the fireplace adding its warmth to the scene, everyone forgot about the weather and things were once more running according to schedule and everyone was happy. This was a regular day in camp with no trips out and nothing out of the ordinary on deck.

However, Saturday dawned hot and sunny and ideal for our being host to Camp Algonquin in the afternoon . . . Our guests arrived about 2:30 (our time) and things immediately got under way. The visitors won the riflery match with Fritz Steketee being the best shot for us. Our riflery team consisted of George Dowley, Howard Kay, Jim McGerry, Fritz Steketee, Bob Mackenroth, and Bill Matheny. . . Our tennis team consisting of Bob Black, John Craig, and Fritz Steketee, lost three matches to none. . . However a different story was told when the final score of the baseball team was compiled. Charlevoix won 38-11. It was a fine game, with Barclay Newell pitching splendid ball for us. Coach Bill Rankin put in the second string team for the final two innings, and the Algonquin gave up the ghost and asked to stop the game. We are all looking forward to a return athletic day over there at their camp sometime in the near future and perhaps we will have more fine scores to announce, I hope, I hope, I hope. . . .

At the Sunday morning chapel service, Wes Brashares gave a fine talk to the boys, a talk which had a lot of good thinking behind it, and a talk from which the boys took a great deal to think about. The afternoon was a free afternoon and from all reports, everyone liked it. The sailboats, canoes, and rowboats were busy, as was the waterfront and the tennis courts. Staff was alert to the wishes of the boys, and the whole "free" afternoon was a huge success. . . . In the evening, Wes Brashares and his committee arranged a Vesper Service in the clubhouse for the entire camp. . . We had a long sing, trying several new songs, and then Charlie Bach gave one of his stories. It was a mighty fine evening program.

Now you can see that camp program is really under way with everyone and everything going strong. . . There is one thing the staff wishes I would mention, and that is the problem created by cookies, candy, popcorn, gum, etc. arriving in camp for the boys. Feeling that the boys get enough sweets in the deserts, plus the candy they are allowed to buy twice a week, and facing the problem of how to distribute food arriving by mail, the staff feels it is more sane and safe to not allow these gifts to be distributed. So you parents will save our office and staff a lot of trouble and time if you will PLEASE refrain from sending gifts of food or candy, etc. etc. etc. . . . The staff also feels that the so-called comic (??) books have no place in a camp where there are plenty of good books to be read. We have a library of over three hundred books and boys will profit more from reading one of these than to spend time reading the cheap "pulp" magazines. So, again, parents, please don't send Jimmie any comic books as it will only create a problem for the staff.

Have you marked August 8th, on your Calendar? You have? Good. I just wanted to remind you of DADS' RODEO DAY, and of course MOTHERS are invited, too. So plan on coming up and spending THAT day with your boy.

Yesterday "Chief's" daughter Jean and her husband Dick Stebing arrived in camp to spend this week. Jean is an old camper, and the former campers were very pleased to see her around here again.

Well, folks, the old bell just rang and the dining room is calling, so until next week, . . . adios.

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

There are bombs in your barn!
There are guns in your garret!
That old flatiron will make two steel helmets to protect the lives of two American soldiers—your boy and your neighbor's; or it will make 30 hand grenades to halt the goose-stepping hordes which would trample freedom beneath its heels.

Of course, you can't beat a flatiron into helmets but it takes scrap to make steel. If we are to keep our steel mills going full blast this winter, we must increase the flow of scrap iron and steel by at least 6,000,000 tons.

Many counties and towns already have had special scrap collections but there still are untold tons of scrap in rural areas. One state with a strong drive collected 44,000 tons of scrap metal. A month later, the campaign was repented—and got 40,000 tons more.

That old plow will produce 100 armor-piercing 75-mm projectiles; or a set of golf clubs will make a machine gun.

Every home should produce 100 pounds of scrap metal. A farm should produce 500 pounds.

Thus a community of 200 farms and 300 additional homes should provide 65 tons—and send three tanks to the fighting front.

An old auto, with an equivalent amount of pig iron, will make 16 17-mm guns, or 27 20-mm aircraft guns, or 30 50-caliber machine guns or 1 1-2 10-inch navy shells or 3 2,000-pound aerial bombs.

Because every day old cars are being sold to graveyards for junking. It is a continuing business and it is desirable to keep the establishments going as producers of scrap. The aim of the War Production Board is to keep this process moving but to speed it up so that every graveyard will scrap each car it buys within 60 days.

The National Salvage Program was launched by the WPB on July 13. More than 12,000 state and local salvage committees, already in existence, have thrown their unified efforts into the program. The iron and steel industry contributed $1,500,000 for a national advertising campaign. Glycerine producers and associated industries are spending another $500,000 to advertise waste fats salvage. The farm implement industry will sponsor "National Scrap Harvest" for collection of scrap from the farms. Army, Navy, and existing government agencies will redouble their salvage efforts. WPA has organized to help with collection and transportation of scrap. State, county and city trucks will help. Members of 4-H Clubs, Future Farmers, and Boy Scouts have enlisted.

If 1 1-4 million tons of scrap were collected from the farms, this would provide the scrap necessary to make (along with an equal part of pig iron):

More than twice as many battleships as there are in the whole world today, or

Enough 2,000-pound bombs to drop 3 per minute from Flying Fortress bombers incessantly for more than 3 years, or Enough 100-pound bombs to drop one every second for every minute of every hour of every day for more than 3 years.

About 50,000 tons of iron and steel were saved for our war effort by the WPB order which limits the amount of such metal which may be used in the construction of caskets, grave vaults, and other products used by undertakers.

There's
of Junk in your home!

In the attic or cellar of the average home there is 130 lbs. of junk. In ordinary times, it would stay there to gather dust. Or it would be destroyed.

But this is war. America needs every single pound of that junk—every pound of scrap metal, scrap rubber, and old rags. It is needed to make ships and shells, tires for jeeps; bombs, shells, guns.

Gather it up today. And then turn it in. Sell it to a junkman. Or give it to a local charity. Remember, your junk can win the war.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

Official Washington and the entire nation is much concerned about the results obtained from the various salvage drives and also much concerned over the drive to sell Series E war bonds. The many conflicting and ill-advised statements emanating from officials in the Capitol, do not help to make these drives successful.

I am proud of the remarkable results obtained in Michigan, especially in our own 11th Congressional district and more especially in my own home county of Presque Isle. Through wholehearted cooperation on the part of everyone, they have achieved a truly remarkable record—one which will challenge any other district and county in the nation. I hope you will pardon my personal pride in that record.

Presque Isle county numbers about 13,000 people. Up to July 10th, it had sent 318 of its stalwart sons into the armed forces in defense of our nation. It had collected 42,000 pounds of scrap paper, much of the credit for which must go to the united efforts of the young boys and girls of the county—the Scouts, 4-H Clubs, Boys Clubs, etc.

It had collected over 500,000 pounds of scrap metal of various kinds; the credit for which must go to the combined effort and cooperation of all the citizenry. It had collected over 420,000 pounds of rubber. One single gasoline dealer alone had collected over 150,000 pounds of scrap rubber, tires, boots, old belting, mats, stair treds, etc., while another had collected 92,000 pounds. These figures you will note indicate that this county collected over 30 pounds of rubber per capita. If that rate of collection had been achieved over the entire nation, it would represent 1,950,000 tons of reclaimed rubber. When the drive started it was variously estimated that we might be able to salvage over the nation anywhere from 300,000 tons up to two million tons. Presque Isle county has met its quota for the higher figure.

It is of interest to note in passing that whereas the drive started off with a rush, when a Western Senator made an ill-advised and most untimely statement — but three days after the drive started—to the effect that the entire drive was a total failure, collection dropped off instantly and the efforts of the salvage committee were almost completely stifled. From that moment on, further such ill-advised statements and unfortunate publicity seeking incidents on the part of official Washington made the committee's problem an uphill struggle against odds. The success of the drive is a tribute to their energy, their determination and their patriotism.

Presque Isle county's record in the bond sales is one of which I am equally proud. In May, the national goal was $500,000,000. Michigan's quota was $21,647,000. Michigan went over the top with sales of $20,240,000. In that same month of May, Presque Isle's quota was $12,000. It went over the top with sales of $23,400. In June the national quota was boosted to $800,000,000, an increase of 33 1-3 percent; while Presque Isle county's quota was increased over 50 percent, to $18,800. Presque Isle county again went over the top with sales of $31,000. For July, the national goal has again been stepped up to one billion dollars—boosted 66 2-3 percent over the May goal. Michigan meanwhile has had its quota stepped up almost 100 percent, to $39,466,000. Consequently, my home county's quota has been raised to $34,000—and increase of almost 300 percent over May. And my guess is that Michigan will again go over the top. I am likewise confident that Presque Isle county will again meet the challenge.

Presque Isle county is typical of the "Spirit of 1942". It has met the test. It has mobilized its men, its resources, its money. Do you wonder that I am proud of my home county, of my Congressional district, of my State, of my Nation? I salute Presque Isle county. You are doing a great job.

AT THE MOVIES

Technicolor Air Drama To Show at Palace

Warner Bros. claims an astonishing number of "firsts" for the Technicolor production, "Captains of the Clouds," scheduled July 26-27 at the Palace Theatre.

"Captains" is the first Technicolor picture for both James Cagney and Brenda Marshall; the first full-length film ever made in the Dominion of Canada; the first picture to show the celebrated Royal Canadian Air Force in action; the first showing American - built planes in war; the first big flying picture since the United States entered the war.

"Pacific Rendezvous"

An Axis spy ring seeking to steal secret military codes and the Navy's subsequent tracking down of the band provides mounting excitement in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Pacific Rendezvous," coming July 28-29 at the Palace Theatre.

Comedy and romance all abundant in the timely story introduces a new team, Jean Rogers and Lee Bowman. Miss Rogers plays the daughter of the special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy. Bowman, appearing as a dashing hero for the first time, is cast as a Lieutennnt in the U. S. Navy.

Kept Her Daughters Chained In The Dark

Dr. Donald A. Laird, writing in The American Weekly with this Sunday's (July 26) issue of The Detroit Sunday Times, discusses the strange case of a kindly woman who kept her daughters prisoners — pointing out there are probably 5,000 other "living skeletons" who are prisoners of mother love revenge, jealously or just plain selfishness. LANSING LETTER in an interview, our present production—as remarkable as it has been and is—still is pitifully inadequate to meet today's very urgent needs. The output, as recorded on paper reports, is enough to justify pessimism at Washington. Yet the spirit of the men—management and labor alike—is enough to justify the utmost optimism in Michigan.

No bombs have fallen on Michigan. We hear no sound of cannons. It is still hard for us to imagine what war is like even though we read about it in the newspapers, hear about it on the radio, and see it on the motion picture screen.

At Washington, said General Somervell, the situation is discouraging. "Until every American man has been fully equipped, every American division has been fully armed, American industry hasn't done the job," he said emphatically, using some colorful cuss words to indicate that he really meant it.

We are still trying to hold ground defensively, to arm our allies while we train and equip our own men, while civilian industry continues to take quantities of raw materials that are desperately needed by the army and navy.

Already, war plants in Michigan have shut down for lack of scrap iron! Raw material is a serious bottleneck in the Middle West, just as shipping is a bottleneck on the seaboard.

Re-tooling of Michigan war plants is still continuing.

Don't let anyone tell you otherwise.

From the best figures which we can obtain, Michigan's available labor supply is wholly inadequate to meet the needs of our war industries between July and December. In Detroit alone approximately 135,000 MORE workers will be needed to fill the jobs of men who will be called into the armed services and to meet the needs of additional machines and the three-shifts-per day production.

Here is the picture, and it is startling in its significance, concerning the need of women in war industries.

Unless women can be recruited voluntarily to man the additional war machines in Michigan war plants, one or more of three things may happen.

1. War contracts will have to be taken from Michigan and given to other areas.

2. Workers will have to be imported from other states.

3. Workers will have to be transferred from non-essential manufacturing employment to essential war work.

The alternative to the above three possibilities, as the war work planners see the situation, apparently rests with the ladies.

It's a radical departura from the role of the women in the kitchen or nursery, but it is a realistic responsibility that is being imposed upon us by dire necessity, so the argument goes. And here's why:

Any large scale importation of labor to Michigan, it is pointed out, would only overtax existing housing facilities, would overcrowd living conditions, would only reduce worker morale, and would also open the gate to a serious post-war relief load.

Utilizing Michigan women-power for Michigan war jobs, as the officials say, would avoid putting new burdens on housing in industrial centers. Women workers would lessen the likelihood of heavy relief loads for imported workers, stranded here at the close of the war.

Well, that's one way of looking at it.

It's not a pleasant outlook. It is another call for sacrifice.

In our opinion the Michigan home-front is far ahead of Washington in its willingness to forego individual pleasures for national security. We're ready for the job. As soon as the leaders at Washington can make their minds what they want us to do, we'll deliver the goods!

Michigan will not fail.

MICHIGAN BELL ASKS CARE IN PHONE USE

Wartime Demands Make Curtailed Civilian Calls Necessary

The Michigan Bell Telephone Company has launched an unprecedented advertising campaign urging greater efficiency in the civilian use of the telephone as an aid to victory.

Pointing out that wires are so congested as to jeopardize the speedy handling of military and war-production calls, George M. Welch, president of the company, has suggested a voluntary program of wartime restraint in telephone usage, highlighted by the suggestion that only the most necessary long distance calls be made during the business day and that brevity be used in both long distance and local telephone conversation.

Other points in the program are:

Long distance service—1. Plan calls in advance to assure brevity. 2. Furnish the operator with the number of the distant telephone to be called. 3. Avoid all but necessary calls to Washington, to which point the lines are overloaded with war messages.

Local service—1. Look up numbers in the telephone directory before calling. 2. Plan calls in advance. 3. Teach children how they can help the war effort by keeping their calls brief.

Never before has the company made such an effort to guide the telephone habits of its subscribers. In the words of President Welch, "In the past, easy, unhampered telephone service has been taken for granted, and properly so.

"Now there is a war to win, and each of us has a patriotic duty to see that our use of the telephone does not interfere with war calls. Though your own line may never be used for war messages, every call you make must pass through a central office switchboard. Many switchboards are crowded with military or industrial calls.

BREAD AND BUTTER

It is interesting to know that with an area of seven per cent of that of the whole earth, and a population also seven per cent of the world's population, the United States has 63 per cent of the world's petroleum, 38 per cent of its iron ore, 34 per cent of its coal, 15 per cent of its sugar, 14 per cent of its wheat and four per cent of its potatoes.

It looks as if Americans could get along. If they fall short of potatoes, they can eat bread, and certainly they can keep warm with the coal.

The petroleum it what gets the easterners down right now. There it is—and here, where they want it, it aint. Nor is there any rubber. Well, hardly any.

But there's butter for the bread, and plenty of fruit, and most of the rest of the world would be quite satisfied just to be able to stay at home and eat plenty of bread and butter, apples, peaches and orangea.

THE RUBBER BATTLE

With all these reports of improved methods for making artificial rubber, surely public authorities and private producers should be settling down and getting on the job in a bigger way. There doesn't appear to be much team work about it, or much haste, either, at Washington or in the rubber factories. Yet here is a situation comparable in importance to the winning or losing of a great battle. It is an industrial battle almost as important as steel production.

There seems to be a curious lack of responsibility, too, on the part of the public. There is somewhat less driving, but millions of drivers are on the road unnecessarily, or running at unnecessary speed, and wearing out existing tires just as if they hadn't a care in the world about such matters.

URGENT

To all Telephone Users

Today the telephone lines are crowded with traffic as never before, and some calls are certain to be delayed.

In the kind of war we are fighting now, telephone communication is a vital necessity. War calls must go through. Every time a military or war production call gets stalled in a traffic jam, the speed of our drive to Victory is slowed down.

The reserve capacity of our lines and equipment, built up for emergencies, is now fully used. And further substantial enlargement of the telephone system to take care of this wartime congestion is impossible because materials are even more urgently needed for tanks, planes and guns.

There is only one solution remaining—more careful and more efficient use of present telephone facilities by all of us.

In the past, easy, unhampered telephone service has been taken for granted, and properly so. Now there is a war to win, and each of us has a patriotic duty to see that our use of the telephone does not interfere with war calls. Though your own line may never be used for war messages, every call you make must pass through a central office switchboard. Many switchboards are crowded with military or industrial calls.

You can help the cause of Victory by putting this list of reminders beside your telephone and making it your guide:

Long Distance Calls

1. Make only the most necessary calls during the business day.
2. Avoid the rush hours. When possible, call before 9 A.M.; between noon and 2 P.M.; between 5 and 7 P.M.; or after 9 P.M.
3. Plan what you want to say, so that the call will be brief.
4. Whenever possible, give the number of the telephone you are calling.
5. Don't call Washington, D.C., unless you must. Trunk lines to the nation's capital are already overloaded with war messages.

Local Calls

1. Try to make your conversations short, and avoid the rush hours.
2. Look up numbers in the telephone directory, so that you won't have to call information.
3. Plan your conversations ahead, and keep paper and pencil handy.
4. Show your children how they can help the war effort by keeping their calls brief.
5. If you share a party-line, be considerate of your neighbors.

Thoughtful use of telephone facilities in these days is a real contribution to the war effort—one that every citizen can make. The Telephone Company will continue to provide the best service possible under present conditions. But now, and for the duration, WAR CALLS COME FIRST.

George M. Welch
President.

proceed under her own power to Chicago with escort. It was quite a salvaging operation, though, despite how simple it all sounds.

If the newspapers ever lose their freedom it will not be through a dictator, but as the result of activities of racketeers.

Statistics released by the conservation department reveal that while Lake Michigan deep sea trolling camp operators pioneered the sport, and therefore have several years' seniority, Lake Saperior operators now out-number them. With Northport and Traverse City leading the way with 34 licensed boats between them, Lake Michigan has 38 aperators. Lake Superior has 40, scattered from Whitefish Point to Black River in Gogebic county.

Saw two fellows, both guests at the Beach Hotel, with a string of 10 nice Lake Charlevoix smallmouth bass Sunday. It was a mighty nice catch with several fish weighing at least 3 pounds apiece. They took them down the north shore of the lake near the Ayres Boal place, I understand. Bass are furnishing the major fishing sport these days.

Gene Alleman's "Lansing Letter", dwelling this week on Michigan's labor situation in connection with the war effort, appears elsewhere in these columns. The picture he portrays is not at all a bright one. I have come to one definite conclusion since reading it. There's going to be necessary more than civilian response to fill the labor shortage if the situation is to be successfully met and Michigan hold its place as the nation's leading state in war implement production. The strangle hold labor unions have on the employment of workers must be loosened. I have been told by local men seeking employment that numerous defense plants do not now maintain an employment office and that in these cases, the first contact the job-seeker must make is with a union headquarters in order to obtain work. One fellow said he was greeted in the employment office of a defense plant by a union representative, who, in a very gruff and uncordial manner, directed him to a union office many blocks away, where he was told that union membership was necessary before he would be given employment (and it the union's price). Many men who do not care to affiliate with a labor union, seek employment in non-defense work rather than have their birthright as free men infringed upon by the dictation of labor leaders. If this war we're fighting is to safeguard democratic principles, then let's make it 100% by protecting the rights of our citizens at home as well as foreigners abroad.

That the wilderness is once again closing in on Charlevoix would seem to be indicated by the recent reports of appearance of deer or their tracks within the city limits. Sidney Lowenstein, of Chicago, has reported discovery of tracks of three deer near his summer home on Michigan avenue. The tracks, presumably those of a buck, doe and fawn, were found on the east ridge of the Lowenstein property, near Mt. McSauby road.

ARCHERY RANGE IS NOW LOCATED AT MT. McSAUBY

Archery enthusiasts are notified by the board of commerce that a range and target for their use is temporarily located at Mt. McSnuby. It is understood the range will later be installed near the municipal golf course clubhouse.

DEFINITE RULES ARE SENT DRAFT BOARDS

Detailed Instruction Issued Recently by Lewis B. Hershey

Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey has sent detailed instructions to local draft boards on the order of inducting men into the armed services to "protect family groups," and listed 34 occupational activities for which registrants may be deferred.

Hershey said bona fide family relations would be safeguarded "as far as possible" in meeting requirements of military manpower and the expanding production lines.

The new dependency classifications, already formulated in general terms by congress to keep family men at home until it is absolutely necessary that they be called, were listed by Hershey in this order o induction:

"Single men with no dependents.

"Single men who do not contribute to the war effort but who have dependents.

"Single men with dependents and who contribute to the war effort.

"Married men who are not engaged in the war effort but who maintain a bona fide family relationship with a wife only.

"Married men (of the same classification) who are engaged in the war effort.

"Married men who are not engaged in a war effort and who maintain bona fide family relations with wife and children, or children only.

"Married men (of the same classification) who are engaged in the war effort.

Thus, single men will be the first called; married war workers with children will be last on the list.

Hershey defined a "bona fide dependency relationship" as one entered into prior to Dec. 8, and at a time when induction was not imminent.

In considering deferment of registrants for occupational reasons, draft boards must determine that they are engaged in one of these activities:

1. Fulfilling a contract for a government agency engaged directly in the war.

2. Performing a governmental service directly concerned with war production.

3. Performing a service directly concerned with providing food, clothing, shelter, health, safety, "or other requisites of the civilian daily life in support of the war effort."

4. Supplying material under subcontracts for any of the above activities.

5. Supplying raw materials or service for the fulfillment of such contracts.

If a registrant is deemed deferable under one af the above activities, the local board will determine if he engages in one of the "essential activities" listed by the war manpower commission.

FROM THE GARDEN CLUB

Do you a porch or terrace that would look 100 per cent better for the addition of a spot of color? Are there, about your home, places where the shade is so deep that nothing will bloom? Do you wake up on Thursdays with a sudden unquenchable thirst to rearrange your garden's color scheme?

If the answer is yes, take courage and note, combine any low annuals, perennials or small trees with an assortment of clay pots and you can have bloom where you want it and when you want it.

The pot gardner has several sources of supply: the garden itself; the florist and nurseryman for well started annuals, perennials and roses in pots at this time of year; a cold frame if you insist on being absolutely independent. None of these potted plants can be beautiful from June to frost, so plan succession of bloom and interest for a week, fortnight or month. Bring plants close to flowering maturity in the frame or sunk in their pots in the garden; then scrub the pots, arrange strategically and discard them when the bloom begins to look shabby. Some may be coddled back into fall bloom in the coldframe; a few small trees or foliage plants can serve as an all season backbone for the brighter things that keep coming along.

Seed of sweet alyssum for August flowers could be sown in 4 inch pots now. For quicker bloom, strong annual seedlings should be transferred to 4 inch pots at once. Ideally, annuals for a pot garden would be started in early spring in a cold frame; seedlings shifted 3 to a 3 inch pot; young plants one to a 3 inch pot; and soon after for display, one to a 4 inch pot.

The effect—the plants, their arrangement, their health and length of life—are up to you, the gardner. Oh, yes, keep wilted flowers nipped og the annuals for prolonged bloom and off all plants for neatness.

CHANGE IS MADE IN NYA PROJECT

TWENTY-SIX COUNTIES FORM NORTHERN UNIT

Mrs. Pearl L. Meads Named Manager for War Training Center for North Michigan

Appointment of Mrs. L. Pearl Meads, af Traverse City, as manager of a new war production training center for the National Youth Administration servicing the upper central half of Michigan has been announced at Lansing by Orin W. Kaye, regional NYA administrator.

Twenty-six counties will be included in the war production unit area which is designed to speed training of young men and women for jobs in the nation's war industries.

The Traverse City war production unit is one of six similar units set up for Michigan as part of a nation wide reorganization of the federal youth agency as a full-fledged war training agency.

In the reorganization, five counties formerly part af the Grand Rapids area have been added to the Traverse City training unit, Mrs. Meads stated. They are Oceana, Mason, Clare, Lake and Osceola. Other counties to be serviced by the Traverse City unit include Manistee, Wexford, Missaukee, Roscommon, Ogemaw, Iosco, Benzie, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Crawford, Oscoda, Alcona, Alpena, Montmorency, Otsego, Antrim, Leelanau, Charlevoix, Emmet, Cheboygan and Presque Isle.

Training facilties to prepare Michigan youth for service in war industries will be expanded under the new program. Shops at Traverse City and Manistee will provide facilities for the training of more than 200 youth daily in machine shop operation, arc and gas welding, foundry work and sheet metal.

All clerical projects, except those providing aid for selective service offices, army posts and the United States Employment Service, and all other projects not directly connected with the war effort have been shut down, Mrs. Meads pointed out. Consolidation of the Petoskey machine shop with the Traverse City and Manistee shops has also been ordered to provide a more compact training program.

At present, placement of NYA-trained workers is averaging close to 75 per cent for all those completing the training course. Young men and women who prior to being enrolled with the NYA had no factory experience are stepping into jobs paying from 75 cents to as high as $1.18 per hour after completion of the training courses, Mrs. Meads said.

All youth between 17 and 24 years of age, inclusive, are eligible for enrollment. While working in NYA shops, youths will be paid $25 per month for production of war goods. At resident centers, youths are paid $30 per month minus deductions for room and board.

Under the new program, production will be stressed equally with training. While learning, all youth will be engaged in actual production work, making various articles for army ordnance depots and arsenals throughout the middle west.

HARRY KELLY TO HEAD GOP PARTY

His acceptance of the nomination was enthusiastically received by the county chairmen over the state, and the general approval of the Republican party was further shown by the lack of opposition in the primary election, Kelly being given a clear track for the governorship.

"Kelly's fitness for leadership in Michigan has been clearly demonstrated since 1931 when as the prosecutor in charge of the grand jury, he rid Wayne county of organized crime; his jury system reform while Assistant Prosecuting Attorney of Wayne county, and particularly during his three and one-half years as Secretary of State, during which time he made a national reputation for efficiency and economy, handling a state department which increased thirty per cent in volume and reducing the personnel from 740 to 450 simultaneously.

"His leadership was further demonstrated in 1939 when as acting Governor of the State of Michigan he won the acclaim of civic leaders and the press in solving the School Appropriation Bill which was considered by all to be a stalemate. His contacts with the Legislature and other branches of state and federal government have proved his diplomacy and statesmanship. He stands today, I am sure, for what the thinking citizens of Michigan want—an efficient, honest and economical government for all the people, with special favors for none", Dethmers concluded.

FOUR PERSONS DROWN EAST JORDAN TRAGEDY

Car Plunged Off Dock Into Lake Charlevoix Friday Morning

Four persons were drowned in the south arm of Lake Charlevoix at 1:15 a. m., Friday when a car in which they were passengers plunged into 18 feet of water off the end af the East Jordan municipal dock.

Capt William Fisher, commander of the Charlevoix coast guard unit, whose men recovered two of the bodies, gave the names of those drowned as Robert Lee, 64; his daughter, Velma, 16; Jayce Grover, 14 and Harry Pruitt, 34, all residing at a wood cutting camp near Bellaire in Antrim county.

The bodies of Lee and Joyce Grover were found in the small sedan, while coast guardsmen under Capt. Fisher recovered the bodies of Velma Lee and Pruitt in dragging operations.

Pruitt, who according to Sheriff Floyd Ikens and Prosecuting Attorney Norman Ance was believed to be driver of the car, apparently mistook the municipal dock, which runs out into the lake from the south end af Spring St., for the street.

The dock is lighted and had a red stop light in its center at the shore approach, Ikens stated.

First indications of the accident were cries for help heard by residents across the lake, who summoned Harry Simmons, East Jordan police chief.

Coroner F. F. McMillan, who conducted an inquest Friday afternoon at East Jordan, rendered a verdict af unavoidable accident.

Besides his wife and daughter, Mr. Lee is survived by eight other children. Joyce Grover is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Grover, living at the camp; one sister and three brothers, while Mr. Pruitt leaves his father, Simon Pruitt, of Johannesburg; a stepmother, three brothers and two sisters.

The bodies of Mr. Lee, his daughter and Mr. Pruitt were taken to the Matthew funeral home in Bellaire. Joyce Grover's body was taken to the Ditan funeral home in Central Lake.

POSTPONE SUNDAY WATER CARNIVAL

EVENT WILL BE CONDUCTED SUNDAY, AUGUST 2

Five Events Run Off Before Rain Sent Spectators and Participants to Shelter

Rain caused postponement Sunday of Charlevoix's 8th annual water carnival after a portion of the program had been conducted.

The event, postponed the second time in eight years because of unfavorable weather, will be held at East Park on Sunday, August 2nd. With a large entry and audience on hand, officials expressed disappointment in having to set the event ahead, but promise a full program, perhaps with additional features, a week hence. Participants who came from far and near for the competitive events were likewise reluctant to see the program cancelled.

Five swimming events were held before showers sent spectators and participants scurrying for cover. Summary of winners in these events follow:

Balloon race—1st, Corky Hart, Chicago; 2nd, Bernard Zeitler, Charlevoix; 3rd, Dick Hardy, Charlevoix.

CROP PROSPECTS IN COUNTY GOOD

MATURING EARLIER THAN IN PREVIOUS YEARS

Hay Harvest Completed Under Handicap Heavy Rains, But Other Prospects Are Fine

Earlier than most seasons and definitely ahead of the past five years, Charlevoix county farmers are seeing their 1942 harvest well underway nnder favorable conditions.

Eliminating cherries from the picture, farm work in the region is reasonably ahead of schedule. Wheat is reedy to cut end oats are turning. The first binder work will probnbly begin within the next ten days.

Corn, while not one of the most important agricultural items by any means, is showing the best progress in many years. Many fields are already too far advanced to permit further row cultivation.

Apples and pears, as well as peaches, show ovidence of plenty nnd with no unusual condltions such as storms nnd drought, there will undoubtedly be an excellent fruit harvest this fnll.

Second in importance to cherries in the agricultural field is potatoes. Most farmers report that early varieties are already setting unusually well and the fact that the region has had plenty of raln should contribute to nn abundance of this staple item. Late potatoes, in many instances planted later than usual, nre showing good color and growth.

Hay crops have been harvested under severe handicap this season due ta the frequent rainfall. Farmers have been urged to use alfalfa for silo material nnd rely on other sources for their hny supply. Corn has been suggested as a very logical substitute. Despite the difficulty in cutting and curing hay, there are indications that there will be a plentiful supply for the wintor.

MILKWEED SURVEY COMPLETED

PLANS FOR FACTORY AT PETOSKEY PROGRESSING

Machinery for U. S. Navy Plant Is Contracted For; Survey Reveals Plentiful Milkweed

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

Efforts to organize the milkweed factory at Petoskey are rapidly coming to a successful conclusion.

Location of the plant has been decided apon and delivery of the machinery necessary to process milkweeds has been contracted. J. M. Batchelor, soil conservationist, U. S. D. A., has been in the Petoskey area for nearly a week making surveys of the area and in obtaining necessary data for the Navy department at Washington. Last Friday all sections of Charlevoix county were visited and a rather careful check made on the acreage of milkweeds that could be harvested with profit. In fact, one hundred fifteen miles were driven in all areas so that a pretty good estimate can be made.

In the survey the thickness of the stand was the first determination. A stand of one milkweed to each square foot is considered good; one to four square feet is medium, and one to eight square feet is fair. Mr. Batchelor stated that a farmer could expect to harvest about 250 pounds of pods to the acre on the fair stand, about 500 pounds on a medium stand and approximately one ton where the stand was good. Also it takes about six pounds of pods (green weight) to make one pound of floss.

The milkweed in all likelihood will be picked the last week in August and the early part of September. The pods will be placed in fifty pound sacks and those sacks must be hung up in barns, granaries, and other farm buildings in such a way as to allow

LEGION ASKS RECORDS FOR MEN IN SERVICE

Old Phonograph Records Will be Used to Make New Ones

Anyone who has old phonograph records is urged to give them to the American Legion and Auxiliary's collection of old records which are to be melted down, recast and made into new records for entertainment of men in the armed forces.

The H. C. Wilson Auto Electric Service garage on Antrim street is headquarters for the local collection. A number of records have been turned in there, but many more are needed. Broken, scratched and chipped records are acceptable.

4-H CLUB CAMP OPENS AUGUST 3

THIRTY DELEGATED FROM CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

Week at Gaylord Camp Under State Supervision In Store for County Champions

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

The annual 4-H Club camp to be held August 3-7 at Gaylord, gives every indication of being one of the best ever.

With the 4-H club program increased in every county, it is expected that around 500 members will be in attendance for the entire week. The camp is supervised by members of the state 4-H club staff, district 4-H club agents and local leaders.

Each county is allotted a certain number of club members. Charlevoix's allotment is thirty, plus winners of judging and demonstration team contests. The delegation will leave by bus from the East Jordan high school at 1:00; Boyne City postoffice at 1:30 and Boyne Falls (DeNise's) gas station at 1:45. The group will return Friday afternoon.

The 4-H club program has been greatly increased in Charlevoix county this year. In the first place our county 4-H Club Council made up of some twenty-five local leaders, has been very active. We have fifty local leaders who are actually directing the activities of club members. We have four hundred fifty-seven club member projects being carried on. In the garden project alone there are 210 members. In 4-H dairy work there are sixty-five. Other projects being completed include canning, food preparation, potatoes, corn, beans, forestry, poultry, swine and commercial garden.

COAST GUARD REGULATION CHANGES

NEW TYPE IDENTIFICATION CARD IS REQUIRED

New Regulations Outlined for Benefit Boat Operators; Require Application at Once

Louis Mosler, officer in charge of the U. S. Coast Guard anchorage office for this district, has announced that new regulations require a new type of Coast Guard identification card.

He announced that in order to obtain these cards a new application must be made out and the old card turned in. Two new pictures, size 1 3-4x1 3-8 inches, front view, will be required. Photos must be without head gear and identical. A new set of fingerprints will not be necessary.

Unless unforseen emergency arises, Patrol Boat C. G. R. 1608 will be at the following places to take application for these new type cards: Every day except Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 4 p. m. to 7 p. m. at city dock, Charlevoix; Wednesdays at sheriff's office, Petoskey, from 2 to 5 p. m.; Harbor Springs city dock from 5 to 8 p. m. Tuesdays and 8 a. m. to noon Wednesdays.

Anyone holding a white identification card must turn it in at once. Anyone holding a yellow card must turn it in if they expect to use it after the next few weeks. Persons who are waiting to receive cards and now have temporary permits should report at the C. G. R. 1608 as soon as possible to make application for the new type cards.

None of the old type cards are now being issued and temporary permits will not be accepted after their expiration date, Officer Mosler explained.

BOYS 18-20 SAID BE CERTAIN OF DRAFT

Young Married Men Are Subject to Call Says Sec'y. Stimson

The drafting of young married men and boys 18 and 19 years old was depicted as an eventual certainty recently by Henry L. Stimson, the secretary of war.

Men in those groups "should not feel it necessary to alter their plans for the immediate future," he said at a press conference. But they should, however, remember that "we have never had a great war in which we did not find it necessary to call up both classes."

Selective service officials estimated that there are about 1,200,000 men in each yearly age group. Originally, they figured that after deferring men with dependents and weeding out the physically unfit, about 50 per cent of each group would be acceptable for military service. Since then, however, physical requirements have been relaxed to some extent, and men with minor physical impairments have been drafted for non-combat service.

Thus, in the 18 and 19 year age pool, the army has a reserve strength of considerably more than 1,200,000.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

This would be a great country if all the political parties lived up to their platforms—if all the lodges adhered to their rituals—if all the Christians lived by their creeds.

The appearance of aeroplanes not so many weeks ago was commonplace and created little if any above ordinary interest. But now, with wartime restrictions on travel of both private and commercial planes, the sight of one in these parts has become exceedingly rare. Thus the flight of two over this city Saturday evening was something to remark about as was such an incident back in the early days of aviation.

The gradual drop from time to time in the minimum salary level requiring payment of federal income tax reminds us of the old tale of the dog owner who cut off the tail of his pet an inch at a time so it wouldn't hurt so much.

Quite a few mackinaw trout were taken over the week end off South Point in Lake Michigan. Let's all hope hard that it was not just a spurt, but the real thing for the remainder of the summer and fall. Clothier's boats took one Saturday and two Sunday, Clare Staley picked up two and Bob Withers a 10-pounder, so I'm told. That's more fish in two days than have been taken any week so far this year and if it keeps up will provide lots of sport for our summer residents and no doubt attract down-staters who like to fish at Charlevoix. The bass fishing in Lake Charlevoix is still tops in angling with excellent catches being made daily. Saw two strings, one, eight and the other nine smallmouth brought in Sunday at Ironton.

I would venture to say that Charlevoix, for a city of its size, has more miles of improved streets than most towns. I just learned the other day that we have 13.02 miles of macadam-surfaced thoroughfares. And just between you and I, if you happen to live on

How much do you know about Michigan history?

As a mid-summer diversion from the war, we suggest that you deduct five points for each question you miss out of the twenty questions listed below. To get a grade of 70, don't miss more than six of them.—Editor's Note.

DID YOU KNOW—

1. That Marquette started the first permanent settlement in Michigan at Sault Ste. Marie? This was in 1668 under the French flag.

2. That the first voyage ever made by a sailing vessel upon Lake Erie or the upper lakes was made by LaSalle, the great French explorer, in the "Griffin"? This was in the year 1679.

3. That John Jacob Astor founded the American Fur Company with headquarters on Mackinac Island? Profits from beaver skins were invested in New York real estate.

4. That the Indian massacre of Fort Michillimackinac occurred during the famous Pontiac conspiracy to drive the British from the Great Lakes?

5. That Detroit (French for "place of the strait") was held by the British twenty years after the Declaration was signed?

6. That Michigan obtained the Upper Peninsula in exchange for Toledo and other land in Ohio as a result of the so-called Michigan-Ohio war of 1835?

7. That Michigan was admitted into the Union in 1837? Stevens T. Mason of Virginia had been elected governor of Michigan in 1835.

8. That "Port Sheldon" near Grand Haven, "Brest" near Monroe, and "Singapore" in Allegan county were "paper towns" where wild-cat banks issued their own bank notes and swindled thousands of persons in the East?

9. That the State of Michigan started to build three railroads, the Michigan Southern, the Mich-

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

O. I. Gregg, Landscaping Specialist, Scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 4

O. I. Gregg, landscaping specialist from Michigan State College, has been scheduled to spend Tuesday, August 4th in this county. Up to the present time we have had one request for a landscaping outline. We can handle about two more plans. The afternoon will be spent largely in conducting a flower tour in the city of Charlevoix. This tour is being arranged by the Charlevoix Garden Club. The schedule of visits will be found in the Charlevoix Courier.

Mr. Gregg has been responsible for many landscaping projects in this county. Already over one hundred farm homes and community projects have been beautified. It doesn't take much money to make the home more beautiful and more attractive. The first requirement is having the desire and the second is ambition to carry out a plan of improvement. Fortunately we are blessed in this area in having a multitude of native shrubbery and trees which lend themselves nicely to landscaping activity. Many locations can be seen where the cost of the improvement has only been ten or fifteen dollars but yet a wonderful change has been made in the attractiveness of the home. Let us know at once if you want a landscaping outline for your home. We will do what can be done next week Tuesday and, perhaps, make plans for completion of the outlines next winter.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: To help save Norland Airways from bankruptcy Alan Slade agrees to fly a so-called scientist named Frayne and his assistant, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the breeding ground of the trumpeter swan. Slade is suspicious of Frayne, who has nevertheless paid them enough to enable Cruger, Slade's partner, to buy a new Lockheed. Just before leaving he goes with Lynn Morlock, daughter of the local doctor, to give first aid treatment to a flyer named Slim Tumstead. Slade is not pleased to learn that Tumstead, an outcast flyer who has lost his license for drinking, knows about the new place and about Frayne's expedition. That night the Lockheed is stolen by a masked thief who heads north. On the way to the Anawotto with Frayne and Karnell, Slade runs out of gas, and they are forced to spend the night at the cabin of Slade's prospector friends, Zeke and Minty, where Slade keeps a gas cache. Frayne shows no interest in the fact that the surrounding country is rich in pitchblende, source of a new kind of power. But the next morning Frayne decides to stay near there and not go on to the Anawotto. While Slade is on the way back, Lyne Morlock's father decides to operate on the blind Eskimo, Umanak, in the hope of restoring his eyesight. Umanak is anxious to see again so he can hunt the "devil bird" he hears. Slade has returned, the operation is over, and he and Lynn are talking. She has received a letter from Barrett Walden who, for Lynn's sake, has offered her father a job in Ottawa. Lyne feels that his frontier work is too hard for him.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER IX

Her father watched her as she read the closely written pages. It came home to him as he studied the stooping figure in white, the vital young figure with its ripening lines of womanhood, that they could not always be together.

"How about Alan?" he repeated as the girl in white looked up from her letter.

"Barrett's been pulling wires again," she observed without meeting her father's eye.

"For whom?" was the Padre's prompt demand.

"For you," said the girl with the letter. "He writes that he's had a cable from the Minister and there's an opening for you in the Department of Timber and Mines. He says it's a grand chance for somebody in the know to co-ordinate the medical care of miners."

The Flying Padre's face hardened a little.

"And who asked Barrett to pull wires for me?" he demanded.

"But you might remember you don't own this country."

"It was his own idea," acknowledged Lynn. "But he naturally held back until he knew I agreed with him."

The stooping shoulders stiffened.

"No," he said with conviction. "I can't go to seed. Not yet."

Lynn looked at him for a moment or two of silence.

"Barrett," she said, "will be disappointed."

Her father swung about on her. "You know, of course, why he's doing all this?"

"I was only thinking of you, Ded," she said as she leaned against his towering shoulder.

He lifted her head and looked into her face.

"But there's always a string to errengemsnts like that. And in this case that string would be you." She attempted a protest against that, but he stopped her. "Barrett's a good egg. I like him a lot. And I don't blame him for being in love with you. But I happen to know you're not in love with him."

"Would that be so important?" she asked.

He stroked the cropped head that looked so boylike and yet remained so womanly.

"You're not such a bad egg yourself," he said with a stabilizing sort of gruffness. "I happen to know something that you've got tucked away in that lopsided heart of yours. And I'm not going to sell my girl's happiness for an old-age pension and a berth in Barrett Walden's Department of Timber and Mines."

Slade, after checking over a series of uncertainties, decided to head for Echo Harbor. Cruger, back at Waterways, had told him to follow up any clue that showed itself. And this shadowy plane that had been seen flitting between tidewater and some unknown hinterland base was worth looking into.

That base, Slade acknowledged, may have been unknown; but he had a theory or two of his own which, he felt, kept his quest from being entirely a wild-goose chase. He knew well enough the vastness of the country over which he was flying, with here and there only a lime-bleached Eskimo cairn to mark its destitution. And to look for a plane in that tangle of river and muskeg, of ice-scored bluffs and starveling tree growth, seemed very much like looking for a needle in a haystack.

He was further depressed by the discovery that a sea-fog, rolling in from the Arctic Ocean, was cutting off his view of the broken coastline. Where he should have found Echo Harbor he saw only a blanket of gray mist. So he turned south and winged his way into the clear, sweeping the horizon with his glasses as he went. But still no sign of life came to him.

This section of the sub-arctics, he felt as he stared about him, had for obvious reasons remained overlooked. If there was mineral in those lonely grey ridges below him the new frontier hadn't crawled that far north to find it. It still seemed to echo with emptiness. And for that reason, as he winged his way over the gray wastes, he knew a distinct quickening of the pulse when he caught sight of a faint plume of smoke beyond a darker stretch of spruceland that circled a lake studded with many small islands. For smoke meant fire; and fire implied the presence of human life.

Slade dropped lower, avoiding the island-studded lake and circling off to a companion lake that offered clearer water for a landing, a mile or more to the southeast. His eyes searched the shoreline as he drifted into a ridge-sheltered cove where he could moor and land without trouble.

He mounted the ridge and once more peered about at the starved-looking spruceland. But he could see no sign of life. Yet on second thought he stepped down to his plane and quietly removed a breaker assembly. With that out, he knew, his engine was tied up. And he had no intention of taking chances.

His next line of procedure, he decided, was to push on overland in search of that small hut unmistakable wisp of smoke. But the going was not easy. He found it best to follow the rock ridges where the footing was safe even though the direction of his advance was variable.

His presence there, he knew, had been well advertised to any watcher between the spruce ridges and the rushes. Yet he advanced with both caution and quietness. Twice he was compelled to back-trail and seek out more solid footing. His final line of advance, he saw, was taking him out to a rush-fringed point abutting into an island-dotted lagoon that was half reed-beds and half open water. It looked lonely and empty.

He was on the point of turning back and rounding the lower arm of the lake when he was arrested by an unexpected sign of life in the reeds ahead of him. This was confirmed, a moment later, by the discovery of footprints in the soil about him. But whoever or whatever lay hidden there refused to disclose itself.

So he pushed quietly on, following the vague path where other feet had preceded his own. He went on until a turn in the narrow runway brought him to a thicker tangle of shrub-willow and rushes.

There, just at the water's edge, he caught sight of a man.

This man was crouched low in a blind of rushes, wattled roughly together. Beside him lay a pair of binoculars and a telescopic camera. But at the moment he was making use of neither. He was merely crouching there, intent and motionless, staring out over the island-dotted lake.

Slade knew it was Frayne, even before he saw the bony face that turned to flash a look of annoyance at the intruder.

"Quiet, please," was Frayne's preoccupied command as his gaze went back to the watery vista in front of him.

"What's happening?" Slade questioned.

"What I have traveled eight thousand miles to find," was Frayne's quietly asperous reply. The half-whispered and half-hissed words came clearly tinged with reproof. "It is a trumpeter swan, making love to his mate."

Slade peered through the rush tops and caught sight of two floating islands of white along the remoter reaches of the lake. The thing that impressed him was first their size and then the snowy whiteness of the feathered bodies that glided in and out between the darker bodies of land that turned the lake end into an archipelago.

"Then you're getting what you came after?" Slade suggested. He noticed for the first time the collapsible rubber canoe, plainly lighter than any Indian birchbark, which lay half-concealed in the fringe of rushes.

"Not when outsiders interfere with my studies," retorted the ornithologist. "Where is your plane?"

"A mile or two southeast of here," Slade explained.

"I won't have a plane disturbing this territory," Frayne proclaimed with an unexpected note of passion. "It means all my work has been for nothing."

Slade's laugh was curt.

"You're welcome to your wilderness," he said. "I'm looking for something bigger than swans."

"Then kindly leave the swans to me."

"Sure," said the unruffled flyer, "but you might remember you don't own this country."

"Perhaps not," was the sharp-noted response. "But the sooner you leave it the happier I'll be."

"Thanks," said Slade. His mouth hardened a little as he stood eyeing the other man. "And what would you do if I happened to hang around?"

Frayne became conscious of the challenge in that question. His thin lips compressed and for a moment he remained silent. Then he shrugged and stared out over the wattled brow of his hiding.

"You would not be so foolish," he quietly announced.

That announcement, Slade saw, was not without its own incit challenge.

"Then since you regard this as your territory," he ventured, "I suppose your camp is here?"

"It is not," countered Frayne. "This is merely an observation post. My camp is farther south, toward the Kasakana, since that seems to be caribou country. And we must have meat, of course."

"If you're nearer the Kasakana," ventured Slade, "you must be neighbors to my two old sourdough friends. I mean Zeke and Minty, the men we bunked with on the way out."

"I have seen nothing of them," was the deliberated response. "My one object here is to be alone."

"Thanks again," said Slade. He stood silent a moment before asking: "Where is that camp-mate of yours?"

"Karnell," said Frayne, "is cutting wood and smoking fish, in case we should winter here. I have learned, in unsettled country, to think of the future."

"If you winter here," observed Slade, "you will no longer have your swans."

"A man of science learns patience," retorted Frayne. "They will come back to the spring."

"But before next spring," persisted Slade, "you'll be needing some plane service."

"I have no need for a plane," asserted the other.

"And you've had none?"

"Of course not."

Slade found it necessary to give that some thought.

"Then why did you try to buy a plane, a couple of weeks ago? And why did you want to hire a flyer?"

The opaque eyes regarded him with disdain.

"That," asserted Frayne, "was before I found what I was looking for."

"And now you've spotted your swans you've no need for us?"

"None whatever," was the acidulated answer.

"And you haven't happened to see a plane in this neighborhood?"

"Not until I had the misfortune of seeing yours."

"Then you saw me as I came to?" Frayne's nod was curt.

"As did my trumpeters, which you disturbed," he announced.

"Before I leave you to your trumpeters," said the flyer, "I'd like to ask just one question. Where do you come from?"

"What difference does that make?" demanded the other.

KEEP THESE TELEPHONE HIGHWAYS CLEAR FOR VICTORY!

Telephone lines are crowded today as never before. And the Long Distance lines to the places listed at the right are now carrying some of the heaviest and most important telephone traffic in the country.

War calls must go through promptly. In normal times we would enlarge the telephone system sufficiently to handle the increased load. We can't today, because the materials for telephone expansion are more urgently needed for tanks, planes and ships.

What we must do is make the most efficient use of the facilities we now have — with your help.

Here are three simple ways in which you can help to keep the words of war moving:

1. Make only the most essential Long Distance calls, and avoid these crowded lines especially.
2. Keep your conversations as brief as possible.
3. When possible, give the number of the distant telephone you are calling.

The same kind of cooperation will improve local service, too. Each call you make must go through a central office switchboard, often jammed with war messages. Try to keep your calls short. Look up numbers in the directory, but if necessary to call Information for a number, write it down for future use. Everybody can help by saving wires for war!

A REAL JOB

War has brought new and vitally important jobs to the retailers of this country.

The pinch of shortages is only just beginning to be felt by the bulk of consumers. Stocks of certain kinds of goods which are no longer manufactured are dwindling fast. Even in the food field, many items will disappear. In all fields, the consumer will have a smaller range of choice than he has been accustomed to.

So one of the retailer's new tasks is to help the consuming public make, with as little discomfort as possible, the great adjustments in living standards resulting from war's enormous demands on our productive resources. And most retailers of the country, little ones as well as big, are cooperating to the limit of their abilities in doing that. They are featuring abundant, reasonably-priced foods and manufactured goods. They are helping the consumer choose suitable and satisfactory substitutes for scarce and costly items. They are showing us how we may avoid waste, and make what we buy go farther.

On top of that, they are doing other work of great importance to the war effort. They are, for example, aggressively selling and promoting the sale of war stamps and war bonds—at their own expense, and without a penny of recompense. They are cooperating with the government in fighting speculation, profiteering and hoarding. They have accepted great responsibilities, and they are discharging them fully.

The retailers are protecting our standard of living to the greatest possible extent. While they can't keep us supplied with "luxuries as usual," in these times, they are doing a real job, a vital job, in our interest.

An average automobile uses 8 to 9 quarts of anti-freeze mixture in a winter or enough to make 35 pounds of smokeless powder. To fire a 16-inch naval rifle would require the amount used by about 24 cars.

URGE MOTORISTS BUY FULL-YEAR LICENSES

August 31st Is Deadline for Use of Half-Year Plates

Fenton R. Bulow, manager of the local secretary of state's branch office, has announced that motorists possessing half-year license plates may now purchase metal tags which will convert these plates to full-year licenses.

The metal strips are now on sale at the branch office in the court house. Motorists are urged not to wait until the August 31st deadline before applying for full-year license. Due to the rationing duties placed upon Mr. Bulow, the office has been rushed at all times and the public is asked to cooperate by not waiting until the last days of August to obtain plates.

The branch office is open daily between 8:30 and 12 mornings, 1:00 to 5:00 afternoons except Saturday, when only morning hours are observed.

It is necessary to bring car title to obtain passenger plates, registration slip and title to procure truck plates. It is not necessary to have trucks weighed the second time.

plenty of ventilation. Each 50 pound sack will hold about 750 pods. The company expects to process around 200,000 pounds of floss the first year but has plans for expansion the following year.

Evidence indicates that many farmers can pick these milkweed pods at a good profit. Experimental efforts show that persons may make very good wages a day picking pods where the stand is medium to good. The price per ton will be from $40.00 to $55.00 depending on the percent of moisture. In many sections of the county we found a good many acres of milkweeds growing in pasture fields, on idle land and along the roadsides. The more we study this new milkweed development, the more we begin to realize that it will make a sizeable increase in our rural income. Perhaps, many of our young folks can pick milkweeds and will find a good profit. We will try and keep the public informed of any new developments through the columns of this paper.

CHARLEVOIX DEFEATS CHEBOYGAN IVERNESS

Won by 7 to 4 Count Sunday; Play At Mackinaw City, Aug. 2

In what proved to be one of the most thrilling games of the season, Charlevoix defeated the highly-touted Cheboygan Iverness Dairy baseball team by a 7 to 4 score to even the season's count Sunday at Cheboygan.

Saxton and Crowell were the winning battery, Saxton allowing five scattered hits and in addition, getting three safe hits including a triple with two on. Rowe, local second baseman, made two hits and drove in three runs. Charlevoix niched Perry, Cheboygan hurler, for nine hits.

Cheboygan has challenged Charlevoix to another game to be played in the near future.

Charlevoix was to have played Harbor Springs here next Sunday, but due to cancellation of the game, the local team goes to Mackinaw City. The Straits city team is undefeated this season and the local outfit is out to break this record.

USO WAR FUND DRIVE WILL BEGIN AUGUST 7

Six National Organizations Unite to Serve Army, Navy

The United Service Organization war fund drive begins August 7 in Charlevoix county, according to announcement by Ralph Hamilton, chairman of the Charlevoix Service Organization.

The state representative and county chairman of the USO met with the CSO committee last Thursday to formulate plans for the drive.

Groups uniting to form the USO are the Young Men's Christian Association, Young Women's Christian Association, National Catholic Community Service, Salvation Army, Jewish Welfare Board and National Travelers' Aid Association. The USO has pledged to devote itself to the problems of service men, to follow wherever the army and navy may go. To accomplish this task it must have the cheerful and generous support of everyone.

Further announcement will be made concerning the war fund drive in this city.

MARL CORALYN ROWE, ANDREW C. HANSEN, JR. ARE WED AT HOUGHTON

Miss Mary Coralyn Rowe, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Rowe, of Houghton, became the bride of Andrew C. Hansen, Jr., of Chicago, at St. Ignatius church in Houghton, Saturday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Hansen will make their home in Chicago, where the groom, a graduate of the Michigan College of Mining and Technology, is employed as a chemical engineer. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Hansen, Sr., of Charlevoix.

The Rev. Fr. Norbert A. Freiburger performed the nuptial high mass which united the couple, with Miss Chesarina Pizzi, of Franklin Mine, and G. M. Kelly, of Lansing, the attendants. Miss Jean Anne Rowe, sister of the bride, was the flower girl.

The bride wore a floor length wedding gown of white chiffon with lace bodice cut in a sweetheart neck line, and veil. She carried an arm bouquet of Johanna Hill roses.

Miss Pizzi wore a pink chiffon gown of similar design with a pink veil and carried an arm bouquet. The flower girl wore blue.

Rudolph J. Gnutheir, baritone, sang Rosewig's "Ave Maria," accompanied by Mrs. Anna Johnson, organist.

The bridal couple left on a wedding trip to Copper Harbor following a wedding breakfast at the Douglas hotel, and a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rowe.

Mr. and Mrs. Hansen, parents of the groom, and Miss Esther Hansen, of Charlevoix and Jackson, his sister, attended the ceremony.—Contributed.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

A surprise party honoring Mrs. J. M. Foster on her birthday anniversary was given Thursday afternoon at the Foster home. Four tables of bridge were in play. At the close of the afternoon, refreshments were served.

Walter McElroy, who left Saturday for army service with Charlevoix county's draft contingent, was honored Thursday evening at a farewell party given at Marion Center grange hall. Forty-five friends and neighbors played games and enjoyed a potluck lunch.

The engagement of Miss Jeanne Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Campbell, to Charles Carey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Carey, was announced at an informal tea given Friday at the Campbell home on River street. Announcement of the engagement was made by the names "Jeanne" and "Charles" written in gilded letters on white streamers down the center of the tea table, and the wedding date was revealed by a small calendar which hung from a daisy garland on the mantelpiece, with the date October 25 encircled. Tea was served to about twenty-five relatives and close friends.

CAMP CHARLEVOIX WEEKLY COLUMN

Ken Smith, Camp Scribe

Another great week dawns with the whole camp looking forward to and planning for DADS' RODEO DAY on August 8th, (a week from Saturday). As I am writing this, I can hear Charlie Bachman, Michigan State College's great football coach, instructing a group of fellows in the art of playing football. Right now they are practicing kicking, with Bart Newell, Al Birdsall, Bud Grimes, and Don Korten seeming to take the honors. Who knows, maybe we have a future All-American right here in the making. Here's to luck to all of them.

Last Monday, Cabin 16 with Charlie Bach at the stern, took an overnight canoe trip. They stayed over at Young's State Park, and the boys who went along were: Charlie Kinzig, Bill Kerr, Tom Dancer, Bud Grimes, Bill Usher. The Intermediate section left camp in the afternoon to hike into town. They carried their lunch with them and all report a swell time. We are doing a great deal of hiking this season, as it is a great way to keep in condition, and just who isn't trying to, these days?

Tuesday morning the athletic League met. We are trying something new at Charlevoix this year. The entire Intermediate and Pioneer Sections are divided into four teams, each team representing a college. They meet three times during the week and thus far soccer and softball are the two sports. There is a great deal of enthusiasm and pep connected with these games, and all four teams are closely bunched for first place. . . In the evening, we all met up at the ball field for some softball, and just as the games were nicely under way, Bill Rankin rode up on horseback to tell us that the woods were full of snipe. Needless to say that everyone ran to get their bag and flashlight and club, and the BIG SNIPE HUNT WAS ON. . . . Our 170 acres makes an ideal place to hunt snipe and some of those left holding the bag were: Barry Ewbanks, Jack Niffenegger, Don Korten, Buck Dillon and Billy Lutz. Several of the boys said the "Snipe run right past the bag, but they just missed them with their club."

Wednesday seems to be the day most of the trips like to pull away from camp, and last Wednesday was no exception to the rule. The first to get away, was Cabin 9, as they were hiking over to Mt. Mc-Saba with Chuck Niffenegger and Sandy MacDonell in charge. These boys were: Barry Ewbank, Howard Kay, Buck Dillon, Buddy Gage, and Billy Lutz. When they reached their camping spot they found cabin 10, already there, as these lucky boys came on horseback. Jim Plate was in charge of the trip along with "Benn", our cowboy. Those boys were: Quay Kinzig, John Hunting, Peter Hanson, Jimmy Fox, Paul Smith, and Jack Niffenegger. The snipes are always a great source of conveyance for overnight trips and cabin 16 with Charlie Bach took its second overnight of the week. These fellows were: Bill Kerr, Tom Dancer, Bud Grimes, Bill Usher, Chas. Kinzig, and John Craig. Though they did hit a calm and have to do some paddling, a great time was had by all.

Cabin 15 took the snipes out on Thursday after noon for an overnight, and Tex says that all went well. Barclay Newell, Sammy Greenawalt, Doc Culver, Bill Newcomer, Chas. McCuire, Larry Rossier took the trip. . . .The league met in the afternoon and it was a cabin evening. Don Neisch started a group in Indian Lore and Dancing and the response was amazing. It was a large group and from the sound of the tom-toms and the stamping of feet, I'm sure that we all can look forward to a real Indian Campfire soon.

Friday afternoon was one of those ideal afternoons for a long swim. Charlie Bach took the hint, and had a loooong swim period both in time and in distance. He held the Mile Swim that afternoon and about twenty-five boys undertook the distance. Don Korten of Cabin 17 had the best time and also set a new camp record for the distance for campers. Other boys who completed the swim successfully were: Fritz Steketee, Gene Chapman, Jim McGerry, Sam Greenawalt, Johnny MacDonell, John Craig, Jimmy Fox, Chuck Lambert, Bud Kampe, Dick Noel, George Dowley, Mike Brand, Jack Tanner, Bill Kerr, Bud Gage, Cary Bachman, Bill Kampe, Bart Newell, Quay and Charles Kinzig, Bob Black, Tom Dancer, Bob Daniels, and John Hunting. The lone Junior to swim the mile was Peter Morley. In the evening each section had its own campfire. The Juniors met in their Paul Bunyon ring and heard stories; The Intermediates had a "tall story" campfire while Chuck Bach and "Beau", the cowboy, talked to the Pioneers.

Saturday afternoon was given over to team practice for the trip over to Camp Algonquin. After supper Saturday evening the Camper-Counsellor baseball game was the main attraction, and what an attraction that turned out to be. Everyone in camp practically was up to the field and with Barc Newell on the mound for the campers, the counsellors trailed by five runs going into the sixth inning. Don Neisch pitched a fine game for the staff, though the campers finally eked out a one-run victory, 10-9. Everyone is looking forward to this coming Saturday night when another camper-counsellor game will be held . . . The dramatic effort last Saturday was a real old-fashioned melerdrammers, put on by Bob Mackenroth. The cast was composed of Johnny MacDonnell (a most bewitching Rosebud), Konrad Matthaei (a sweet old lady), Louis Sher (a Kentucky Colonel), Jim Lewis (a handsome hero) and George Dowley (a fierce villian). Bud Kampe was a most stern sheriff. Dick Neel and Mike Brand both were announcers, and the entire play was very funny and the audience received it well.

Sunday morning at the chapel service which was held up in the woods in our outdoor chapel, Tex was the speaker. He chose as his subject, "Cursing." The talk was so worthwhile that "Chief" has asked for a copy to be sent to the American Camping magazine . . . The choir composed of Fritz Steketee, Jim McGerry, Bill Kampe, Don Nelsch, Wes Brashares, Tom Hart and Jim Flate . . . In the afternoon about 25 campers were taken into town to enter the swimming meet in conjunction with the annual water carnival. They had just nicely reached town "and the rain came." Too bad to get swimmers wet, so the meet was called off. Postponed until next week. In the evening, there was a vesper service. Hymns were sung, a poem was read by Wes, and then Chuck Bach told one of his stories. Thus ended a very nice Sunday in camp.

I do hope that you all are planning on being up here for Dad's Rodeo Day. Trains can be taken from Chicago or Detroit on Friday night and you will arrive here in time for breakfast on Saturday morning, the big day. There is taxi service from the depot to camp. And so, yes, we will be only one hour back of town time then. Be be sure to keep that in mind. The plans start off with breakfast at 8:15 our time (9:15 your time). In the morning you will see all the boys in their activities. The feature of the afternoon will be the meeting of the parents held during the boys' rest hour, followed by the rodeo. From all indications, Benu has really got something there. Many of the boys are taking part. The banquet will be held at 6:30 our time (7:30 your time). Doesn't that sound like a nice day to spend with your son at camp? Well, then, do try to come. If you wish us to, we will be glad to make hotel or cabin reservations for you. There are some fine tourist cabins close by, or several hotels. We will be glad to assist you.

Today the boys are over to Camp Algonquin for an afternoon of intercamp sports. I hope I can add a p. s. on to this and say that we were victorious.

Fritz Steketee passed his Skipper test in sailing last Saturday afternoon before a public examination and he came through in flying colors. In two seasons he is only the second one to pass our skippers test which is really quite stiff. Tom Hart assures us that it really is an accomplishment, so hats off to Fritz Steketee.

I guess I have covered the camp territory as well as I can recall. If I think of more, I'll add it along with the postscript about our games with Algonquin, that is IF we come home the winners. Otherwise, 'Nuff said. Don't forget Dad's Rodeo Day. And by the way, please, get your reservation cards mailed back to us as soon as you can. Better plans can be made if we know the definite number who are coming.

O, yes, Billy Farley returned to us for the rest of the season and the entire camp gave Billy a big Chinese Toast when he arrived. You say you don't know what a "Chinese Toast" is? Well, you just come Dad's Rodeo Day and we'll show you. It's really rare.

Adios until next week.

P. S.—The boys are back from Algonquin and they lost the softball game 4-3, after we led all the way until the last inning. Bart Newell pitched a fine game for us. Our riflery team lost 371-311. Not a bad score at all. Our tennis team won, the winners being Bud Grimes, Fritz Steketee, Bob Black, John Craig, Jim McCerry.

We'll be seein' you all on Dad's Rodeo Day.

Another P. S.—Just an added note to let you all know that the final banquet, closing the camp season, will be on Saturday evening, August 22nd. This will give parents a chance to come up on Saturday and then take the boys home with them on Sunday. There will be a train leaving here Sunday night, the 23rd, for both Detroit and Chicago for boys whose parents cannot come up for the final banquet . . . Just another date for you to put on that calendar.

Office supplies of any description may be obtained quickly through the Charlevoix Courier.—Adv. 33

Victory gardeners may qualify for their certificates of award only when they have registered their gardens, George Tomlison, Director of Victory Gardens for the Michigan Council of Defense, points out. He urges all citizens engaged in this phase of the war effort to register without delay.

"Gardners should register their gardens at once in order to qualify for the emblem, which is issued by the Michigan Council of Defense in recognition of participation in a patriotic service," the Victory Garden Director said in an urgent request for the registration of gardens.

Registration should be made with county and local victory garden chairmen, county and local councils of defense or the Michigan Council of Defense at Lansing. Victory gardners may register by personal letter or by filing printed forms. Citizens may thus secure certificates, which are well worth preservation in treasured family papers.

The victory garden emblems are printed in red, white and blue and are signed by Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner, Lt. Col. Harold A. Furlong, administrator of the Michigan Council of Defense, and Tomlinson. Certificates bear the seal of the State of Michigan and the citation "For patriotic cooperation in planting a victory garden."

It is estimated that approximately 400,000 home gardens have been planted in Michigan and the Michigan Council of Defense is anxious that the gardners receive the recognition due them for their participation on the war effort. Award of emblems will be made to gardners during the summer at county victory garden meetings, which are being arranged, and also at a number of county fairs. Gov. Van Wagoner is expected to make personal presentation where it is possible for him to appear, and many qualified gardners will receive their emblems by mail.

Surveys reveal that weather conditions have benefitted rather than hurt home gardens throughout the state and that a majority of them are flourishing.

C. B. Meggison, Secretary.

Secretary's Annual Report, 1941-42

To the Citizens of the School District:

As scheduled, on January 1, 1942, the final payment on bonds and interest was made, and the school district is now free of all bonded indebtedness. This final payment was $11,051.00.

Present conditions have brought on other problems, however. Transportation has edded a cost this year, and will again be extended to bring the Phelps school to Charlevoix. This additional expense is justified, as it increases our school enrollment on which our school income is based. Cash for this project was $2,200.00

The necessity of hiring another teacher, and increases to attract and hold good teachers, cost $1,400.00 over the previous year. A children's department has been added to the library this year at a cost of $300.00. A small extra salary is needed to provide a supervisor for the operation of this department.

An extra janitor, part time, and increases in wages has added $800.00 to operating costs. Building repairs also increased $300.00.

On the other side of the picture, we can see no need of extensive repairs this summer. The policy of always keeping the buildings in good repair will be followed, however, to prevent a large outlay for repairs in any one year. Extra teachers will be hired only if they are needed to evoid over-crowded rooms. The program of religious and moral education has been carried on as requested at the last annual meeting. It is recommended that this program be continued.

The subject of taking the Catholic school into the public system has been studied and considered. The school board has found no financial objections to the plan and feel that many people of the district can benefit by the increase in State aid. Next year's income would be called on for an additional $2,400.00 to put the plan in operation. We would be reinbursed by the State in the following year.

In order to end this year in the clear, it has been necessary to secure $1,000.00 advance on next year's State aid and $900.00 in bank releases. Teachers' payrolls will be $2,100.00 higher next year. Delinquent taxes are almost a thing of the past and bank releases of impounded funds are about finished. With these conditions accumulating, it has been seen for several years that the time was coming when it would be necessary to ask for additional taxes for operating purposes. Next year, taxes for debt service will not be collected, and should the voters allow 2 mills extra for operating expense, your next year's total school tax will be less than that paid for many years. It now looks that it will be impossible to carry a full program without some increased operating money.

Respectfully submitted,
C. B. Meggison, Secretary.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Camp Robinson, Ark.

Dear Ken:

It is rather late for me to be writing to let you know how much I appreciate your paper. I get it every Saturday night.

All the boys in my company have been shipped out during the past week. There is only five of us left and we have to do guard duty and K. P. I'd rather do guard duty any time than one hour of K. P.

The weather has been fine, if you like hot weather. Thursday and Friday the temperature was 100. All last week the temperature was around 94 and 100.

I certainly miss the boys, especially Dick and Bob. They were sent to California.

I'm leaving this camp tomorrow at 1 p. m. So if you would kindly hold up the paper until I can send my new address I would be grateful.

I wish I could fish for bass in Lake Charlevoix just once this summer.

Wishing you all the luck in the world.

Yours truly,
John Walker.

Hill Field,
Ogden, Utah.

Hello, Ken:

Well, here I am again, but not the same man.

I have been transferred to the signal corps. Now we live in wooden barracks. There are 40 men in our platoon. They say there's to be only three buck privates in the group, the rest are to get non-commissioned ratings.

The signal corps is a group which takes in signaling by radio, wireless, telephone communications and linesmen, codes of various kinds, etc. It is attached to the 31st Air Squadron group.

One never knows where he will be next in this army.

I was on guard duty for six hours the other day, from 2 a. m. to 8 a. m. Guarding four transport planes . . . You can imagine how monotonous it was walking around the planes, back and forth on the cement runway in the dark with a 30-caliber Winchester rifle (model 1917) on your shoulder. One can not smoke or sit down to rest while on guard.

I have asked to be transferred to power boats for coastal patrol or work in a ship yard. As yet I have not heard from the commanding officer. He has written to Washington, D. C., to find out about the United States Power Squadron. None of the officers ever heard of such an organization here. I thought it was known all over the U. S. A.

Here's hoping I can get out of this place. I might as well see something now that I am in.

Wish some of the boys would write to me. Where is Jerry and Johnny Walker now?

I am kind of lost here. Not many Michigan boys here. I don't know many except the 12 that came with we on the train.

The weather here is swell, but I prefer Charlevoix any day. More places for swimming and fishing there.

Pvt. Charles J. Krulik.

Editor's Note:—The following letter was recently received by Mr. and Mrs. Angos Fochtman from their son, Tech. Sgt. Robert C. Fochtman, with the U. S. Army Air Corps somewhere in the Pacific ocean. This is the first letter Bob has written his parents since his arrival in Australia last February, although they have had several cablegrams.

Dear Folks:

I should have written this letter a long time ago, but I didn't because I didn't know what to say. I have lots to say but none of it will get by the censors if I put it in print.

Right at the present I am just doing the routine work I have always done on airplanes. The only variation I get is the assembling of the ice machine we have here in camp. The darned thing looked easy when I started, but I was short so many parts that it has been a long job. I expect to have the job done inside of a day or two.

If you have read the heading of this letter you know by now that I made Technical Sergeant and is that pleasant. It means a pay raise and another stripe on my arm. All in all it is rather pleasant except that it gives me extra responsibility in addition to the pay.

Also note the new A. P. O. number. This number has changed so often since we left the States that I can't keep track of them. So far I have received one letter and one cablegram. I would like to know just what is going on at home. We got the news over the radio but that news is general. I would like to hear something about the home town and the folks I know. Write me a detailed account of the doings of the entire family.

As or myself, nothing has happened to me that amounts to anything. I had a nice time in Australia, but still I was glad to get away from that British accent of theirs. The Aussies drive down the wrong side of the road and they drive like a bunch of old women. And another bad habit of theirs is drinking tea. They treated us swell all of the time and I did make some good friends, but it still wasn't like home.

I can't think of anything else to say except that I would like some good chocolate candy. And if you do send me candy, send first class mail, because that is all that we get at the present.

Bob.

Sunday, July 28.

Dear Ken:

Thanks very much for sending the Courier. I receive it each Saturday and do I over enjoy it. News from home is the one bright spot in a soldier's life.

I found the life here hard at first with very little time to write and I was also so tired by night I just fell into bed. I have finished my long hours of walking so find army life more pleasant.

The heat here is terrible but the food is great and the officers are kind so find more time for pleasure and writing. The universal complaint of army life is tired and aching feet but after a fellow gets toughened up he doesn't mind the army half so much.

Hope you can go right on thru the war sending the "Courier" to all the home folks and you will have done much to help win the war. Thanks again for the paper.

Sincerely,
Pvt. Frank J. Novotay

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

Last week Wednesday, our Mines and Mining committee held a hearing in the House office caucus room. At that meeting many congressmen, scores of newspaper men and at least 500 interested spectators were privileged to witness one of this country's outstanding chemists, Dr. Per K. Frolich, the president-elect of the American Chemical Society and head of the Esso Laboratories, produce before their very eyes synthetic rubber. On the table before him was a gallon glass jar and a number of bottles containing various liquids. Dr. Frolich poured into the glass jar some of the liquids from his bottles and there appeared what seemed to be coagulated milk. He reached into the jar, compressed the mixture, squeezed therefrom all the liquid and with his hands pressed it into a ball, which was passed and bounced around among the members. The product was synthetic rubber made in less than 10 minutes.

The principal testimony at the hearing was given by William S. Farish, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. I believe my readers will be interested in a brief review of some of the main questions asked and answered by Mr. Farish.

First. What is the national rubber supply situation? It was pointed out that the war requirements of the United Nations would consume our entire reserve next year if not supplemented by new supplies of some kind.

Second. Can anything be substituted for rubber tires? After much experimentation with spring wheels, rope end wooden tires, Mr. Farish stated the automotive industry has concluded that there is no substitute.

Third. What is the government's synthetic rubber program? We were informed that the government's synthetic program calls for the anual production—in government owned plants operated by the oil companies and others—of 800,000 tons. The initial program calls for the expenditure of some $81,900,000 for the purchase of alcohol made from farm products by the various liquor distilleries in the nation; for the expenditure of some $9,900,000 with the coal industry for benzol, for most of the raw material for styrene and a small amount of butadiene, both of which products are needed for the production of buna S; and in addition to the above, the government plans to spend in the petroleum industry some $22,300,000 for refinery gases to produce 325,000 tons of butadiene and some of the raw meterial for styrene. After summarizing the government's synthetic rubber program, Mr. Farish stated that while it was sufficient for the military needs of the United Nations, it would not be sufficiently large or soon enough for ordinary non-essential civilian requirements.

Fourth. How soon will America get into large-scale production of synthetic rubber and will this come about in time so America's private cars can be kept in operation? Mr. Farish stated the debatable question at this moment indeed is how far the present government program will go toward meeting essential civilian transportation needs, and I quote him: "We cannot remove this doubtful question entirely by the simple expedient of building more synthetic rubber plants. Even if we could get construction material, there is not time to lay down and complete a new synthetic rubber program of any great size on top of the present one." We were told that the oil industry concluded some time ago that the solution could be had by "make-shift" plants, using spare and salvaged equipment from the various plants in the petroleum industry. This, of course, would involve considerable expense, the operations would be inefficient and the butadiene would cost more than when made in properly designed new plants; but a substantial amount of butadiene will be produced in advance of the regular program, which means additional rubber. Mr. Farish pointed out that before the end of this year, Standard Oil alone will produce between 15,000 and 30,000 tons of additional butadiene in this way, and that another method of getting synthetic rubber ahead of schedule was in progress. Flexon, a new rubber substitute of the Butyl type is already being made in experimental quantities from isobutylene by make-shift methods involving dry ice. Through this flexon and the quick butadiene program, mentioned above, 200,000 tons of substitute rubber may be produced before the end of 1943 which would provide 34,000,000 more automobile tires than were anticipated by the War Production Board.

Fifth. Will the synthetic rubber be as good as natural rubber? The general opinion of rubber experts, so we learned, is that buna is from 15 to 20 percent better than natural rubber for average use. Mr. Farish stated: "We ourselves have been making comparative tests on buna tires for some time and are consistently getting better service out of them than out of natural rubber tires under normal road conditions."

Sixth. What will be the comparative cost between natural and synthetic rubber? We learned that savings in excess of 40 percent have already been made in the cost of the projected government program. To begin with, buna rubber will cost about 30 cents a pound when made of butadiene out of petroleum. When plants are running with maximum efficiency, Mr. Farish believes this costmay be reduced to 20 cents a pound or less. The actual average price of natural raw rubber has been between 15 and 20 cents a pound for many years, though in World War I it soared to over one dollar.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey lately has been the target of much abuse and criticism in the nation's press and in the halls of congress—as my readers well remember. Mr. Farish made a very clear statement of his company's position on the rubber question when he stated: "We believe in any program that will give our nation the most rubber in the shortest time with the least possible drain on vital materials—no matter what process is used, no matter what the raw material, whether it is grain, or coal, or oil, or all three. As an oil company we have a natural and vital interest in rubber. Without rubber automobiles cannot run. For every dollar's worth of rubber used on the highways, the oil industry sells $15 worth or more of gasoline, oil or service."

I think we can depend upon the petroleum and rubber industry to do everything within their power to see that the nation's cars are kept rolling. However, as warned by Mr. Farish, we must not be unduly optomistic and everyone must conserve his automobile tires all possible by the reduction of mileage and driving speeds.

Tuberculosis is not inherited. It is spread by a germ, the tubercle bacillus.

The ornithologist's face hardened. But his voice, when he spoke, was a controlled one.

"If I had my passports here," he quietly asserted, "you would soon learn otherwise." His movement, as he turned away and reached for his binoculars, took on a touch of the valedictory. "And I regret that my interest in bird life must interfere with your curiosity as to my origin."

Slade laughed.

"Well, good luck with your trumpeters," he said as he turned and strode from the blind. He realized, as he studied out the uncertain trail to where his plane must be resting, that meetings like this were mighty rare along the frontier.

Camping Trips Require Little Travel

Measured in miles, most camping trips in Michigan are not long, but because many of them are made by canoe, on bicycles, or afoot, the campers cover their territory much more intensively. Little visited Michigan wild lands, especially those near cities, are now getting more attention than they did when travel was easier. Simple camps set up with a minimum of equipment, like the canoe camp pictured, are proving most satisfactory. Local conservation officers are informing beginners of the favorable camping areas in their respective districts

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

There probably aren't many Americans who still are naive enough to think that this is going to be a war easly won—not after the grim news of the past fortnight.

Since Pearl Harbor, 44,143 U. S. soldiers, sailors, marines, coast guardsmen and members of the Philippine scouts have been killed, wounded or are missing (probably prisoners of the Japs). Their sacrifices and the sacrifices of the homes from whence they came emphasizes the pettiness of those who complain of restrictions on their normal lives.

Our ships are being sunk faster than we can replace them.

The situation on the Russian front is grave.

Such dark news must make us realize the sort of war we are in—that greater sacrifices will be necessary on the Home Front, as well as on the field of battle, before the victory is won.

On the Home Front, our one concern must be to see that every bit of material we can provide goes to make weapons for our troops and that there are trains enough and trucks enough and ships enough to take these weapons where they are needed.

This great task may be sub-divided into three main jobs:

The job of suplying materials for our factories—which includes the important work of salvage and saving;

The job of production—which enlists all of the energies of a vast and constantly growing army of American craftsmen;

The job of transportation.

Let us see what progress we have made with each of these jobs.

The War Production Board moved once more to assist the flow of critical war materials to those points in our industrial system where they are most needed. Changes in the priorities system were made in order that the WPB may know the supply and requirements situation and meet the most important needs of our fighting men, even though it means further curtailment of goods for civilians. We no longer have enough to go around. We must put the weight of our production where it is most needed.

Restricting the use of war materials is one way of combatting the material shortage problem. Salvage is another. We must have scrap metal to win the war. The great new salvage drive is on—now—and there is no excuse for half-heartedness or half-measures on the part of any city or any town or any individual.

Here's another chance for free Americans to prove that free people can do a better job than the slaves of a dictatorship.

The Nazis need scrap metal, too, and they are going after it. A recent Berlin radio broadcast for the German Home Front said Hitler had ordered all unused iron and steel confiscated.

"Active support of the total action will be brought about by the uniformed police," said Herr Hitler—in other words, by Himmler and the Gestapo.

Let's send Hitler our scrap—in bombs and bullets.

If production were our only problem we would be well on the way to solving it. Scarcely a day goes by but what the labor-management committees of great industrial plants in the east, midwest and Pacific Coast report more production records smashed. A single plant has set more than a thousand production records since Pearl Harbor and its workers and management pledged "this is the pace we have set for ourselves until the war is over."

The transportation problem also demands the help of every one. No unnecessary travel, pooling of rides, staggering work hours and many other ways are open for your help. We cannot put great quantities of war materials into new transportation facilities. Even the present facilities will be curtailed.

Yes, the war news may continue to be bad—

The Home Front can help change the headlines.

Junior Farmers Raise Funds for War Work

Lansing,—The Michigan Junior Farm Bureau's 2,400 young members have presented a check for $1,500 to Lt. Col. Harold A. Furlong, administrator of the Michigan Council of Defense, as their contribution to the war effort. The money, to be used to purchase a Red Cross ambulance, was raised by giving barn dances, plays, box socials, and minstrel shows and by the sale of salvage.

The Junior Farm Bureau, with clubs in 40 Michigan counties, has participated actively in rural civilian defense, performing a variety of duties in co-operation with county war boards and defense councils, according to Benjamin Hennick, state director of the organization.

The drive for the ambulance fund began last spring and members of the clubs have been spending their spare time in the effort to reach their goal.

Many at Protection Schools

Forty-seven Michigan men have studied at the War Department Civilian Protection schools since the courses began more than six months ago. Men selected by the Michigan Council of Defense have received instruction at the Edgewood Arsenal, Edgewood, N. J., Texas A. & M., University of Maryland, New York University and Purdue University. Students receive two weeks instruction aimed at uniform training of leaders and instructors, looking towards an efficiently organized system of civilian protection.

Plan Evacuation

Grand Rapids children will be evacuated to school buildings, township halls and other public buildings in Kent county, if the city is subjected to an enemy air raid, according to plans drawn by Chief Frank J. O'Malley and Captain E. H. McConnell of the Police department. A map prepared by Mrs. Florence Jacobs, head of the WPA art project indicates the points outside of the city to which children could be evacuated. The map will be pieced at the central civilian defense headquarters for instant reference in case of need.

Protect State Capitol

Fire-fighting kits will be installed to protect Michigan's venerable capitol at Lansing against incendiary bombs. Plans of Neil Verberg, superintendent, have been approved by the State Administrative Board. The plan calls for installation of 42 fire kits in the building, each containing two buckets of sand, an axe, rake, shovel, rope and an oil lantern. Sand buckets previously placed as protection for the personnel and valuable records, have fallen into use by the public as cuspidors and ash trays.

igan Central, and the Michigan Northern about 100 years ago? Reason: Cheap transportation for pioneer settlers.

10. That Route 112, Detroit to Chicago, was once a favorite Indian trail? Bicycle clubs were clamoring for better roads as early as 1875. The state highway department was created in 1905; Horatio S. Earle, an ardent bicyclist, was named the first commissioner.

12. That the "Soo" canal carries more water traffic each year that the Panama and Suez canals combined? Because of its military importance, American troops guard the canal and locks on both sides of the American-Canadian border. This special zone is the only one of its kind in the United States.

19. That Michigan furnished nearly 100,000 men in the first World War?

20. That Fort Custer, near Battle Creek, was named for a Monroe boy, George A Custer of the famous Fourth Michigan Cavalry in the Civil War? This regiment split a $100,000 reward with the First Wisconsin Cavalry for capture of Jefferson Davis.

one you're lucky, because the WPB has frozen all highway surfacing materials, dust-layer, etc., and from now on this stuff's going to have to be spread awful thin to go around. If you live on a street with gravel surface, you'd better save the old oil drainings from your car to keep the dust down next summer.

Well, due to lack of opposition, most of those seeking nomination for public office at the primary election in September won't have to slide into the home stretch and, in view of the fact there's only a couple county contests this year, voters can concentrate better on what there are. Charlevoix county voters have an opportunity this fall to place a Charlevoix county man in the Legislature to represent the Charlevoix-Leelanau district. Floyd A. Supp, a fellow-townsman, is seeking the office and I'm sure would give us the kind of representation we need at Lansing.

The present opinion of experts is that the liner Normandie can be salvaged. If the work is hurried up the vessel may be used to carry the delegates to the peace conference.

First wife: "Does your husband talk in his sleep?"

Second wife: "No, and it's terribly exasperating. He just grins."

My personal opinion is that the pending proposal for the school district to take over operation of the parochial school is a sound business proposition on one hand, and provides an opportunity for some of us to relieve others of our fellow-townsmen from a distressing financial situation on the other. If these two important points are not sufficient for determination of the issue, argument would be useless, anyway.

Through the courtesy of the city council and board of commerce, privileges of the Charlevoix municipal golf course have been made available free of charge to any men in the armed services of the United States. Application at the clubhouse is all that is required to enjoy this privilege.

MICHIGAN BELL URGING CARE PHONE USE

Reduction In Long Distance Calls Particularly Stressed

Salesmanship in reverse, in an endeavor to save telephone facilities to help the war effort, is being practiced by the Michigan Bell Telephone Company today, according to C. L. Johnson, manager for the company.

That is particularly true with respect to the use of long distance lines, he stated, inasmuch as those circuits are congested with military and war production calls. On all calls, both local and long distance, telephone users also are asked to be brief. Inability of the company to expand its system sufficiently to care for the increasing business because of the scarcity of materials more urgently needed for war is given as the reason.

The lines to Washington are more congested with calls than any others in the country, the telephone manager said, and customers of the company are being requested in newspaper advertising and over the radio not to call the nation's capital at all unless the particular call directly concerns the war effort.

Sault Ste. Marie and Mt. Clemens telephone users are requested not to make any but important local calls because of congestion of the switchboards.

RURAL AREAS SHORT ON FIRE PROTECTION

Survey Showed One Farm In Six Had Adequate Ladder

If LeRoy township of Ingham county proves a fair sample of rural Michigan, safeguarding rural property against fire as a civilian defense measure should bring a boom in the laddermaking business. Only one farm in six, a survey revealed, has a ladder adequate for fire fighting, though a fair number of portable pumpers, particularly spraying rigs, was found available.

Rural fire protection committees of county defense councils, consisting of a defense council representative, the county agricultural agent and the conservation officer, who is chairman, are now organizing township committees, each member of which is chairman of a local area, such as a school district. On the local area subcommittee there is at least one active member for each square mile.

The Michigan program for rural fire defense includes inventorying of all fire fighting equipment available in the township and county, a survey of fire risks each local unit may have to deal with, recommedations for hazard reductions, and enrollment of four times as many volunteer fire fighters as are needed to man the equipment available.

Two bulletins, "Fire Fighting Equipment for Rural Areas" and "Rural Fires, Their Prevention and Control," already have been published by the state conservation department for instruction of rural fire defense groups. Three department lecturers are now in the field, training volunteer rural fire fighters with the aid of a two-reel department-made instructional film and by actual demonstrations of fire-fighting equipment use. The organizing and instruction of volunteers will continue through the summer and early fall before all townships in the state have been contacted.

BEST DUCK HUNTING IS SEEN THIS FALL

Conservation Commission Will Not Change Federal Rules

The best duck flights in more than a decade, predicted by the federal fish and wildlife service, will be matched this fall by federal regulations allowing 70 days of duck shooting—10 more than last year, and every one a full day, from sunrise to sunset.

Former state conservation commission action on Michigan waterfowl hunting regulations is scheduled for August 17, but no deviation from federal recommendations is expected, except that rail and gallinule shooting, as in previous years, may be made to start with the duck season, no earlier.)

Continuing increases in the duck supply, now estimated at three times the duck population of seven years ago, explain such liberalization of the federal rules as abandonment of the 4 p. m. closing time and the 70 day season which, in the zone including Michigan, will run from September 26 through December 4.

One wood duck will be permitted in the aggregate bag of 10, as for the first time since the adoption of the Migratory bird treaty act, the open season applies to all ducks. Not more than three redheads or bufflehends, singly or in the aggregate, may be taken in any one day, the same as last year. The three-shell limit on repeating shotguns also remains in force.

A decline in goose populations has cut the bag limit on the big birds from three a day to two, except for the abundant blue geese, of which the hunter may take six in a day. With the status of woodcock "somewhat improved in general, but spotty," Michigan can have seasons the same as in 1941—October 1-15 in the upper peninsula and October 15-29 in lower Michigan.

Extension of the waterfowl storage limit from 20 to 30 days will make possible the serving of wildfowl over the Christmas-New Year's holiday season.

Pasture has been above average this season and ample to care for more than the usual amount of livestock. This will contribute materially to the beef output of the county and there will probably be a greater per cent of local meat used this winter than in many years past.

The entire agricultural picture this season is encouraging. Prices being paid to growers are above average and, despite shipping restrictions, there is a good outside market or all surplus produced in the county.

RED CROSS TO MAKE SURGICAL DRESSINGS

Mrs. F. F. McMillan to Have Charge of Work In Charlevoix

The Charlevoix county chapter of the American Red Cross will begin the work of making surgical dressings as soon as material arrives, according to Mrs. Allen Campbell, works production chairman of the county chapter.

A tri-county institute was held in Petoskey on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week for instruction in making of dressings and bandages. Attending from Charlevoix were Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. F. F. McMillan, who will have charge of the work in this city.

The basement of the County bank building has been offered as a work room. As soon as material for dressings and bandages is secured, the program will be put into operation and it is expected to continue for 16 months. Anyone who wishes to devote a few hours of their time each week to this vital work is asked to contact Mrs. McMillan or Mrs. Campbell.

Until a few weeks ago, only five of the larger chapters in the country had surgical dressing units. But with an ever-growing quota to be filled, the government has turned in a rush order to all chapters. Although every commercial bandage company is working at full production, it is estimated that only ten per cent of the needed bandages can be made commercially. The rest must be made by volunteer workers.

Each additional member adds $55 to the district income, a total of $3,000. This above any money at present being received.

Ques: Will this mean an added tax burden for the citizens of Charlevoix?

Ans: The cost of operating the parochial school the first year will be paid out of school funds. The increase in state aid will be paid the following year. Ultimately, therefore, there will be no additional cost.

Ques: Will religion be taught during school hours or in the school?

Ans: No.

Ques: Why not close the Catholic school and send all pupils to the public school?

Ans: Catholics have made great sacrifices to build and operate their school in the past in addition to supporting education of public school pupils because of the importance they attach to the teaching of religion. It is more in accord with that principle to have children gathered in one place as their parents wish done. The Catholic children are the only ones in the parochial school to be taught religion, before and after school hours. It is much more satisfactory to have them close at hand for a systematic and regular teaching of that vital subject. If the contract is terminated for any reason, the parochial school will be ready to function as an independent unit, whereas if the school were closed, an intolerable burden would be placed upon Catholics of reclaiming an abandoned building.

Ques: Does not the possibility of the terms of the contract not being kept militate against entering into an agreement at this time?

Ans: If any of the terms of the contract are violated, the contract is automatically terminated. In addition, the agreement is concluded each year on July 1 and a new agreement has to be made.

Ques: What text books will be used?

Ans: Charlevoix schools furnish books for all students. If this arrangement goes through, used books will be purchased from the students, providing they are in good condition and of proper content. Additions and replacements will be purchased. Eventually the same texts will be used as in the public schools.

Ques: What vote is required to carry?

Ans: A simple majority vote is required.

Ques: Who can vote on the question?

Ans: 1. Must be a citizen of the United States and over 21 years of age. 2. Must have three months' residence in the school district. 3. Must own property which is assessed for school taxes in the school district, or to be the parents or legal guardian of any child between the ages of 5 and 19 years included on census of the district.

BANKS AND THE WAR

How Many Parts Make a Bomber?

STATISTICS are frequently published telling how many pieces and parts go into the making of a bomber. But bombers are made of more than pieces and parts. Built right into every one are the vision and genius of the designer, the initiative of the manufacturer, the loyalty and skill of the workers, and the cooperation of America's banks. Bank credit builds plants, pays for raw materials, finances production, meets payrolls — provides the fuel that keeps America's war-production lines rolling. If you can use war credit, see us.

DETROIT LIONS START TRAINING

SQUAD OF 43 PLAYERS INCLUDES SEVEN VETERANS

Prepare for 1942 National League Season at South Side Athletic Field Hare

Forty-three players, including seven veterans of last year's team, pried the lid off the 1942 football season Wednesday when the Detroit Lions opened their training camp at Charlevoix.

Although the number of players under contract is four less than the squad which roported at Cranbrook last year, the Lions have eight players including six more veterans who have as yet not signed contracts, but who are expected in camp on the opening day or shortly after.

The 1942 squad includes 11 halfbacks, four fullbacks, two blocking backs, nine ends, eight tackles and six guards and three centers.

With the veterans Harry Hopp and Ned Mathews already in the fold and Lloyd Cardwell and former Cardinal John Hall expected in camp when the drills begin, Coach Bill Edwards has the nucleus of a versatile set of halfbacks.

Tommy Colelle, former Canisius tailback, Mickey Sanzottn sensational runner from Western Reserve and Emil Banjavic, who starred at Arizona, are three rookies who are going to camp rated highly by coaches and sports writers in their particular sections of the country.

Wake Forest's John Polanski, who scored 96 points last year, and Frank Grigonis, who scored 73 points for Chattanooga in 1941, are the standouts in a field of four rookie fullbacks. Milt Piepul, veteran of last year's squad, and Bobby Westfall, Michigan's great all-American who was drafted by the Lions last winter, have not signed as yet.

Of the nine ends who will report to camp, two are first string players from last year. Bill Fisk and Paul Szakash, the veterans, will get plenty of competition from Mike Balitsaris, former Tennessee star, and Wilson Fulton, Mississippi College athlete.

Balitsaris, the veteran of Tennessee's Rose Bowl and Sugar Bowl campaigns of 1939 and 1040, is and excellent pass receiver, and Fulton rated above the average spuring passes, plays a good defensive game also. Balitsaris scored 30 points last year while Fulton connected for 58. Joe Striegfellow, from Mississippi Southern, is another lanky rookie who is rated highly.

The tackle problem shouldn't be difficult. Alex Shibanoff, veteran from last year and seven rookies have signed. Ted Pavelec and Emil Uremovich, last year's tackles, are expected to sign before training season is many days old.

CAMP CHARLEVOIX RODED AUGUST 8

OUTSTANDING PROGRAM FOR 5TH ANNUAL EVENT

Numerous Stunts, Contests and Exhibitions Listed; Affair Is Free to Public

Camp Charlevoix, one of Michigan's largest private boys' camps, owned and directed by Lewis C. Reimann, of Ann Arbor, will hold its 5th annual rodeo Saturday afternoon, August 8th, at 2:30 o'clock, at the camp.

Due to wartime restrictions on automobile travel caused by car and tire rationing, the rodeo and annual Dad's Day event, in the past held separately, have been joined into a single day's activity. Parents of campers throughout the mid-west will be in attendance.

The rodeo this year is under the direction of "Benu" Van Deren, cowboy from Arizona and riding instructor at the camp. He has been putting the boys through their paces in preparation for the event for several weeks.

An outstanding program has been prepared, including such events as trick riding, roping, relay races, jumping, calf roping and steer riding. Many thrills are in store for spectators.

Parents of campers have been invited to attend and a cordial invitation is extended Charlevoix residents to be present. The program is free to the public.

WATER CARNIVAL A FINE SUCCESS

OUTSTANDING PROGRAM PRESENTED SUNDAY

George Bowman, Grand Rapids, Won Featrue Swims; Special Entertainment Praised

With perfect weather prevailing and a fine crowd in attendance, Charlevoix's 8th annual water carnival, postponed from July 26, was conducted Sunday afternoon at East Park.

While the list of entries was somewhat smaller than previous years, the quality of talent participating and several new entertainment fentures provided an outstanding program.

George Bowman, a Grand Rapids youth who witch-hiked to Charlevoix to onter the event, was rewarded with top honors in the two major swimming contests and in addition, gave an outstanding performance in exhibition diving. Bowman won the quarter-mile swim, featrue event of the program, and placed first in the 100-yard contest for seniors.

John Nesgard, local coast guardsman, displayed the ability which won him the Wisconsin amateur diving championship in a thrilling exhibition of fancy diving which brought unqualified praise from the audience

Another outstanding entertainment fenture was the vocal and instrumental numbers plaed by Ardena and Geraldine Griggs, of Sheridan, Mich. The two girls, vacntioning at the Charlevoix tourist park, sang and gave several selections on Hawaiian electric guitars.

A new type of entertainment and one which gave the crowd a big thrill, was "deep seas fishing" in which anglers made unsuccessful attempts to 'land' human 'fish' on heavy and light tackle. Allen Campbell and George Rassieur were unsuccessful in attempts to 'land' Beverly Fisher and Mrs. Alice Fisher, the mermaids, and Mrs. O. W. Mourer, a summer visitor, likewise failed in an attempt to subdue Bill Ochs on the end of a fish line. The audience got a big thrill out of this stunt.

LOCAL CADET VICTIM PLANE CRASH

ALBERT MCMILLAN KILLED AT SUMTER, S C.

Two Others Lost As Planes Collided Thursday Afternoon; Military Funeral Monday

Aviation Cadet Fray Albert McMillan, 25, son of Dr and Mrs. F. F. McMillan, was killed Thursday afternoon in the crash of two training planes near Shaw Field, Sumter, S. C. The accident, which occurred three and a half miles from the field, cost the lives of one other aviation cadet and an instructor

Cadet McMillan and Cadet Curtin R. Risley, 22, of Herman, N. Y., would have become members of Shaw Field's upper class Friday. Lt. Hoyt Acker, 29, of Asheville, N. C., was an instructor at Shaw Field. N. E. Williams, of Ridgeland, S. C., a civilian pilot who was in the plane with Cadet McMillan, parachuted to safety. He suffered only minor injuries. There were no known eye witnesses to the crash.

Word of the accident did not reach here until late Thursday night. The body was brought to Charlevoix on Monday morning, escorted by a member of the Shaw Field staff. An escort composed of eight members of the local American Legion post met the train at Petoskey. At the McMillan home on Park avenue, taps was sounded while a formation of coast guardsmen with rifles stood at attention. A military funeral service was held that afternoon at 4 o'clock from the See Funeral Home, with Rev. Leigh H. Hagle officiating. Interment was at Brookside cemetery.

Main objective of the USO is to help build and maintain the strongest fighting spirit among our men in uniform by showing them how much their friends back home appreciate what they are doing, and to make this appreciation tangible in the form of friendly hospitality and service in the soldiers' and sailors' off-duty hours.

USO was requested to take over this important phase of the national effort by the President, Secretaries of War and Navy, and the Federal Security Director. The government itself did not take on the job because, since most of our fighting men were civilians a year ago and will be again after victory is won, it was felt that the democratic way to help them was for their fellow-civilians to do the job rather than having everything done under government control as is done in totalitarian countries. The entire job is done by USO through its national headquarters and through local USO committees.

DRIVE FOR SCRAP METAL IS STARTED

COUNTY WIDE CAMPAIGN TO AID WAR EFFORT

Charlevoix Service Organization Sponsors Local Collection to Swell Its War Chest

Charlevoix and Charlevoix county this week joined the nation in an organized drive to secure all available scrap metal for the war effort.

Robert Cook, of Bellaire, representing the State WPA scrap collecting agency in charge of the campaign in Charlevoix and Antrim counties, announced that a fully organized county unit is ready for the drive. Barney Milstein, of East Jordan, is the Charlevoix county chairman, B. C. Meilencamp, county agricultrual agent is representing the County War Board, and Walter H. Henley, chairman of the county AAA is cooperating in enlisting the cooperation of farmers.

"Pat" Mitchell, former Boyne City mayor, has been named foreman of the WPA collecting agency for the county in gathering and paying for scrap iron and steel collected. Trucks, under Mitchell's supervision, will be sent out thru the county to buy the metal and issue certificates of purchase. Checks, on the basis of $7 per ton, will be mailed by the WPA, it is understood.

The campaign in Charlevoix will be sponsored by the Charlevoix Service Organization. This organization will solicit and receive donations of metal from local citizens, and proceeds from the sale will be used to finance its many and worthwhile activities.

A scrap metal dump will be established at the Charlevoix Lumber Co. yard just beyond the bridge, where individuals may leave donations of metal. If the donations are too large for the individual to handle, delivery by truck may be arranged by calling Clifford McKibbin, Jr., city superintendent, phone 75, who is acting as local chairman of the campaign. Other committee membership is the CSO local committee personnel composed of Fr. John Collins, Rev. H. J. Pulsipher Ralph Hamilton, Dale Bradley, Mrs. P. R. Ross, Mrs. Charles Bellingor and Mrs. Harry Whitehead.

By making donations of scrap metal to the CSO, Charlevoix citizens will aid in insuring continuance of the fine work of this organization for duration of the war by providing necessary finances, besides doing their patriotic duty in assisting the nation's war effort.

The scrap metal salvage campaign now under way is nationwide in scope, sponsored by the American Industries Salvage committee, whose advertising urging public cooperation appears elsewhere in this issue.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

The human wind bag never has a blowout.

Tshi Tshi People of the county are sure behaving themselves. The August court calendar hasn't got any criminal cases, no issues of fact and law, no chancery cases and, believe it or not, no divorce cases. Must be the fellows who've been having trouble at home have all gone to the army. Anyway, the armed services give them some place to go besides the "dog house."

We'll have to admit some good is coming out of this war. They've found a use for the pesky milkweed in making fillers for life preservers and now if someone could figger out a way to make dive bombers out of mosquitoes, it really would be something.

There was a time when a person felt guilty when they burned waste paper because of the crying need of industry for all scrap. Things have changed, though, according to Kenneth M. Burns, Michigan Defence Council salvage committee chairman, who says: "The shortage of waste paper has been totally overcome and mills now have an ample supply."

Al Webor, publisher of the Cheboygan Observer, says the new all aggregate state road (M-66) between Charlevoix and East Jordan "is one of the prettiest and nicest roads to drive over in the north country. When the shoulders are graded and smoothed up, it will really be a 'dream drive'." That's a fine compliment and no doubt everybody will agree with him.

Saw where a newspaper headline read "CIO Urges Allies Open Second Front." In an adjoining column on the same page, another article, captioned "Strikes Are Costly," relates that a total of 7,176,344 man-hours of work have been lost in war industry due to strikes in the first six months of this year. Maybe the situation strikes you the same as it does me—that the CIO has a lot of "guts" to demand any-

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Continuing the column's tabloid review of Michigan history, we present twenty questions this week for the most part on contemporary life.

You'll be doing well to get a grade of 50 this time, so check off five points for every question that you miss, and don't miss more than ten of them.—Editor's Note.

DID YOU KNOW—

1. That the largest art colony in the Middle-West is at Saugatuck where the Chicago Art Institute maintains a summer school of painting?

2. That Michigan's native sons and daughters in literature include Stewart Edward White, Harold Titus, Rex Beach, James Oliver Curwood, Clarence Buddington Kelland, Ray Standard Baker (writing as David Grayson), Edgar A. Guest, Anne Campbell, Douglas Malloch, Arthur Pound, Paul de Kruif, Edna Ferber, Ring Lardner, Helen Topping Miller, Margaret Rawlings and Webb Miller. (There are many others!)

3. That in 1930 there were 173,777 Canadian-born citizens in Michigan? In addition to this group, 28,539 French-Canadians had moved to the state. The second group in numerical strength were the Polish with 119,228; third, Germans with 81,714; and fourth, English numbering 62,721.

4. That Michigan's greatest industrial expansion was between 1920 and 1930 when the state's population increased 32 per cent? Only two states—Florida and California — exceeded Michigan during this decade.

5. That Michigan State College, founded in 1857, was the first agricultural college in the United States? As a result of its success, the United States land grant college act was made a law in 1862.

6. That Michigan State Normal college, founded in 1852, was the first normal school west of Albany,

Garden Disease Hits Some Crops

Tomatoes turning yellow and wilting? Garden beans showing circular dark spots on the pods and red spots on the leaves?

These are signs of disease probably carried by soil or seed, explains J. H. Muncie, Michigan State College plant disease specialist.

In the case of the beans, or even the diseases of other crops, he suggests it's best to get a good diagnosis and take steps to have a better and cleaner garden in succeeding years.

Fusarium wilt in tomatoes, for instance, is caused by a soil parasite. Fruit from affected plants is smaller, more acid and of poor quality. But certain varieties are highly resident, including the Pritchard or wilt resistant John Baer for central Michigan and the Marglob for southern and central counties.

The bean browning can be avoided by selection of better seed. The disease indicated by the spotting is called bean anthracnose. The trouble is spread if the beans are picked, cultivated or hoed when wet with rain or dew.

Early potatoes showing yellow leaves with black circular spots and with some leaves turning brown at the edges probably have been affected by early blight and by leaf hoppers. Garden trash or weeds harbor the fungus of the blight. The hopper burn can be controlled by spraying or dusting the potatoes with some copper fungicide and lime or other material to give a whitish coating to the potato leaves

Gardeners who observed garden peas turning yellow before the crop was ready probably found a rot developing at the base of the stems, says Dr. Muncie. Too much rainfall caused the fungus parasite to thrive. Rotation of garden crops will help, seed treatment is another recommendation to prevent this trouble in the garden.

FEEDING WHEAT IS A WAR SHORTCUT

Michigan's use of some of the stored wheat made available by the federal government to farmers for livestock feed can be termed a shortcut in cost and feed supplies, claim members of the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College.

On the basis of current Lansing feed prices, there is an advantage to the government wheat of more than $3 per ton when compared with other grains, reports G. A. Brannaman of the college staff.

Steers fed ground wheat as the only grain have gained almost as rapidly as cornfed steers. Animals fed part ground wheat with corn, barley or oats have gained as well as those without the wheat.

"Urgent demands for beef warrant efforts to help supply food for soldiers, war industry workers and civilians," says Professor Brannaman. "Wheat from storage has been made available by the government at an attractive price. Quantities of roughage or pasture eaten by livestock insure against possible deficiencies in loss of vitamins during storage."

Less feed is required with wheat for a pound of gain on an animal than with any other grain. The wheat is higher in total digestible nutrients than oats and consequently is rated more fattening. Wheat has more protein than corn and requires less protein supplement.

Coarse grinding or cracking is rated better than fine grinding, but livestock feeders are warned that feeding whole will lead to waste.

Markets score cornfed cattle as better finished than wheatfed steers. Brannaman suggests the wheat is probably more efficient as a feed in early feeding than toward the finishing feed period for choice cattle. He suggests farmers should consult county agricultural agents, local elevators and AAA officials about wheat prices and sources of supply.

DEALER: But that engine is OIL-PLATED and runs like new. Good for another 30,000 miles. Its owner took good care of it . . . greased it and drained the crankcase every thousand miles.

MAN: I always thought that was the bunk.

MAN: All right . . . all right . . . I'm wrong. Tell you what. I'll give you three hundred cash and my car for that one if you'll wise me to the motor oil that fellow used.

DEALER: It's a deal. He used Conoco Nth oil. That's oil with the synthetic that helps keep both the motor and the oil clean.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: To help his partner, Cruger, keep Norland Airways in business, Alan Slade agrees to fly a "scientist" named Frayne and his assistant, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds Cruger has bought a new plane, a Lockheed, which is stolen while Slade is away. The plane must be found, or Norland Airways is through. When he returns Slade starts out again, with only two meager clues, to recover the plane. The first clue is the "devil bird" the eskimo, Umanak, believes comes from Echo Harbor. The second is Slade's hunch that the lost plane and the swan-hunter, Frayne, are somehow connected. He flies back to where he left Frayne, only to find that Frayne is apparently just hunting swans. There is no sign of the lost plane.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER X

He would be glad, he knew, to hear the roar of that engine again. He even quickened his pace as he recognized the cove where his ship was anchored.

Then his gladness vanished and a tingle of apprehension went through his body. For as he glanced down at the waterfront he saw that his mooring lines had been cast off and his plane was adrift. He could see it moving in the freshening breeze, circling slowly about until the pontoons grounded on a gravel-bar.

His response to that discovery was both immediate and unreasoned. He went sliding down the ridge side and splashing through the shallows as he rounded the cove end. The intruder aboard the plane must have seen him as he went.

Slade could make out a wide-shouldered figure clambering down to a float, a figure that hesitated for only a moment and then leaped into the shallow water and waded ashore. Once ashore he slipped away into the spruce slopes and was lost to sight.

Slade's first impulse was to race after him. But the most important thing, he remembered, was his plane. He went splashing out and climbed aboard. There his quick eye inventoried his instrument board, assessed engine and controls, and discovered no damage to his ship. His smile was grim as he replaced the breaker assembly which was essential to the life of his motor. Its absence, he suspected, had kept that wide-shouldered intruder from taking off and disappearing into the unknown. And that wide-shouldered skulker, he had every reason to believe, was Frayne's man Karnell.

Indignation was still burning through Slade's body as he gunned the motor and rose into the air. He circled twice over the lakeside spruce slopes, searching without reward for any sign of life there. Then he veered back and circled twice over the island-studded water where he knew Frayne's observation post to be. But the only sign of life he caught from that quarter was the sudden wing-flutter of a huge male-trumpeter, who interrupted his watchful driftings to lift his long neck and fling a cry of defiance up at the cloud-cleaving wings of his rival. Slade caught the sound of that trumpeted challenge, even through his engine roar, as he turned south and headed for the camp at the mouth of the Kasakana.

Slade had the feeling of being in more friendly territory when he saw Leke Avikaka once more under his floats. But no welcoming figures emerged from the shack as he circled over it in the evening light. No kindly old voice cetled out to him as he moored beside the landing stage.

A figure that hesitated for only a moment and then leaped into the shallow water.

That left him both puzzled and depressed, until his ear caught the sound of a distant detonation. He knew well enough the meaning of that blast. It meant that Zeke and Minty had foregone their usual supper hour to keep on with their mine work, delving like badgers along some new drift or pounding rock at the bottom of some new test pit.

Slade, standing back between the shadowy ore piles, could see Zeke crimp a mercury cap with his teeth and stick it into a dynamite cartridge before disappearing in the pit mouth. It was that old sourdough's fixed rule, he remembered, never to use powder until down to hard rock. Their methods may have been those of a passing generation, but they had found something worth while. For after a second detonation and a second scrambling down the pit mouth Slade could hear Minty's cackle of triumph as he inspected a fragment of blue quartz which Zeke's tremulous fingers held just under his nose.

"She's rich, all right," cried Minty. "You can see her with the naked eye."

"She's the best yet," Zeka agreed as he continued to squint at the ragged quartz slab. "And now we know she's there, you old thimble-ribber, it's about time to call it a day."

It was then that Slade called out to them. That call, through the long-houred evening light, caused Minty to wheel about with a startled grunt at the same moment that Zeke's long arm swung out to catch up a rifle that had rested unseen against the windlass frame.

"Put it down, you old quartz-chipper; put it down," was Slade's cry as he advanced toward them.

The two taut figures relaxed. The hostility went out of their faces. But Zeka's eyes remained troubled.

"You mustn't do things like that, Lindy. I might've given you a air hole through the esophagus."

"I'd rather you gave me a meal," said the new-comer, as they shook hands and headed toward the shack. "You're too old to keep to a sixteen-hour day like this."

Minty pointed an accusatory finger at the flyer.

"So you're givin' us the go-by thase days?" he questioned.

"What does that mean?" asked Slade as they trudged shackward.

"Weren't you in this neighborhood two nights ago?"

Slade stopped in his tracks.

"Why do you ask that?"

"'Cause I heard you when you came down to pick up them gas drums. And I heard you the day before, over the hills," Minty asserted.

"Wait a minute," cried Slade. "You don't mean my gas is gone?"

"You know it's gone, you night-prowlin' puddle-jumper. But why in heck did you tote off them two dozen old ore bags?"

Slade studied the two old faces so wrinkled with concern.

"You say you heard a plane?" he questioned.

"We sure did," said Minty. "And heard it more 'n once. What's more, I seen it.

"This," said Slade, "is going to need a little looking into."

Zeke agreed with him.

"We don't want no strangers snoopin' round this territory," he proclaimed.

"How about that nincompoop in specks who's nosin' out swans' nests?" questioned Minty. "He's the only outsider within a crow flight o' this camp."

"But he has no plane," said Slade. "And no need for one."

"Well, he'd better keep clear o' this claim," croaked the embattled Minty.

"But two can play at that game, Minty," Slade pointed out. "And there's something going on between here and Echo Harbor that needs a bit of looking into."

"I seen a plane all right," maintained the scowling Minty. "But I can't figger out why he'd be flyin' across empty country."

More friendly territory when he saw Leke Avikaka once more under his floats. But no welcoming figures emerged from the shack as he circled over it in the evening light. No kindly old voice cetled out to him as he moored beside the landing stage.

That left him both puzzled and depressed, until his ear caught the sound of a distant detonation. He knew well enough the meaning of that blast. It meant that Zeka and Minty had foregone their usual supper hour to keep on with their mine work, delving like badgers along some new drift or pounding rock at the bottom of some new test pit.

Slade, standing back between the shadowy ore piles, could see Zeke crimp a mercury cap with his teeth and stick it into a dynamite cartridge before disappearing in the pit mouth. It was that old sourdough's fixed rule, he remembered, never to use powder until down to hard rock. Their methods may have been those of a passing generation, but they had found something worth while. For after a second detonation and a second scrambling down the pit mouth Slade could hear Minty's cackle of triumph as he inspected a fragment of blue quartz which Zeke's tremulous fingers held just under his nose.

"She's the best yet," Zeka agreed as he continued to squint at the ragged quartz slab. "And now we know she's there, you old thimble-ribber, it's about time to call it a day."

It was then that Slade called out to them. That call, through the long-houred evening light, caused Minty to wheel about with a startled grunt at the same moment that Zeke's long arm swung out to catch up a rifle that had rested unseen against the windlass frame.

"Put it down, you old quartz-chipper; put it down," was Slade's cry as he advanced toward them.

The two taut figures relaxed. The hostility went out of their faces. But Zeka's eyes remained troubled.

"You mustn't do things like that, Lindy. I might've given you a air hole through the esophagus."

"I'd rather you gave me a meal," said the new-comer, as they shook hands and headed toward the shack. "You're too old to keep to a sixteen-hour day like this."

Minty pointed an accusatory finger at the flyer.

"So you're givin' us the go-by thase days?" he questioned.

"What does that mean?" asked

"Or what in heck he'd swipe two dozen ore bags for," added Zeke.

Minty's apprehensive eye rested on the young flyer.

"Looks to me, son, as though you was the bird to do some needed scoutin' round here. That Snow-Bell Baby o' yours could cover the whole Berrens while Minty and me was footin' it through fifteen miles o' muskeg."

"You're right, Zeke," Slade acknowledged. "And after I swing south tomorrow I'm coming back to do a little investigating along the Anawotto.

Slade, hightailing it for his home port on the Skye, headed southward with a sense of something unfinished, a contradiction unreconciled, a problem unsolved. His first move, after landing and having a few hurried words with the redoubtable Cassidy, was to hurry over to Cruger and his plain-boarded administration building.

"What held you up?" was that official's curt demand.

"Stolen gas," said Slade. "There's somebody robbing our emergency caches."

Cruger, at that announcement, wheeled about on him.

"At what stations?"

"At Wolf Lake. And later at Avikaka."

The pilot could see his chief's mouth harden with exasperation.

"So we're getting it from all sides!" exclaimed Cruger. "You know, of course, we haven't spotted a trace of that lost Lockheed?"

Slade nodded.

"I talked with Cassidy, down at the dock. I'd a question or two I wanted to ask him. It didn't help much."

"Nothing from Cassidy has helped much," said his partner. "But a plane can't be carried off like a snatched pocketbook. It can't be hidden away and it can't be sold and it can't be passed on to others."

"Then what's the answer?" asked Cruger.

"That's something still ahead of us," said Cruger. "Every ship in this Dominion has to pass governmental inspection and carry a license. It can't make a move without being checked and counter-checked. It couldn't land across the Line without customs permits and it couldn't stay there without being reported."

"It's pretty big country," was Slade's altogether unsatisfactory reply.

"Not to a cloud-dodger who can go from here to Akinvik in fourteen hours," contended Cruger,

Help save wires for war!

Like rubber and steel, telephone service is vitally essential to the war effort. Help conserve it!

The telephone system is now crowded with war messages, and sufficient lines can't be added because materials are needed for war production.

You can help war calls go through by using Long Distance only when you must—and by giving the number of the distant telephone when possible.

Keep all your calls as brief as possible. Remember each time you pick up your telephone that WAR CALLS MUST GO THROUGH!

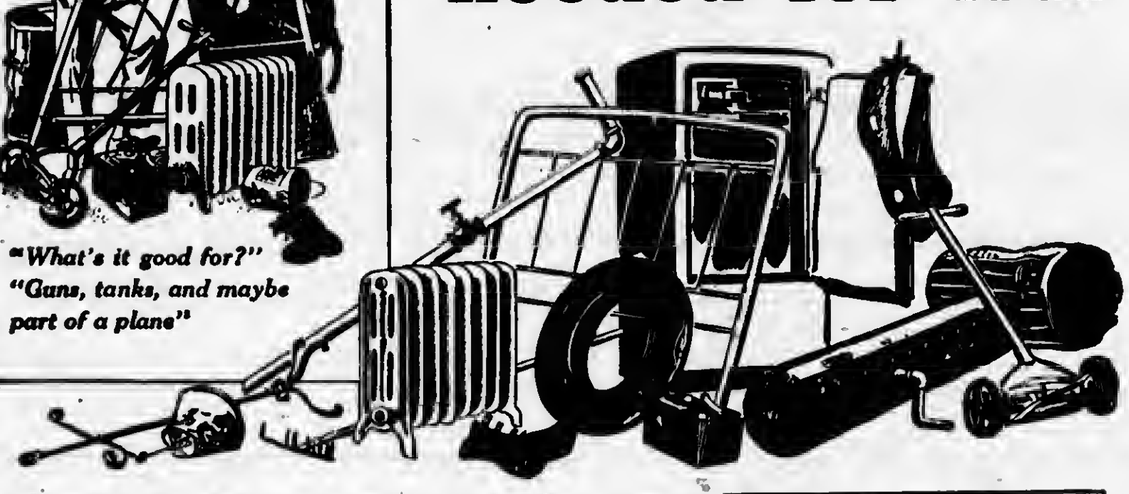
JUNK needed for War



In the attics and cellars of homes, in garages, tool sheds, and on farms, is a lot of Junk which is doing no good where it is, but which is needed at once to help smash the Japs and Nazis.

Scrap iron and steel, for example. Old radiators, lengths of pipe, refrigerators, garbage pails, broken garden tools...

It may be rusty, old "scrap" to you, but it is actually refined steel, with most impurities removed—and can be quickly melted with new metal in the form of pig iron to produce highest quality steel for our war machines.

Even in peacetime our Nation relied on scrap to provide about 50% of the raw material for steel. Now production of steel has gone up, up, UP, until today America is turning out as much steel as all the rest of the world combined.

But unless at least 6,000,000 additional tons of scrap steel is uncovered promptly, the full rate of production cannot be attained or increased; the necessary tanks, guns, and ships cannot be produced.

The rubber situation is also critical. In spite of the recent rubber drive, there is a continuing need for large quantities of scrap rubber. Also for other waste materials and metals like brass, copper, zinc, lead, and tin.

America needs your active assistance in rounding up these materials. The Junk which you collect is bought by industry from scrap dealers at established, government-controlled prices.

Will you help?

First—collect all your waste material and pile it up.

Then—sell it to a Junk dealer, give it to a charity, take it yourself to the nearest collection point, or get in touch with your Local Salvage Committee.

If you live on a farm, consult your County War Board or your farm implement dealer.

Throw YOUR scrap into the fight!

JUNK MAKES FIGHTING WEAPONS

One old radiator will provide scrap steel needed for seventeen .30 calibre rifles.

One old lawn mower will help make six 3-inch shells.

One passenger car tire will provide as much rubber as is used in 12 gas masks.

One old shovel will help make 4 hand grenades.

MATERIALS NEEDED

Scrap iron and steel.
Other metals of all kinds.
Old rubber.
Rags, Manila rope, burlap bags.
Waste Cooking Fats—Strain into a large tin can and when you get a pound or more, sell to your meat dealer.
NEEDED ONLY IN CERTAIN LOCALITIES: Waste paper and tin cans, as announced locally.
NOT NEEDED at this time: Razor blades—glass.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

CAMP CHARLEVOIX WEEKLY COLUMN

Ken Smith, Camp Scribe

By the time you read this, you will, no doubt, be getting packed up to come north to see your son and to enjoy our DADS' RODEO DAY, next Saturday. If you can, try to come in time for breakfast at 8:00 o'clock (9 o'clock your time) and thus start off the day with your boy. Luncheon will be served at 12:15 (1:15 your time) followed by a meeting of the parents. The big event of the day, the RODEO will be held at 2:30 (3:30 your time). The banquet, always a big part of the day, will be at 6:30 (7:30 your time). So get your times straight (we are only ONE HOUR SLOWER than war time now) and plan to spend as much time as possible here at camp. We are busy this week getting ready for you, so try to get your reservations in early.

When the Dads' committee met during the winter, they decided that during this summer some sort of a "hardening up" program should be carried on here at camp. So beginning last week, each morning before swim period, twenty minutes is spent in going through setting-up exercises under the expert leadership of Coach Charlie Bachman, Michigan States' great football coach. It is quite a sight to see everyone in camp going through these drills which this country is finding so necessary during the present crisis. So, dads, prepare to be put through your paces on Saturday, as this exercise period is also in the program for you.

As is usual, Wednesday last week was another great day for trips to leave. Charlie Bach took his group, Charlie Kinzig, John Davis, Bob Black, Bill Kerr, and Tom Dancer on a canoe trip down to Ironton. Chuck Niffenegger and Sandy MacDonell took their cabin group on horseback ever to Mt. McSauba. Barry Ewbank, Howard Kay, Bill Lutz, Buddy Cage, Buck Dillon, and John Bachman were on this trip. "Beau" our cowboy took charge of the trip. Jim Plate took his cabin over to Mt. McSauba, but they decided to make it a hike. These boys were, Quay Kinzig, Jack Niffenegger, Paul Smith, Jimmie Fox, Peter Hansen, Bill Farley, and John Hunting.

Thursday, cabin 17 took the snipes and sailed down to Ironton. Bill Kampe, Don Korten, Fritz Steketee, Jim McCerry, Bill Usher and Al Birdsall took this trip. This was an All-Camp night and Tex and his committee had a Green-Grey game evening. Everyone entered into several games and relays and from all reports a great time was had by all.

Friday seemed to be a good movie night with three cabins hiking into town, and the rest had the pleasure of seeing the MICHIGAN-MICHIGAN STATE football pictures, shown by Charlie Bachman.

Saturday the first long trip of the season got away. A group of Intermediates left by car for Mackinac Island to stay until today (Monday). Chuck Niffenegger and Jim Plate were in charge of the trip, with Johnny Craig going along to assist them. The boys were; Buddy Gage, Howard Kay, George Dowley, Quay Kinzig, Billy Farley, Peter Hansen, Paul Smith, Johnny Bachmen, Jack Niffenegger, Jim Lewis, and Mike Brand. When "Chief" left them safely established at the "fort" everything was under control and they were all set for a great week-end on this swell island. . . . The first part of the evening the camper-counsellor softball team played a team from town. It was a fine game with the visitors winning 12-9, Bart Newell pitched fine ball against fast competition. . . After the game we all came down to the clubhouse, and after some songs, Charlie Bach told one of his seemingly endless store of stories. . . Earlier in the evening a big truck pulled into camp. It was a group of twenty-five boy scouts from Ann Arbor. They are on a trip through upper Michigan and stopped here for a short visit. We found them a fine camping spot up on the athletic field, and they left this morning to continue their trip.

Yesterday we held chapel in the outdoor chapel with Paul Meech as the speaker. This was Paul's first experience in talking to our group, but it will not be his last, as he gave a fine message with good clear thinking in back of it. The boy scouts visited the service. . . In the afternoon, Charlie Bach took some of his good swimmers into town to swim in the water carnival which was postponed from last week. We gathered our share of places and the boys came back pleased and proud . . . After supper our campers' softball team played a fine game against the visiting scouts and after a great struggle, we won, 13-8. Again Bart Newell pitched a fine game with great assistance from Jim McGerry, Cary Buchman, Fritz Steketee, Doc Culver, and Bill Hoelzer. . . After the game we all came down to the clubhouse and had a musical evening. Konrad Matthael opened the program with a piano solo. He played a Chopin Nocturne, op. 72 no.1. Gene Davenport played "Day is Dying in the West" on his clarinet. Chris, counsellor in the Junior section played the Accordian and chose for his selections "Two Guitars" and "Dark Eyes". Don Neisch, our handicraft counsellor, sang "Deep River". Mrs. Reimann closed the program with two piano solos, playing Debussy's "Clair Delune" and Granger's "Country Gardens". It was a very worthwhile program and already boys are asking for more like it.

This morning Mrs. Reimann and Harry Bingham left for Mackinac supervising the transportation of getting the Juniors up there for their long trip. Our two groups just trade places at the fort, the Intermediates coming back and the Juniors staying right in the same place. Paul Meech, Chris, Bob Mackenrath will be abley assisted by Al Birdsall on this trip. The boys in the group are: Millard and Frederic Pryor, David Harding, Rex Emery, Johnny Church, Jimmy Tanner, Alen Becker, Peter Morley, Mervin Cotes, Tommie Thompson, Frank Smith, and Bill Seher.

See you all on Saturday, so until the big day arrives. . . . .Adios.

RECORD OF THE COUNCIL

AUGUST 3, 1942

The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date with Mayor Bridge presiding.

Aldermen present: Bellinger, Goss, Nettleton and Wood.

Aldermen absent: Ochs and Hooker.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and aproved.

(42-97) Message to Dr. McMillan and family.

Alderman Bellinger offered the following resolution, seconded by Alderman Wood.

BE IT RESOLVED, by the Council of the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, that whereas the death of Privy Albert McMillan, while in the performance of his duty with the armed forces of the United States of America, has taken from the city one of its finest young men, who, the citizens of Charlevoix knew would render whole-hearted, honest and honorable service to his country in its fight for the freedom of the people of the world, and which service has been cut short while he was yet in the prime of life, bringing home to the citizens of Charlevoix in one sharp blow the seriousness of the conflict being waged;

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, that the Council, on behalf of the citizens of Charlevoix, express to the bereaved family our honest and sincere sorrow and sense of deep loss in the death of their son and brother; and that we further convoy our heart-felt sympathy and consolation to them in their hour of darkness.

RESOLVED FURTHER, that a copy of this resolution be transmitted to the family of the deceased.

Adopted by unanimous vote of the Council this 3rd day of August, A. D. 1942.

On Motion the Council Adjourned.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

Because I realize our people are so vitally concerned about the rubber problem in view of the many statements issued to the effect gasoline rationing may be instituted on a nation-wide basis for the purpose of conserving rubber, I have endeavored to bring to you in this column the picture on this problem as unfurled down here.

In my news release of July 9th, I presented the views of the Interests concerned with making synthetic rubber from agricultural products as stated to a committee of congress by Dr. William Hale. Last week I related the views of the oil companies, as presented to the congress by Mr. William Farish, president of the Standard Oil Company, and this week I shall acquaint you with the rubber picture as outlined by the rubber manufactruers.

I mentioned last week that Washington papers quoted the rubber manufactruers as saying that the rubber shortage was a myth and they intended to prove the truth of their statement at an exhibition to be staged by them in Washington on July 22nd. I attended that exhibition held at the Willard Hotel and found that the rubber manufactruers have now pulled in their horns, so to speak, to quite a considerable degree. The industry has undertaken a considerable amount of research work and now comes forth will these proposals, which take on very much of an "iffy" atmosphere.

The industry claims that—if all driving is restricted to a maximum of 40 miles per hour; if car mileage is restricted to 40 percent below the 1941 level on a national average; if tire owners are careful to change their tires around every 2,500 miles; if tire owners take unusually good care of their tires, inspect them regularly and immediately correct any evidence of faulty brake wear, improper wheel alignment or any other mechanical imperfections in the car itself; if they are careful to keep the tires properly inflated and if they resort to safe and sane driving—with no quick starts and stops—then their tire mileage can be materially lengthened. Then, if the materials that would be required can be made available without handicapping the war program, their plan would keep all mechanically usable passenger cars operating the next two years.

In other words, regardless of their previous statement, the rubber industry in its exhibit made perfectly clear what is known to all of us in this country — that there is a very definite shortage of crude raw rubber, based on the fact that 89 percent of the world's crude rubber sources have been lost to the united Nations, and seven percent additional is threatened by the Japanese, leaving us with but four percent of the world's supply of natural row rubber, in addition to our own national stockpile of approximately 600,000 tons—which, incidentally is the biggest stockpile in our history—plus the rubber represented in some 130 million passenger car tires now in existence and the 454,155 tons of scrap rubber collected under the recent salvage drive.

Now how does the industry propose to keep our civilian tires rolling for the next two years? The Industry's proposal is a picture of what might be accomplished if minimum requirements of reclaimed rubber and other substitutes for rubber not major factors in the supply picture for military and vital civilian needs can be made available. Their plan would leave for the military and for non-tire civilian requirements nearly all of the nation's crude rubber supplies, over 85 percent of all of the reclaim producing capacity; all of the Buna S and Neoprene synthetic rubber capacity now scheduled, as well as a portion of the expected Thiokol and Butyl production. The present tire rationing program would be continued, although somewhat modified. Certain essential civilians would receive more consideration than others and be classed in A and B groups, but all other car owners would be included in a new class C. This group, representing about 23 million cars, would be able to get new or recapped tires made of reclaimed rubber, or of such materials as Thiokol and Butyl.

They propose to recap tires for all groups except where tires are considered too worn for recapping or where no carcasses are available for purchase.

In their exhibit the manufacturers showed numerous tires made of various kinds of rubber and a number made of reclaimed rubber. The Butyl and Thiokol tires are not nearly as safe for speeds in excess of 40 miles per hour, but driven at that speed they are easily good for 10,000 miles originally and another six or seven thousand miles when recapped.

In making tires from reclaimed rubber, it requires slightly over 17 pounds of reclaimed rubber and less than one-quarter pound of crude rubber. Such tires are good for 10,000 miles at speeds of 40 miles per hour, and when recapped will add at least another seven thousand miles. A recapped tire made originally from reclaimed rubber, and recapped with reclaimed rubber, requires less than 22½ pounds of reclaimed and less than four-tenths of a pound of crude rubber. After this tire has gone its 17,000 miles, it will still yield back about 12 pounds of suitable reclaimed rubber.

The raw materials needed to carry out the rubber manufacturer's plan for a two-year period would be less than 100,000 tons of reclaimed rubber; about 3,500 tons of crude rubber; 33,000 tons of Thiokol and 32½ tons of Butyl. All of these products can, and should be, available in plenty of time to cause no serious dislocation of America's wartime automotive transportation providing, of course, the three basic rules for tire care are followed out—namely, reduce the over-all driving 40 percent; reduce speed to 40 miles per hour and exercise the same care of the tires which every responsible automobile dealer and repair man has urged us to practise for many years.

All in all, the rubber situation down here in Washington still remains in a muddled condition. There is much debate and much criticism in the halls of congress on both sides of the capitol. Those primarily interested in alcohol accuse to petroleum industry of trying to hog the picture and keep the farmers from participating in the program. The petroleum industry counters by saying that they care not where the butadiene comes from for manufactruing rubber, as long as we get rubber in this country — and get it as quickly as possible. The President has intimated that he will shortly make a statement on the rubber situation, and under the present circumstances, it is to be hoped that he will clarify the picture and see to it that America does get rubber as quickly as possible, or at least some assurances that the cars will not be driven off the roads until it is absolutely necessary in order to attain the paramount issue of the day—Victory over the Axis.

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

In June, almost a million Americans joined the already huge army of production in factories, shipyards, offices and on farms.

In June, our output of ships and tanks and planes and guns, of ammunition and war equipment was nearly three times that of last November.

We have need for such good news—particularly at this time when Nazi tanks lumber through the ripe wheat fields of the Ukraine, in a drive which threatens the great city of Stalingrad.

In Egypt, the Nazis and their Italian accomplices are only 00 miles from the British naval base at Alexandria. In the Far East, Japanese patrols near the United Nations air base on New Guinea, an outpost in the defense of Australia. In the Atlantic, Axis submarines continue to sink our merchant ships at an alarming rate.

None of us would be foolish enough at such a time to underestimate the strength of our enemies. Yet, though our foes may gain victory after victory, we are building the instruments of their destruction. In the end, we shall overwhelm them by sheer weight of weapons and of manpower.

In announcing June production achievement, Donald Nelson, WPB chairman, warned that "boasting" about our progress would be "premature" and that there are no excuses for "undue optimism."

It is true that the biggest part of the job still lies ahead of us but it is heartening to know that we made more war planes in the first six months of 1942 than we made in all of 1941 and 3½ times as many anti-aircraft guns. We built more tanks in six months than in the whole previous year; 98 percent more machine tools; and 135 percent more ships.

The flow of scrap metals back to the steel furnaces has not increased as it should, despite the intensive nationwide salvage drive which still is going on.

Rumors that there would be a hike in the maximum price for iron and steel scrap—which caused dealers to wait for the rumored increase—were emphatically denied both by the WPB and OPA.

None of the United Nations which have been overrun by the Axis hordes really has been conquered. New testimony of the unconquerable spirit of our allies came last week in the form of a communique from the Jugoslav army, under the command of Gen. Draje Mikhailovitch. Confirmed by Axis admissions, the Jugoslaves said they had taken considerable territory in "occupied" Jugoslavia and had captured 1,200 prisoners.

Badgered and harassed by the continued resistance of the people of occupied Europe, the Nazis now are afraid of a food shortage and Heinrich Himmler, chief of the Gestapo, has been instructed to silence the complaints of the hungry—in the usual Gestapo manner.

On our own food front, those foods not under OPA control have risen sharply in price during the last few months. Lamb, for instance, the price of which is not controlled, went up more than 10 percent between mid-May and mid-June. Roasting chickens went up nearly 9 percent in the same period. Apples, which also aren't controlled, went up 25 percent in the one-month period and now are selling at prices 50 percent higher than March.

On the other hand, prices of controlled beef, veal and pork fell off and prices of other foods which are under price ceilings either remained steady or declined.

The GHOST PLANE by ARTHUR STRINGER

who added, not without acerbity: "And keep his eyes open!"

Slade was willing to let that pass.

"Did you ever stop to think about motives," he asked, "in the swiping of that Lockheed?"

"I'm not a mind-reader," retorted the older man. "But I know this much: a crack-pot who'd high-jack a plane like that would always be ready to take chances in the air."

"He must have known how to fly."

Cruger's eye became meditative as it went up to the wall map.

"You mentioned the Aviska," he said. "That's well on toward the Anawotto, isn't it?"

Slade acknowledged that it was.

"About as empty country as you've got on your run?"

"It's not on my run. But it's empty, all right. Mostly bird life and barrens. It's the district I dropped your swan-hunter in."

Cruger's gaze became reflective.

"Oh, yes; the swan-hunter. He told us he wanted to stay anchored there until after the freeze-up."

"And perhaps later," said Slade. "I saw him on my way south. All he seems to want just now is to be left alone."

"It just doesn't add up," said Cruger.

Slade tried to make his smile a casual one.

"How about me trying to make it add up?" he suggested. He had, as he stood there, been doing a bit of rough and ready mathematics of his own.

"What could you do?"

"After dropping my pay load at Conjuror's Bay," Slade suggested, "I might scout around where I felt it would do the most good. I mean, scout around in earnest."

Cruger's glance went up to the wall map again.

"The field's too big," he said, "no one man could fine-comb that territory. And in a couple of weeks we'd have you to look for."

"I'd take a chance on that," said the man with the Viking eyes.

"But you wouldn't even know what you were looking for."

"Don't be too sure of that," was the delusively casual reply. "I've a hunch or two I'd rather like to sound out."

"About what?"

"First, about that Anawotto country."

"This company can't operate on hunches," Cruger averred in a voice that was less friendly than his gaze. "And that's a fine country to get lost in."

"I don't think I'd get lost," Slade said. "I know the lay-out there a little better than most bush hawks. And if I went in I'd go with camp equipment and extra fuel and rations."

"And grow whiskers and go native," observed Cruger, "and leave us with two planes out of service!"

Slade ignored the note of mockery.

"I usually get back," he announced.

Cruger's face lost its frown.

"You do," he acknowledged. "But a trip like that would mean two-way radio, to keep in touch with us."

"I wouldn't want radio," said Slade. "That would be spilling the beans to everyone between Edmonton and Point Barrow. What I'd rather have would be a belt ax and an air mattress, and perhaps a fish net. And a magazine rifle. And an extra mosquito bar. The flies are bad in that section these days."

"Sounds to me, Lindy, as though you wanted to follow up that looney-bird-lover and look for swans."

"No, I won't be looking for swans," said Slade. "It will be for something bigger than a trumpeter."

About 3,000 tons of rubber will be saved for military uses by the WPB order which takes rubber away from the toy manufacturers. The same order saves 100,000 tons of steel, 1,500 tons of copper, 1,000 tons of lead, and approximately 3,000 tons of zinc.

Dysentery

With the coming of warm, dry weather, we may expect outbreeks of so-called dysentery. Dysentery is a vague term often applied loosely by the public and sometimes even by members of the medical profession, to all sorts of diarrheal disturbances. As a matter of fact, the term dysentery as we know it in this area should be applied only to an intestinal disturbance caused by certain bacteria.

Warm, dry weather is necessary for the growth of these bacteria in sufficient numbers to cause trouble. In such weather too often people leave their homes in great number and travel about seeking recreation, living in more or less abnormal surroundings and taking food and water very often from unknown sources. Flies, too, are usually found somewhere in the picture. With this combination existing dysentery usually puts in an appearance.

The average person when struck by dysentery usually lays his misfortune at the door of the last place at which he ate. He thinks he is suffering from a food poisoning, ptomaine poisoning or some one of the other such vague conditions. Food poisoning may occur at home or at a hotel or restaurant where the handling of food is beyond question. Ptomaine poisoning we know now probably does not exist. Dysentery being of bacterial origin does not develope as suddenly after exposure as does food poisoning because it requires some time for the bacteria to develop in sufficient quantities to cause trouble. In the meantime, the place where the infection was acquired may be hundreds of miles and several days away.

The disease usually begins with severe abdominal pain and a sudden diarrhea. The disease when severe brings marked prostration and quite frequently severe nervous symptoms develop.

As it has been said before, hot weather, flies and the taking of food or water from unknown sources is the ideal combination for the development of dysentery, but it may make its appearance anywhere. Flies are an important factor in the spread of dysentery as well as other intestinal diseases and this should be borne in mind at all times.

If your food store does not protect its food, including fruit, vegetables, berries, melons, etc., from flies, you should patronize one that does. Many an illness can be traced to food that was exposed to flies. In this day and age no food should be left unprotected from flies. Recently evidence has been found that seems to indicate that the fly plays a villianous role in the spread of infantile paralysis.

Avoid the fly and you avoid trouble, particularly intestinal trouble such as dysentery.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Dear Mr. Usher,

I have been receiving the Courier for some time but just never got around to writing. Old Uncle Sam keeps us pretty busy most of the time.

I sure enjoy getting the home town paper very much, for thru it I kind of keep in touch with the people I know back home.

People don't hear much about the Coast Guard as yet but it's one of the most important parts of our military forces and people will come to know more about it I am sure.

Since I have been in the service I have covered the largest part of the east coast and am in Boston now. The people out here are very nice to the men in uniform and much the same as the people there in Charlevoix.

I guess I have said enough for this time so will knock it off by giving you my new address and thanking you very much for the paper.

Hi Ken:

Thanks a million for sending the Courier. It means a lot to a fellow to receive the news from home when heppenings about Charlevoix seldom get in the Detroit papers, although the Detroit Lions advertise Charlevoix very highly in their write-ups.

This Navy life is really swell. Grosse Ile has been an air port for the navy for some time but it was just recently that they started to build up the complemont. Very few of the men get transferred here. They come from the recruiting station in Detroit, providing that when you enlist you ask to be stationed out here. On the posters they have out they state that it is possible to be stationed here for the duration. All new barracks and many more buildings are under construction. At present all of the flying students are english "limes" but it is expected that American students will begin training here.

If you know any of the "draft dodgers" who would like to join the Navy, tell them about Grosse Ile.

Thanks again for the Courier and I will be looking forward to the next issue of the Courier.

Yours truly,
Lewis Brown

* AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY *
* * * * * * * * * *

The wheat harvest is in full swing throughout Charlevoix county. Many farmers raise only enough wheat for home feeding of livestock, so the following information may not be of particular interest to them. But to those who do have a surplus to market, it may be of great financial benefit if they take advantage of the wheat loan provision of the AAA program.

Surplus wheat, that farmers ordinerily sell, may be stored on the farm as security for a loan. All growers who have complied with AAA acreage allotments are eligible for wheat loans at the full rate. In other words, those who are cooperating in the program may secure a loan of $1.17 per bushel on wheat properly stored with an additional payment of 7c per bushel for storage allowance. Thus, they can get a total of $1.24 per bushel as soon as the application for loan is approved. Those producers who have excess wheat will be eligible for a loan only at 60% of the full loan.

If you have 100 bushels or more of surplus wheat and wish to secure a loan get in touch with the AAA office in Boyne City.

Wheat loans may be secured until December 31, 1042 and mature on demand, but not later than April 30, 1043. The interest rate will be 3 1-2%

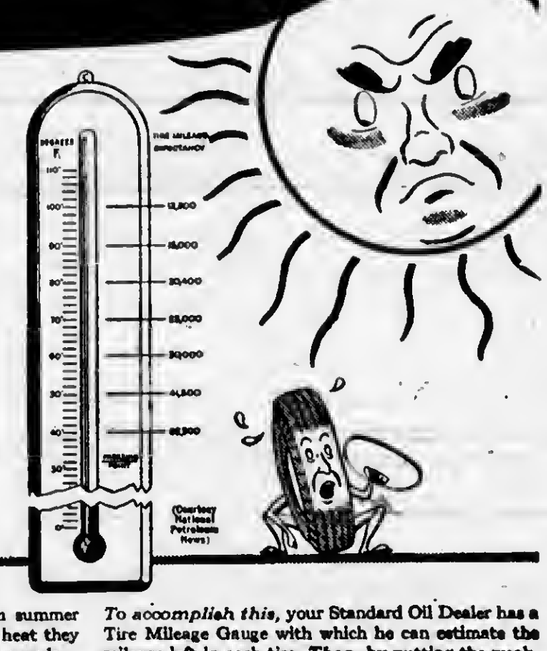
Even though SUMMER HEAT increases tire wear...



...here's what to do about it. The thermometer on the right tells a story that is vital to every motorist who wants to conserve his tires. It shows how much faster tires wear out in summer than during the rest of the year. Note that the mileage at 40 degrees is 5 times greater than at 100 degrees. At 90 degrees, the wear is over 4 times greater, and even at 60 degrees, it's nearly twice as great.

Rubber weakens under heat—wears away faster when it's hot. Your tires work up their own heat . . . the faster you drive, the higher the heat. Following are some ways to help your tires beat heat and survive summer temperatures . . .

1. Easy ways to cool off your tires . . . In summer your tires have a hard time throwing off the heat they develop in driving. Help them by reducing speeds—not just to 40 but to 30 miles per hour. This will cut tire heat many degrees. Reduce speed even more on curves. And, of course, avoid "jack-rabbit" starts and "on-a-dime" stops! Cool tires call for cool driving.

2. New tire-saving service by Standard Oil Dealers...Not just tire rotation—but proper rotation—is important. To accomplish this, your Standard Oil Dealer has a Tire Mileage Gauge with which he can estimate the mileage left in each tire. Then, by putting the weakest tire where it gets the least wear, the best tire at point of heaviest wear, etc., he can rotate your tires properly. Have him do this every 2500-5000* miles. And every week have him check every tire for proper inflation.

*Older tires should be switched every 2500 miles to get maximum mileage from the set.

thing so long as the orgsnization is responsible for hindrance to the war effort through strikes, production slow-downs, shorter hours and the hundred-and-one other means it takes to enforce its demands. Bob Burns reports seeing a deer swimming Tuesday in Lake Charlevoix off the north shore near Horton Bay. No doubt the animal was chased into the water by a dog, which is usually the case.

Was in hopes I'd be able to report further catches of mackinaw trout off South Point in Lake Michigan, but too much wind has kept the trollers off the lake for several days, so no results. As related before, however, Lake Charlevoix bass fishing remains swell.

They tell me there's already a shortage of spaghetti and that it won't be long before you can't get pork and beans—but just 'tween you and I, if we don't keep on buying war stamps and bonds to provide funds for munitions to lick the Axis, Hitler will see to it that there's a lot of other things we won't be able to get.

Will the many friends who brought dishes of food to the Dr. McMillan home please call 120 and describe the dishes, and same will be returned to them.—Adv. 31t1.

SHORTAGE OF SINGLE MEN FOR ARMY SEEN

County Draft Board Faces Problem of Filling Draft Quotas

Charlevoix county, like all other counties in Michigan and other states, is nearing the bottom of its reservoir of single men for induction, according to J. M. Foster, chairman of the local induction board.

A general reclassification of all registered men and the transfer of younger men who registered June 30 and have since reached the age of 20 years, will be made during August, Foster stated.

It has been officially announced out of Washington that draft quotas for the remainder of the year will be larger than any drawn heretofore. This will force all local boards to scan their list of men, both single and married, to find sufficient numbers to meet the new demands.

Married men without dependent wives are sure to be called for service soon, Mr. Foster stated. Near exhaustion of the list of single men will make this necessary in Charlevoix as well as other Michigan counties, he added.

PENNEY STORE SETS RECORD JULY SALES WAR STAMPS, BONDS

A remarkable outstanding accomplishment in the July drive for sale of war stamps and bonds has been made by the J. C. Penney Co. store at Petoskey, according to J. W. Scroggin, manager.

Of Emmet county's July quota, the store accepted $2,730 as its portion and reports a total sale for the month of $22,734.05. Prizes were offered clerks as a part of the inter-store contest and Mr. Scroggin announced the following winners in order: Dayton A. Beebe $5,274.25, George C. Thomas, Jr. $4,297.15, Mrs. Sabra Hubbard $3,573.00, Mrs. George Beer $1,274.65, Mrs. Clyde Maxfield $734.00, Eric Kleam $384.65.

In an advertisement elsewhere in this issue, Mr. Scroggin expresses appreciation to the store staff, to women who assisted in the sales booths and all others who contributed to the excellent record.

The U. S. has appropriated 148 billions for war since Pearl Harbor, about twice the total for all the others wars in our history.

The movie colony has had an unusual opportunity to see and appreciate how fine a job the USO is doing for our men in the army and navy—through USO clubhouses, camp shows and many other services that make the life of service men easier and brighter.

Because we know this and believe in it so strongly, all of us in Hollywood are giving everything we can to support this great undertaking.

Won't you join us? Whatever you can give will help.

FROM THE GARDEN CLUB

Cut your flowers and have them too. You can do just this if you cut carefully so that your garden is not stripped, treat properly so cut flowers will live longer inside and arrange cleverly, using only a few blooms.

In picking perennials, cut those types that are so prolific in production or habit of growth that the flowers taken will not be missed—or cut those flowers whose blooms are so distinctive that only a few are needed for a charming effect.

Cut flowers before the dew has gone, and as each handful is picked, plunge it into a bucket of water. After you bring them inside, put them in deep, cool water in a cool room and don't arrange them for two hours. Immerse in hot water or sear in a flame the stems of hollyhocks, heliotrope, poppies, hydrangea and wisteria. Scrape off or bruise the skins on stalks of woody nature.

To prevent the water in the vase from growing foul, trim off all leaves below water level. If you can't change the water daily, put a piece of charcoal in the bottom of the vase. Start with long stems, and when you change the water, cut a half-inch off the ends, always cutting on a slant. So long as bloom persists, keep cutting the stems until finally you float the blossoms in a flat container.

MICHIGAN TO GET WHEAT FOR FARMS

Five Million Bushels for Stock Feed to Be Released in State

At least 5,000,000 (M) bushels of wheat will be moved into Michigan during the next 12 months to feed livestock, Maurice A. Doan, chairman of the federal farm war board for Michigan, has announced.

Doan said the program would get under way immediately to relieve storage and elevator congestion in mid-western wheat markets.

Plans for the program were recently discussed in Charlevoix county at a meeting of farm bureau, grange, state department of agriculture and war board representatives.

Doan said farmers would be urged to purchase wheat supplies for feed now because of uncertain transportation facilities next spring.

"The problem of encouraging Michigan farmers to substitute wheat for corn in their feeding operations is extremely import," Doan said. "We face diminishing supplies of corn in the ever-normal granary due to heavier feedin., increased livestock, and competition for available acreage in the corn belt with soy-beans, which are vitally needed for their oil."

SEASON FOR TRAINING DOGS IS NEAR

Ban on Animals in Game Cover to Be Lifted August 15

Training of dogs on game may shortly become a familiar sight in Michigun rural areas, when the weather is cool enough to permit it, as training dogs on grouse and rabbits now is legal in the upper peninsula and training them on pheasants and rabbits in the lower peninsula becomes legal August 15.

Conservation department officials are reminding raccoon hunters, however, that they must wait until September 1, as training is allowed only in the 60 days preceding the open season, and the season for hunting coons does not begin until November 1.

No "pet permits" are being issued by the conservation department these days to persons "finding" young racoons, as these permits have been abused by 'coon dog trainers in the past.

Training dogs to hunt small game must be done during daylight hours. Handlers may carry no firearms other than a pistol containing blank cartridges, and for this a state police permit is necessary.

WILL AID NEEDY TO CONTINUE SCHOOLING

NYA Program Will Cover 7,000 Students in Michigan

Approximately 7,000 students at Michigan colleges and high schools who need financial aid to continue their education will be provided jobs during the 1942-43 school year under a curtailed student work program of the National Youth administration, it was announced here by Orin W. Knye, regional NYA administrator. Last year, nearly 18,000 Michigan students were given NYA jobs.

Reduced funds available for the new academic year will be allocated to schools on the basis of a specified percentage of enrollment and actual need. On the college level, junior and senior students will be given preference to enable them to finish their training as quickly as possible and thus be available for service in the war effort. The high school work program will operate in areas of greatest need.

Earnings of college students will range between $10 and $25 per month while those of high school students will be limited to between $3 and $6 monthly.

There will be three centers, including the veteran Alex Wojciechowicz on the squad. Tony Arana, Michigan State's great center for the last three years, will be fighting for the job of being Wojie's understudy, with Sloko Gill, from Youngstown College.

USO FUND DRIVE TO CLOSE MONDAY

CANVASS OF CITY BRINGING GOOD RETURNS

Help Maintain Morale of Fighting men by Giving to USO; State Bank Receives Contributions

Complete financial reports have not been made on the progress of the United Service Organizations fund drive in Charlevoix, which ends next Monday, August 17. Early returns have been encouraging to committee workers who are voluntarily giving their time to the cause.

While an effort is being made to contact everyone possible, it is not necessary to wait for a committee worker to call and solicit a donation. Contributions of any amount may be left with Dale Bradley, fund treasurer, at the Charlevoix State Savings Bank.

USO's slogan, "You help someone you know when you give to the USO," expresses the spirit and purpose of the organization. To keep loneliness, monotony and boredom from destroying the morale of the men of our armed forces, USO provides clubhouses with recreational facilities near army and navy posts and to men in overseas service.

At this date, 403 clubs and 182 other units of the USO are serving the armed forces in this country, and 28 clubs and other services are being operated for soldiers outside the United States. The clubhouses furnish a meeting place outside the post, where soldiers and sailors may find books, music, motion pictures, games, hobbies, writing materials, and everything for comfort and recreation while the men are off duty and on leave.

While troops are in transit, soldiers find a welcome in lounges and hospitality centers in railroad and bus stations from coast to coast. Free entertainment in camp is given by USO-Camp Shows, Inc., which is the largest circuit in the history of show business. USO follows the men on maneuvers, with writing materials, refreshments, movies, finding hospitality in private homes.

Through the USO, every citizen can make his pledge to stand behind the army and navy—by giving cheerfully, generously, and now.

CLAIM U. S. IN NEED 5,000 NURSES MONTH

Red Cross Urges Enrollment to Meet Army, Navy Requirements

American Rer Cross chnirman Norman H. Davis has launched a campaign to provide the Army and Navy with 3,000 registered nurses monthly.

"We need to get twice as many nurses a month as are now being enrolled," Davis said.

The Army has requested 2,500 nurses and the Navy 500. Davis estimated that there are 98,000 registered nurses in the country and 60,000 of these are eligible to become members of the first reserve and enter foreign service.

Initial pay for a member of the first reserve is $00 monthly. In addition, each nurse receives an issue of uniform, food, laundry, retirement pension after 20 years' service, hospitalization, 30 days annual leave and living accommodations, Davis said.

DRAFTEES TO LEAVE FRIDAY FOR CUSTER

East Jordan Has Charge of Send-Off Program at 9:15

Twenty-one Charlevoix county men, comprising the August draft quota, inducted July 31 at Kalamazoo and given two weeks' furlough, will leave Charlevoix Friday morning on the 9:50 train for Fort Custer.

A send-off program has been arranged to take place at 9:15 at the city hall. Following a policy of having each city in the county take turns in arranging the send-offs, East Jordan will have charge of the program.

Rev. James Matthews will preside. An address will be given by Rev. C. W. Sidebotham, and benediction by Rev. H. L. Tomlinson, with selections by the Charlevoix Marine band.

JUNK COLLECTION CAMPAIGN BEGUN

METAL DUMP LOCATED LUMBER COMPANY YARD

Funds Raised by Sale of Scrap Metal Aid Work Charlevoix Service Organization

The vital need of scrap metal to aid the nation's war production program has been brought home to Charlevoix people by establishment of a scrap metal dump at the Charlevoix Lumber Company's yard on Michigan avenue, just north of the bridge.

Under direction of the Charlevoix Service Organization, the scrap metal drive begun last week is intended to unearth every possible piece of metal which local citizens can find in their attics, basements, and garages. All junk so collected should be brought to the lumber company dump.

As some war plants are forced to close temporarily for lack of scrap metal, a crisis in production is imminent unless at least 0 million tons of scrap iron and steel, and great additional quantities of rubber and other materials can be salvaged.

Common household articles, beyond use or repair, can be turned into much-needed items such as—one old flatiron will make two steel helmets; an old wood or coal kitchen stove will make ten 4-inch shells; a large ash can will make two .30 cal. rifles; ten 6-foot electric cords will provide the copper scrap equivalent to copper used in 1,000 37-mm. anti-aircraft explosives; a lawn mower will make six 3-inch shells, while ten wash pails will make one 60-mm. mortar.

Junk collected will be sold to junk dealers for sorting and packing, to be shipped to mills. Funds raised in this manner will be used by the CSO for continuation of its numerous worthwhile activities.

THREE LOCAL MEN HAVE STARTED NAVY TRAINING

The public relations department at Great Lakes, Ill., naval training station announces three Charlevoix men have started recruit training there. They are Joseph Eugene Root, 30, husband of Minnie Root, Rt. 1; Junior Boss, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Boss, Rt. 1, and Robert Bergmann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bergmann, this city.

BALLOT DELIVERY EARLY THIS YEAR

Will Be in City, Township Clerk Offices by Sept. 1

Ballots for the primary election September 15 will be in the hands of city and township clerks the earliest on record this year, according to Fenton R. Bulow, county clerk.

Proof ballots have already been mailed to candidates for county, state, legislative and congressional offices, Mr. Bulow stated, and delivery to cities and townships is expected prior to September 1.

The fact that there were fewer candidates seeking office allowed speedier certification by the secretary of state and the regulations this year which allow men in the country's armed forces to vote by absent voters' ballot has served to speed up the preparation and delivery of ballots.

Men in the armed forces may exercise their voting privilege by making written application for absent voters' ballot with the clerk of city or township in which they are registered.

URGE MOTORISTS BUY FULL-YEAR LICENSES

August 31st Deadline for Use of Half-Year Plates

With deadline for use of half-year plates less than three weeks distant, Fenton R. Bulow, manager of the local secretary of state's branch office urges motorists to buy tags which convert half-year plates to full-year licenses as early as possible to avoid a last-minute rush.

The branch office is open daily between 8:30 and 12 mornings, 1:00 to 5:00 afternoons except Saturday, when only morning hours are observed.

It is necessary to bring car title to obtain passenger plates, registration slip and title to procure truck plates. It is not necessary to have trucks weighed the second time.

CSO TO TAKE OVER SUBSCRIPTION LIST

Complimentary Copies to Service Men Number Almost a Hundred

Complimentary Courier subscriptions are to be added to the Charlevoix Service Organization's lengthening list of functions, according to announcement by Ralph Hamilton, CSO chairman.

Instituted by this newspapar in May, 1941, the list of free subscriptions has almost reached the hundred mark. In order that the home town paper may continue to be sent to local men in the armed forces of the nation, it has become necessary that some financial arrangement must be made.

Contributions to the CSO fund for subscriptions to service men may be left with Mr. Hamilton at Wallace's gas station.

SET TRIPLET FAWNS PROVIDES UNUSUAL INCIDENT

A set of triplet fawn and their mother, seen on three separate occasions recently at Swan Creek wildlife experiment station, are cited by Arnold Haugen, station chief, as one example of the increased supply that this fall will furnish a second season of deer hunting in Allegan county—the only deer hunting in southern Michigan.

ENROLL YOUTH IN FARM WAR EFFORT

WANT ALL BETWEEN AGES OF 12 TO 20 YEARS

Certificates of Recognition to Be Awarded Those Completing 200 Hours Farm Work

(By C. A. Rood, District 4-H Club Leader)

A drive to enroll youths between the ages of 12 and 20 who are making a contribution to the country's war effort was announced this week by R. J. Baldwin, director of extension for Michigan State College at East Lansing.

"A large proportion of all farm work is being done by youths, due to the critical labor shortage," Baldwin said in announcing his program, "and everyone between 12 and 20 who is doing this kind of work, is asked to enroll so that youth farm workers may receive recognition for their contribution to the war effort. If all youths working on our farms will respond a fair measure of their great contribution of maintaining the nation's food supply can be made."

Special certificates of recognition will be distributed to all who submit a brief report showing that they have completed at least 200 hours of farm work this season. These certificates are acknowledged by Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner, Lt. Col. Harold A. Furlong, state director of civilian defense, and R. J. Baldwin, director of extension of Michigan State College.

According to C. A. Rood, district club agent, the drive will begin immediately.

"A special effort will be made to put this district—Emmet, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Antrim counties—'over the top' in this drive. All those who would be eligible are asked to enroll with their county agricultural agent."

PHYSICAL EXAM FOR SCHOOL BOYS PLAN

Selective Service Shows Many to Be Under Par in Health

Health examinations of students in Michigan high schools, particularly of boys in senior grades, will be instituted with the opening of many of the schools. Health science groups of Michigan, concerned over percentages of under-par youths disclosed in NYA and Selective Service examinations, are recommending intensive check-ups of physical condition of older boys.

Similar check-ups of pupils in lower grades are not new but examinations of older boys have not been carried out extensively heretofore except in the case of participants in more strenuous athletic events.

Full-time district and county health departments will work out details of examinations in areas they serve. The bureau of local health services of the Michigan department of health is the coordinating agency.

Defects uncovered during examinations will be called to the attention of parents.

HOUSEWIVES MAY OBTAIN CANNING SUGAR

Allotments Over Original Release Are Being Continued

With the early rush of rationing sugar for home consumption and canning purposes over, normal demands are now being made on the county rationing board by the public, according to Fenton R. Bulow, chairman.

It was pointed out by Mr. Bulow however, that housewives needing additional canning sugar may obtain allotments over the original grant by making written application to the board on forms which may be obtained at the office in the court house. An allowance on the basis of one pound for each four quarts of fruit to be canned will be made upon determination of need.

Applications may also be obtained from Henry Lee, of Boyne City, and Howard Porter, of East Jordan, rationing board members. The plan of allowing additional sugar for canning will be continued throughout the canning season, Mr. Bulow stated.

INGALLS APPLIANCE SELLING FUEL-SAVER

Take On Distribution in Charlevoix of Master Combustor

In an advertisement elsewhere in this issue, Ingalls Appliance Co., owned and operated by Glen Ingalls, announces acquiring agency for the Master Combustor, designed as a fuel saver in coal-burning heating plants.

Describing that the Master Combustor is to the coal stove what the air vent is to the gas stove, Mr. Ingalls states installations save 20% in fuel, allow burning cheaper grade of coal, prevents mass clinkers, save grates, prevents gas explosions, eliminates dirt and soot, reduces ashes, gives a quick hot fire which can be controlled with the stove door draft according to weather.

Mr. Ingalls invites the public to ask for free demonstration of these new units.

MICHIGAN OIL PRODUCTION INCREASED

Fifty Percent Increase Allowed to Aid War Effort

The Michigan oil industry's contribution to the stepped-up war production program is a 50 per cent increase in oil production in the first six months of 1042, as compared with the first six months of 1941, according to official figures released by the conservation department's geology division.

The increase of 3,304,721 barrels, from 0,902,008 barrels in the first half of 1941 to 10,356,729 barrels in the first half of this year is accounted for largely by the development of the Reed City, Winterfield and Headquarters pools. Michigan's strategic location with respect to transportation has given the increased supply greater than usual value.

HELP NEEDED AT CSO BOND, STAMP BOOTH

Edith Olach Made High Score in Sales for Last Week

A total of $464.40 in sales of war bonds and stamps has been reported from the CSO stamp booth for last week.

High mark of the week was made by Edith Olach, who sold $207.40, while Alice White came next with $156.50. Others who cooperated were Beverly Fisher, Dorothy Olach, Shirley Sturgell, Mrs. Harley Ochs, Mrs. Herbert Campbell and Mrs. Leroy Zelley.

Help is needed at the booth to keep it running on a full schedule. Anyone who has two hours to spare in the morning, afternoon or evening can perform a patriotic duty by registering at the booth to take a turn as a volunteer salesman.

BELVEDERE GOLF EVENT AUG. 17-21

OPENS SERIES SPORTS, ENTERTAINMENT EVENTS

Qualifying Round Scheduled Monday, August 17; Plan Other Annual Affairs

The annual Belvedere Club Golf tournament, scheduled August 17-21 at the picturesque Belvedere Golf Club course, will inaugurate a series of sports and entertainment features held yearly at this summer colony during August.

Gordon Gelfus, chairman of the golf committee, has announced that the 18-hole qualifying round will be played Monday, August 17. Players posting the eight low scores will qualify for the championship flight. Others qualify for subsequent flights of eight on a handicap basis. Qualifying round for the women's championship will be held Monday as well.

Competition in the championship flight will be for the Pingree trophy which must be won three times by one player for possession. Prizes of war bonds and stamps will be awarded winners of other flights.

Richard Moss, of St. Louis, Mo., was the 1941 championship flight winner. Mrs. Florence Ingham, of Buffalo, N. Y., won the women's championship.

With many golfers in summer cottages and at the Belvodero hotel, a large entry is expected.

Other Belvedere events for which plans are now being made are the annual tennis tournament, the masquerade and children's party and the annual enbaret party. While no definite plans have so far been made, it is possible the masquerade and cabaret parties may be held as one event this year.

4-H CLUB CAMP CLOSED FRIDAY

TWO COUNTY GIRLS WIN TRIP TO STATE COLLEGE

Ardith Howe Winner in Canning Judging, Patricia Sinclair Is Style Representative

The 17th annual Gaylord 4-H Club camp closed last Friday after a profitable and enjoyable week.

A delegation of thirty-nine club members represented Charlevoix county. Two of this group were elected counsellors for the week and several were selected by those in charge to assume various responsibilities.

Ardith Howe, of Charlevoix, and Patricia Sinclair, of East Jordan, were honored by selection to compete in state competition this fall at the state club fair for their meritorious achievement. Miss Howe became a winner in the canning judging contest by scoring 580 out of a possible 600 points. Miss Sinclair, a style representative, was one of two chosen to style her dress creation at the state club fair.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

In these days of soaring prices it will serve one well to control his temper and not indulge in fisticuffs, for the average person cannot afford to eat beefsteak, let alone buy it to put on black eyes.

We have the deepest admiration and sympathy for those men who have taken the responsibility for the successful conduct of this war. With few exceptions these leaders—political, industrial, and military—came up the hard way. From humble beginnings they rose to high positions in public and private life, requiring vast knowledge and understanding. They pursued the pattern of success and achievement, no doubt expecting that the day was near when they could relax and enjoy their gains in comfortable retirement. Suddenly the war changed all that. Now the men who have worked the hardest all their lives are called to the hardest jobs of all times. The least that those of us who are unfit can do is cooperate with them to our utmost and cheer them with all our might.

If there is any problem for which Dorothy Thompson has no answer, please name it.

I had thought right along that participation in the nation's war effort was paramount to any other consideration until Monday night when I attempted to persuade the city council to establish a scrap metal depot for the current collection campaign on the unsodded new portion of lakefront park adjacent to the roadway leading to the municipal dock. Thinking that conspicuousness of such a location would greatly aid in publicizing the metal collection drive, I was given, however, the impression that a salvage depot so located would be an unsightly spectacle and therefore should be placed in a less public spot. I don't believe any patriotic effort can be termed unsightly, no matter what its nature. So after considerable thought, I've almost come to the same conclusion as one prominent citizen who has suggested we have our digestive organs changed to

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

LANSING WHISPERS: A grand jury investigation into state affairs is a possibility for early fall, according to rumors from Detroit. . . Gasoline rationing is still considered inevitable; probably after election. . . . Governor Van Wagoner's campaign for re-election will be based publicly on retirement of the state's "longstanding $27,000,000 deficit, a sound financial administration, ending graft in state purchasing, establishing a sound civil service commission and a consolidated revenue department, wiping out present waiting lists on old-age assistance and liberalizing the state's social programs, opening idle state mental hospitals and adequate care for the crippled and afflicted." (Quotation from statement on filing of renomination petitions.)

"EMOTIONAL YEAR": The key to the 1942 primary and election, will be the war. If the war is going badly as it is today, watch out! If the tide turns, voters will be more careful, less in a mood to kick someone in the pants.

But generally speaking, 1942 is already tagged an "emotional year." That means that emotions rather than reason may dictate the outcome at the polls.

If this trend continues, it will favor Radio Orator, Gerald Smith, lieutenant of the late Huey Long, as against Elton R. Eaton and Judge Ferguson for the Republican nomination to the United States Senate.

HARRY F. KELLY, secretary of state, will wage a vigorous campaign after the September primary. For the first time in many moons there is no contest for the Republican nomination to the governorship. But that isn't any sign of inactivity or disinterest.

Both Van Wagoner and Kelly are shying away from an all-out stand on the home rule and constitutional convention ballots. The governor's Detroit support centered around the courthouse organ-

ARMY ADVICE

A private who used to be a raporter tips off the new soldiers going to camp as to what to take and what not to be bothered with. These are the things he says it's well to have:

Shower Boots. The cot will be a long way from the shower room. Let them be of rubber, if possible, for quiet and quick drying.

Plain white underwear. Colors are not used.

Plain white or brown sox. The army is generous, but no soldier ever has enough.

Talcum and shaving cream. Leather shaving kit is useful.

Address book. Half-dozen wire coat hangers and a ten-foot length of clothes line. A few extra towels and handkerchiefs. Swimming trunks. Sewing kit. A light-weight letter-writing kit always helps.

Let him leave at homa all those extra civilian clothes except one change of shirt and undies to hold over until the Army outfits him. He just has to send the civies home. Better not take radio and camera. Some camps han them.

These sound like useful tips. The main thing is not to clog up small quarters at camp with useless luggage, or be obliged to send it homa.

if friends will consider this list and make gifts accordingly, the soldier will find himself at camp with quarters containing what he needs, and uncluttered with useless gadgets which become a nuisance instead of a comfort.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: In order to save Norland Airways from bankruptcy Alan Slade agrees to fly a so-called scientist named Frayne and his assistant, Karnall, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds Slade's partner, Cruger, has bought a plane, a Lockheed, which is stolen while Slade is away. Suspecting that the disappearance of the plane has something to do with Frayne, Slade returns to where he left the swan-hunter, only to find him apparently doing nothing but hunt swans. There is no trace of the plane. That leaves Slade with only one clue, the "devil bird," or "ghost" plane which the eskimo, Umanak, first heard and which appears to come from Echo Harbor. On his way back to report to Cruger Slade stops to see his old prospector friends, Zeke and Minty, and learns that the gas cache he keeps near their cabin has been robbed. Now he and Cruger are talking and Slade is outlining the plans.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XI

Slade's first impulse was to proclaim that he'd be looking for a ghost plane.

"All right," Cruger said out of a prolonged silence. "You win. Give that Anawotto country the once-over. We're going bust anyway, the way things are."

Slade's lips thinned with resolution.

"I'm going to find that Lockhead," he affirmed.

Cruger remained unimpressed.

The hungry look was still in her eyes.

"When do you start?" he inquired.

Slade disregarded the note of mockery.

"As soon as I have a look around this burg," was his slightly abstracted reply. "And then a look around McMurray."

"For what?"

"To find a friend of mine," was Slade's unexpected reply, "who got hurt in a fight—Slim Tumstead."

"I didn't think you played around with camp bums," said Cruger. "What's your fighting friend got to do with this trip into the Anawotto?"

"I don't know yet," was Slade's quiet-voiced reply. "But it's going to help a little to know just where he's hanging out."

The cabin on the Kasakana, nestling between its shouldering hills, stood a place of peace as the sun mounted high above the spruce ridges and the spoonbills and wavys fed in the water shallows.

But that air of peace departed once Zeke Pratt had rolled out of his wall bunk and reached for his scarred old terrigans. From one of them, he saw, a lace was most unmistakably missing. He squinted about the floor boards. Then he groped and grunted about under the bunk end. Then his narrowing gaze centered on his camp-mate, whose smile was bland as he busied himself slicing sowbelly for breakfast.

"You took my shoelace, you Judas-souled old skillet-swabber," was Zeke's indignant accusation.

"What'd I want with your shoelace?" demanded Minty, edging away until he stood at the far side of the cookstove.

"You wanted it enough to swipe it from this-here terrigan," charged Zeke. He dropped down on all fours to inspect his companion's shoepacks. "And she's there, wrapped around your scrofulous old shinbone."

"She ain't," piped Minty.

"You gimme back that lace o' mine, or d'you know what I'll do? I'll call it quits for keeps. I don't aim to do minin' work with a human polecat who robs a camp-mate in his sleep."

"And I'm sure fed up with tryin' to live peaceful under the same roof with a rattlesnake in larrigans."

But by the time they had eaten, the hurricane had blown itself out. They were forlornly dependent on each other, in their isolation, and they knew it.

"Meat's gittin lower'n I like to see it," ventured Minty as he hung up the flour sack that served as a towel. "S'posin' you finish up the slrippin' on that new dike while I go scoutin' for a day or two."

"What'll you scout for?" demanded Zeke, secretly disturbed by the thought of being alone.

"Spotted a buck out by that old caribou crossin' yesterday," said Minty. "Reckon I'll go after him."

He had, he knew, a second reason for that excursion out over the northern ridges. He had a hankering to nose about a bit and find out what might be bringing an outsider's plane into that district of theirs.

Minty was too good a woodsman not to spot his landmarks and blaze an occasional spruce or jackpine as he pushed deeper and deeper into the broken country north of the Kasakona. He went on, hour after silent hour, encouraged by a showing of deer tracks and spoor. But he got no glimpse of his buck.

What most occupied his mind, as the sun lowered and weariness overtook him, was the problem of finding a comfortable place to make camp. And he had the needed wood and water, he discovered, when he came to a loon-haunted lake lightly fringed with spruce. He stoically made his fire, cooked his supper, and ate his bannock and bacon.

But the world had come back to her, washed down with strong tea. Then, lighting his pipe, he set watching the wild fowl on the lake water.

To the silent watcher, a moment later, came a sound that was neither a throb nor a drone, a far-away sound that grew stronger as he listened. Peering north, where a heated sun still hung red above the horizon, he caught sight of a plane. It was flying low, growing bigger as he watched. It showed dark, at first, against the evening light. But as it came closer and veered a point or two into the wind it became a framework of ghostly white, hauling down in the lake and slowly losing headway on the ruffled water.

Minty, blinking at the pallid wings, realized the ship was both bigger than Lindy Slade's Snow-Ball Baby and different in outline. It floated higher on the water, and gave the impression of being bob-tailed, as it drifted slowly in toward the shoreline where the spruce grows met the water.

Then Minty rubbed his eyes and blinked harder than ever. For, before he quite knew how or when, the plane had disappeared from sight.

Minty, who didn't believe in miracles, decided to look into what had all the aspects of a miraculous disappearance. He smothered his fire and rolled up his worn old four-pointer. Then he took up his rifle and quietly rounded the southerly arm of the lake, making it a point to keep as well under cover as possible.

But no sign of life, as he stopped from time to time, stood revealed to him. He seemed so alone in a world of twilit emptiness that he fell to wondering, as he pressed on, if his old eyes had been playing tricks on him.

Then he stopped short, arrested by the sound of voices.

"Why'd you have a fire on the other side of the lake?" one of these voices inquired.

"I had no fire," a more guttural voice responded.

"But I saw it as I came down," maintained the other. "And if you advertise this layout you'll last about as long here as a snowball in hell."

"I had no fire," was the stubbornly repeated protest.

Minty's first impulse was to creep a little closer. But on second thought he dropped behind the ridge and circled back through the scattered spruce boles. He noticed, as he traversed the valley that led to the neighboring ridge, how the timber had been cut away to leave a rough trail that led lakeward. He also noticed, as he skirted this second ridge, that its black-rocked surface was scored and seamed with shallow trenches, as though a prospector had been stripping and searching for color there.

Minty stood thoughtful a moment and then made his way higher up the sloping bogback that terminated in an abrupt cliff end at the water's edge. He crouched low as he went, for the cover thinned out as he ascended. But he could no longer hear voices. That troubled him a little as he moved forward to the crest of the divide. From there he could see how the lake bluff merged into a darker tangle of timber. And that timber, he saw, was a man-made canopy of spruce boles. It was an arbor-cave into which the wings of a plane could slip and be concealed. And under the casually woven cover that arched the narrow harbor between the rock-shoulders he could make out the pallid outlines of his vanished airplane.

A tingle eddied through him as he discerned a roughly made landing platform close under the plane wings, a landing platform on which he saw a double row of ore bags. They stood there filled and tied, as though waiting for transport.

Minty's anxiety for a better view of those ore bags prompted him to move to the upper peak of the ridge. He hesitated about advancing down the open slope. And as he hesitated a sudden blast of sound broke the quietness.

He knew it was a gunshot, even before he felt the force of the bullet. The impact of that bullet, tearing through the blanket folds within three inches of his ear, twisted his startled body halfway around and sent him tumbling along the rock slope. He lost possession of his rifle as he fell. He kept on rolling and bounding down the long slope until his body collided with the underbrush that fringed the valley bottom. From the ridge top he heard a triumphant voice call out: "I got him!" But his one impulse, at the moment, was to put distance between him and that unknown sniper.

He crawled into the underbrush, grateful for the thinning light that was paling to semi-darkness. He wormed forward, seeking always any deeper cover that offered. He went on until he came to a stony cross gully quartering off to the left. Once in this he scrambled to his feet and ran forward, stooping low as he went. When he spotted a spruce grove on his right he dove into it, emerging on a slope of glacial hardheads along which he dodged from shadow to shadow.

He neither stopped nor rested until he had mounted a second ridge and lost himself in a second scattering of stunted timber. There, panting and wheezing, he sank down behind a ridge of granite.

But there was still peril, he felt, in that neighborhood. He pushed on through a sludgy bed of tules, crossed another timbered ridge, and came to more open country. There he studied the stars, made sure of his course, and began fighting his circuitous way back toward the camp on the Kasakana. When tired out he slept. When the sun wakened him, he ate and went on. The second night he slept for an hour or two, and then pushed doggedly on.

The sub-arctic light of morning was returning to the land when Minty reached the shack. Zeke, he found, was still asleep in his wall bunk. He awakened him with a shout tinged with bitterness.

"Your days o' peace is over, you pillow-lovin' old profligate. There's goin' to be war in these regions."

Lynn was restless and worried. For the third time in half an hour she crossed to the door and scanned the pearl-misted skyline that stretched away to the south. She told herself that she was merely watching for a familiar blue plane with weathered wings, a plane with the Flying Padre at the controls. But her thoughts, as she did so, were on another plane, on equally weathered plane known as the Snow-Ball Baby.

Her week of watching over old Umanak had persuaded her that she was not equipped for solitude.

She turned back to her patient when she saw Umanak lift his white-swathed head in an attitude of listening.

"Devil-bird coma," he muttered.

A moment later Lynn herself heard the familiar bee-hum of a distant motor.

"That's the Padre," she said as she ran to the door. A moment later she was hurrying down the slope to the waterfront.

But the long-legged figure that emerged from the cabin was not that of the Flying Padre. She brushed back her wind-blown hair to see Alan striding toward her.

He must have caught the surge of joy that swept up to her eyes, for he stopped abruptly and stood studying her upturned face. He did

Bomb 'em with JUNK

Let's blast Japan—and Germany—and Italy—with the chain-lightning of destruction that can be built from the scrap in our cellars, attics and garages, on our farms and in our places of business.

Scrap iron and steel, other metals, rubber and waste materials. It will all be used to make tanks, ships, planes and the fighting weapons our boys must have. It is needed at once.

Sell it to a Junk dealer—give it to a charity or collection agency—take it yourself to the nearest collection point—or consult the Local Salvage Committee... If you live on a farm, and have found no means of disposing of your Junk, get in touch with the County War Board or your farm implement dealer.

Throw YOUR scrap into the fight!

BOAT RIDES FOR NAVY

Yachtsmen on the Detroit River have thought up a volunteer job for themselves—giving rides to the sailors, and not mere joy rides, either.

The Navy men training there have been so busy studying about sea fighting that most of them haven't had a chance to set foot in a boat. The Naval Armory is in plain view of a water area crossed by more commercial shipping than any other place in the country. But the old trainig ship formerly used by trainees has put to sea for the duration, and all those inlanders in sailor suits have been grinding away at books and drill, still regular landlubbers.

So the yachtsmen, who were shocked by the circumstances, are giving extra-curricular courses in the practical elements of seamanship—how to read a compass, steer a course, handle the lines and see a storm coming up.

Certainly it's a relief to know that those sailors, packed though they may be with knowledge of how to shoot a gun, won't all step aboard a naval vessel for the first battle without ever having got their feet wet or having found their sea-legs.

RUBBER SOURCES

The farm bloc in congress has put through its plan for using more grain and other farm products as raw material for artificial rubber Whether the president will sign the measure is another question. He, along with many rubber experts, has insisted on a greater use of petroleum, of which there is an unlimited supply.

Everybody recognizes that farm crops have piled up for lack of foreign markets, until there is a natural desire to get rid of the surplus by almost any means. But it should also be obvious that in the present state of the world, it is desirable to carry along large surpluses, against the time when there will be an almost limitless demand for foodstuffs to feed a starving world.

She's 111—And "Too Tough to Die"

Hearty centenarian's explanation of why she's "young" interests scientists, even though their curiosity about her rules of living don't interest her, it will be revealed in an extraordinary article by Dr. Leonard Keene Hirshberg, director-in-chief of Institute for Medical Research, in The American Weekly with next Sunday's (August 16) issue of The Detroit Sunday Times.

SOFTBALL TEAM WINS OFF ZAIGER BEVERAGE

Keith Carey Scores in Eighth Inning of Game Friday

Charlevoix's softball team defeated Zaiger Beverage 5 to 4 Friday evening in an extra inning game at the waterfront diamond in Petoskey.

Keith Carey walked in the 8th inning, stole second and scored from second on an infield out.

Zaiger Beverage scored twa in the first inning when Bud Sommerville singled and Chuck Burkle doublad. Sommerville doubled in the sixth and scored on a double by Burkle. Peter Huzek singled in the seventh and scored on an error.

Keith Carey hit a home run into the hay over center field fence for the first Charlevoix run in the fourth inning. John Swanson doubled and Pete Tapovic singled for two runs in the fifth inning. Leroy Zelley singled and scored on a single by John Swanson in the seventh inning.

Charlevoix outhit Zaiger Beverage 9 to 6. Keith Carey made a great one-handed catch of a ball off Monk Cihak's bat in the fifth and threw to John Swanson at second to retire Pete Huzek for the only double play of the game.

Batteries were Carey and Smith; Sommerville and Zimmerman.

CONSERVATION DEPT. AIDING SCRAP DRIVE

Field Patrols Seek Out Iron to Salvage for War Effort

Turning a second time to its far-ranging field force, the state conservation department has begun a sustained scrap metal collection drive patterned after the recent unusually productive scrap rubber collection campaign.

Conservation officers on backwoods patrols and fire wardens and towermen on duty in remote regions have unusual opportunities to locate scrap materials in places seldom visited by others. Small lots collected will be turned over to local salvage officials, and the location of abandoned boilers, bridges, lumbering equipment and similar heavy material will be reported to the county scrap collection agency.

All field headquarters, fish hatcheries, state parks and game area stations are contributing scrap metal to respective county stocks. The major part of the drive will be concentrated in the next month, but collecting of old iron will continue for the duration.

LEASE OF PAROCHIAL SCHOOL IS DEFEATED

Large Number School Electors Cast Votes Monday

The largest number of school electors to vote on school problems in many years turned out Monday night to decide the question of whether the board of education should lease the local parochial school for the period of one year for one dollar. The proposal was voted down, 313 votes being cast against it, and 155 votes in the affirmative.

Polls at the high school assembly room were open from 8 to 10 p. m. for voting.

DRY SWEET CORN GRANDMA STYLE

War brings back some of the kitchen maneuvers that grandmother practiced and one of the tricks is the drying of sweet corn.

That suggestion comes from Roberta Hershey, foods and nutrition specialist at Michigan State College. There are other means of preserving sweet corn and other vegetables for winter use, but the oldtime way is called quite practical.

Victory gardners who have an excess of sweet corn should put some away for winter use. The winter supply will taste good and will relieve some of the coming problems of war transportation, sponsors point out.

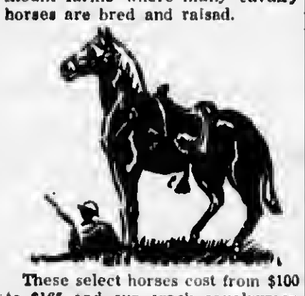
In grandmother's time, sweet corn was dried in the kitchen range. Modern stoves with regulators make the process simpler. Oven doores are left open to promote air circulation. Some housewives aim an electric fan at the oven door to hasten drying at fairly low temperatures.

Miss Hershey's recipe for dried corn, in brief, suggests taking any good table corn, husking and removing any blemishes or darkened kernels. The corn is precooked, on the cob, in boiling water for 8 to 12 minutes. Steaming is even better than cooking in water, and this process requires about 10 minutes.

Then the corn is drained and cooled and cut off the cob. The cut corn should be spread from a half to three-quarters of an inch deep on a tray. Temperatures for drying should range between 125 and 160 degrees. Too rapid drying hardens the outside of the kernels while the centers remain too moist. Oven drying may require five to six hours or longer. Even after that the corn should be dried further in the open, covered with cheesecloth to keep out insects. Storing for winter use can be in glass jars, coffee cans or stone crocks. A strip of muslin dipped in hot parrafin helps seal the tops of cans or crocks.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Hitler found out that his high powered mechanized and moterized army bogged down in the snow and mud of the Russian Winter. Although our Army is largely mechanized the cavalry horse is still a highly essential factor in this mountad division and in the Field Artillery. The Army also maintains remount farms where many cavalry horses are bred and raisad.



These select horses cost from $100 to $165 and our crack cavalrymen are expert riders and carry on the traditions which have followed the cavalry from the earliest dnys of the Army. Purchase of War Savings Bonds will insure good mounts for the Cavalry. You and your neighbors buying War Bonds and Stamps regularly every pay day can help buy these horses for the U. S. Cavalry. Invest at least 10 percent of your income in War Bonds.

He spoke very highly of Charlevoix as location of the Lions' training camp, saying that he found that in the clear air the players could work out longer, show less fatigue, and their breathing was much improved.

BONUSES

Premiums are an American institution. We like bonuses for doing our duty; paying promptly, serving what is asked of us, or simply doing what we should. Discounts for cash, a glass of lemonade after mowing the lawn, time off for good behavior—all, while justified in themselves, are simply baits to get us to go something desirable which we should have done without special inducement.

Smart communities and firms are using such baits to promote gasoline saving. A midwestern county fair, which continues to operate despite the OPA request not to do so, maintains that it is not a gasoline waster. To prove this and get patrons to save their cars, the fair is admitting free anyone arriving in a horse-and-buggy. While free admissions is not a large reward for virtue, it is something, and apparently just what some people need to make them do their duty.

RATIONED GAS

One of the saddest news pictures observed in the papers lately was a long line of automobiles standing patiently behind a gasoline truck at a filling station in New York. Motorists with tanks almost empty had started following that truck in the hope that it would lead them to a station where there was gas for sale. The line had grown and grown until it ran for several blocks and numbered 70 cars.

It was funny in a way, and yet somewhat pathetic. It reminded many Americans of similar queues in European cities, not of cars but of women, standing and waiting in the street for hours every day to get their pitiful food rations.

Odd names of lakes in Michigan include Jesse James, Gold Mine, Sleigh Runner, Haywire, Pee Wee, Off Near, Golf Course, Coat Tail, Hatchet and Pitchfork.

CAMP CHARLEVOIX WEEKLY COLUMN

Ken Smith, Camp Scribe

The big day has come and gone, and those of you who were here will agree that it was really a great day. Though Old Man Weather had us guessing a few times, Ol Sol shone brightly part of the day, and not a drop of H2-O marred the day. It was good to see you all here, good to see the parking lot filled with cars, and good to see the enthusiasm you all showed at the things we are trying to do here at Charlevoix. Many nice things were said about the camp and don't think it isn't swell to hear them. We do appreciate hearing them, and thank you all for saying them. Among the guests in camp that day were folks from far and near Among the towns and cities represented were: Lansing, Dr. C. S. Davenport; Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. F. Lutz, and Mr. G. E. Korten; Grosse Pointe, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Lambert, Mr. George Harding, Mr. and Mrs. Leo J. Kay, and Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Emrey; Battle Creek, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Gage and daughter, Martha, and Mr. and Mrs. George D. Farley; Ypsilanti, Mrs. Alex J. Fox; Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ralph Caldwell, Mrs. C. Roy Davis, Missea Alice and Edith Dowley, Mrs. Marie Kennedy, Mrs. Margaret Kennedy; Kalamazoo, Mrs. Pauline Winans and daughter, Sarah; Shaker Heights, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Barclay W. Newell and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Kinzig; East Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Lewis; Lima, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. MacDonnell and Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Evans; Albion, Mr. and Mrs. C. Reginald Smith and son, Dean, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Ewbank; Pontiac, Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Church; Stockbridge, Paul Dancer; Rockford, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Brand; Monroe, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Chapman; Benton Harbor, William K. Becker; Adrian, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Dillon; Midland, Mr. and Mrs. Alden W. Hanson; Grand Rapids, H. S. Greenawald, David Hunting and Dave, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. James McGerry, L. A. Cornelius, Mrs. Cornelius Steketee and Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Usher; Cuyoboga Falls, O., D. R. Mackenroth and daughter, Gail; Ann Arbor, Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Matthael and Fred Jr; Toledo, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. William Scher; and from Mansfield, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Milliard Pryor. I'm sure you will all agree that this was quite an assemblage. But before we go into the details of the day, let's look at the first of the week and gradually work up to the big day.

On Monday last week, Cabin 15, under the leadership of "Tex" took a snipe trip down to Ironton. The boys on this trip were Sam Greenawalt, Ray Culver, Bud Grimes and Larry Rossier. Cabin 17 went into town to the movies.

Tuesday found the league games scheduled and as it was the second last time for play, excitement ran high. Cabin 14 took a canoe overnight trip. The boys going were Sarge Harvey, Geno Davenport, Jack Tanner, Paul Winans, Cary Bachman and Bob House.

The big "GYP" night arrived Wednesday night with everyone in camp and practically everyone being taken for ride with some good trick. "Tex" and his committee sure did go to town on this program and needless to say the campers got a big kick out of it.

The last games in the League were held on Thursday afternoon with Michigan winning the honors. Cabin 16, Charlie Bach's boys, took an overnight snipe trip down to the favorite place, Ironton. These boys were: Chas. Kinzig, John Davis, Bob Black, Tom Dancer, and Bill Kerr. Cabin 10 went into the movies. Jim Plate led this hiking trip and Quay Kinzig, John Hunting, Billy Farley, John Niffenegger, Paul Smith, Jimmie Fox, and Peter Hausen were on this trip.

Friday was spent in the regular activities and in getting ready for DAD'S DAY. Beau had a long rodeo practice, the result of which you saw on Saturday. Don Neisch's cabin worked hard and long at clearing up the 1941 Pioneer Project. These boys really worked hard, Mike Brand, Jim Lewis, Bud Kampe, Ernie Evans, Chuck Lambert, and Gene Chapman. It was a great day for work and everyone was pitching into make the camp as neat as possible. A general camp shower night was held and early to bed for everyone.

Way before breakfast, cars and folks began to arrive and the stream was steady all day. Bob Mackenroth and Bill Matheny were the official greeters and it really kept them busy. It was good to have so many guests for breakfast, and it was especially true during the morning cabin-cleanup period. Boys liked having their dads do their cabin duties, and from the report which Mrs. Farley and Mrs. Gage rend at luncheon, the dads really did do a swell job. Congratulations . . . Dads and mothers visited their sons in the boys' activity during the regular instruction period. The highlight of the morning was the exercise period which preceeded the swim. Charlie Bachman, Coach at Michigan State, gave the exercises, and I'll wager that this morning there are many lame backs, arms, and legs, among you dads who took the drill. . . After luncheon, the Annual Dads Day Parents meeting was held on the porch of the clubhouse. Mr. Walter H. Gage of Battle Creek was elected chairman for the year with Mr. A. D. MacDonell of Lima, Ohio, was elected vice-chairman. Mr. David Hunting, of Grand Rapids, is the post president and many thanks should be given him as he gave much time and effort for Camp Charlevoix. After this meeting, the Rodeo was held and never have I seen so many cars up around the corral. There were many towns-people present and cars were parked all along the road, too, "Beau", our cowboy, really outdid himself and put on a splendid show. The Grand Entry was the first event, with "Chief" and "Beau" carrying the colors, followed by Gene Chapman, Barry Ewbank, Mike Brand, Paul Smith, Bud Kampe, Jim McGerry, Cary Bachman, Chuck Kinzig, and Tom Dancer. The next event was the Stake Race in which counceliors and campers were timed in the event. Beau won this for the staff with Cary Bachman winning for the Pioneer section and Hal Caldwell for the Intermediates. Beau next gave a fine exhibition of calf roping. The crowd enjoyed the boot race very much, Jim McCerry winning for the Pioneers and Mike Brand for the Intermediates. The Pony Express was the next event, it being a relay race for four men, each man riding then un-saddling the horse, for the next man to saddle and run to the third man. The staff won this event though campers Jim McGerry, Cary Bachman, Chuck Kinzig and Johnny Davis riding very well for the campers. Beau had also arranged a Man and Horse race. He rode Blitzen and raced Chuck Niffenegger. How was the poor horse to know that "Niff" was a star trackman and won the short race with ease. Chief riding Cimmaron raced Charlie Bachman who also won. So it was a great day for the "human" race. The Juniors took part in the Quadrills which was done very well. Several of the staff rode steers much to the delight of everyone and to the disgust of the steers. It was all-in-all a very fine Rodeo and several who had never witnessed the affair before admitted surprise at the completeness of it and at the splendid way in which our boys ride. Hats off to 'Beau'. . . . The Banquet was another high light of the day with Mr. Millard Pryor, of Mansfield, Ohio as the speaker of the evening. Don Neisch sang "Londonderry Air" and also did an Indien Dance later in the program. There was a great deal of singing with cabin 17 singing "The Bum Army." Charlie Bachman introduced two guests who gave us a few remarks. They were two members of the Detroit Lions Professional Football Team which is practicing in Charlevoix this fall. John Karcis, Backfield Coach, gave a splendid talk, while Bill Fiske, end from Southern California, added a few remarks. Fritz Steketee gave the greeting from the campers while Wes Brashares represented the staff. Mr. Walter H. Gage, newly elected President of the Dads' Committee also spoke a few words. It was a very gala occassion with much credit going to the committee for arranging so interesting a program. Wilbur Christopher, "Chris" to us, a counsellor in Junior Section played three accordian solos which everyone enjoyed. Taps were sung, then played on the trumpet by Fritz Steketee, and thus ended a great day at Camp Charlevoix, one to put in memory's page as one of the best EVER.

Sunday morning the chapel service was held in the outdoor chapel with Tom Hart repeating (by request) the sermon he had given the first Sunday in camp. The trio Don Nelsch, Tom Hart, and myself, sang "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot". Larry Rossier read the prayer and Bob House read the Scripture. The ushers were Cary Bachman and Bud Kampe. There were many guests present which added a great deal to the amount of the offering which this year we are dividing between the Foster Parents Service and the University of Michigan Fresh Air Camp. Thanks, parents, for your free offering, it was good of you. The afternoon was free and boys read, wrote letters, or slept. It was a great time to get rested up after a great day the day before. In the evening we had a Vesper Service in the Clubhouse around the fireplace. We sang several hymns "Day is Dying In the West", "Day is Done," Come Thou Almighty King," "Now the Day is Over" and the "Prayer of Thanksgiving." Konrad Matthael read a short meditation, after which Wes Brashares read the poem "If" by Kipling. Taps were sung and the boys were sent quietly back to their cabins.

Today the long trips, three day trips by horse and sailboat started and needless to say that this morning there was much rushing around, packing, and getting everything under way. Lets keep our fingers crossed for good weather for everyone.

Please remember that the Final Banquet will be held on Saturday night at 6:39, August 22nd, that is a week from this coming Saturday. It was put then so that you parents who went to come up after the boys can come up on Saturday then go back on Sunday. The Detroit and Chicago train will be leaving here Sunday night, and many of the boys are scheduled to leave that way.

So until next week, and our last chat in this way, . . . ndios.

PAIL, NOT RIBBON PAYS COW'S KEEP

It's the milk pail and not the show ribbons that are paying Michigan dairymen these wartime production months, comments A. C. Baltzer, extension dairyman at Michigan State College. He pays high tribute to the high producing cow, whether she be bluebood or a more ordinary grade.

From dairy herd improvement records, Baltzer cites the facts. Take two cows, he says, and call one Rudy and the other Judy.

Judy is 5 years old and so is Rudy. Judy's milk tests 4 per cent fat as compared to Rudy's 4.4 per cent fat. But Judy pours out 19,809 pounds of milk in 12 months as against only 4,228 pounds of milk produced by her sister Rudy.

From there on, it's simple arithmetis, according to Baltzer.

Rudy has produced 186 pounds of butterfat while eating up $92.46 worth of feed. Judy's product contains 432 pounds of butterfat and her feed cost $97.61. Rudy failed by $15.24 to pay for her feed, but Judy had an $83.88 return above feed cost.

Prevailing feed prices may be favorable to milk and butterfat production, yet Baltzer points out that unless a cow is a good producer her owner may face a loss for his labor, management, feed and for the roof he keeps over the dairy herd.

When Judy eats 190 pounds of corn worth $1.69, her milk pays back $2.98, but Rudy only gives back $1.36. Similarly, wheat at $1.19 a bushel means $2.95 worth of milk from Judy but only 98 cents worth from Rudy. Alfalfa worth $10 gets only $8.59 worth of milk from Rudy but Judy turns out $18.69 worth. It pays to know what a cow is producing and whether she's worth her keep, says Baltzer.

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

Labor Day isn't very far off, and when it comes it will differ from similar days in the past, at least in one respect. It will strike a distinctly feminine note, and this doesn't mean merely that the good ladies of the auxiliary will make the sandwiches. It means that women are playing an increasing part in the production upon which we depend for victory.

Here's the picture right now: There are 13 million employed women in the U. S. A., 609,000 more than there were last January, and 1,759,099 of these are working in war industry. By the end of next year, total civilian employment is expected to reach 53 million and of those 18 million will be women.

In other words, we must add between four and five million women to the roster of workers, if we are to reach the estimated peak figure for 1943 employment.

The U. S. A. has pretty well ended all output of things not needed for war but, now and then, WPB still finds places where we can tighten up. September 1 will see an end to manufacture of mattresses containing iron and steel, and after November 1 no more studio couches, sofas or lounges containing these metals may be made.

The WPB also practically has stopped civilian use of shellac, an action which will mean fewer phonograph records. (Record makers up till now have been able to get 30 per cent of the shellac they normally use.) The shellac is needed to protect munitions.

The office of Price Administration continues its unending battle to keep the cost of living down and to prevent evasion of price ceilings. For instance, last week OPA warned bedding manufacturers and deniers to stop combination sales forcing purchasers to buy unwanted merchandise to get an article which could have been bought as a separate unit last March. In other words, no one can insist you to buy a bedroom suite to obtain a bedspring.

OPA placed a temporary ceiling price on lamb last week to prevent rapid advance in prices. From now now on milk and cream in bottles or paper containers cannot cost more than it did last March, and people selling drinks in paper cups or containers must stop charging a separate price for the cups if they did not charge for them in March.

This year's crop of small grains and beans will be a record one and the Department of Agriculture believes storage on the farm is best means of keeping much of the crop until it is needed.

Here's a case of where blondes are preferred. Blonde hair, if it has never undergone a permanent wave, can be used in precision instruments. Consequently there is a market for it in an eastern war plant. The hair must be 18 inches in length and of fine texture. If it proves satisfactory, it will be purchased. Or if preferred, a medal will be given instead of cash, the cash being turned over to the Red Cross.

Go easy on the canned fish and meat at your grocer's these days so the supply will last as long as possible . . . needs of our soldiers and of the United Nations is reducing these stocks heavily . . . take care of stove pipe because indications are that it will be scarce this winter . . . the government suggests you clean the pipes inside and out with steel wool or sandpoper to lengthen their life . . . look for increased dehydration of foods for Lend-Lease requirements and our armed forces . . . facilities are being expanded so that some 60,000,000 pounds of meat probably will be processed in this way this year . . . dehydrated meat occupies about one-third the volume and weighs one-fourth as much as lean meat . . . 19 pounds of fresh vegetables weigh about one pound when dehydrated.

FROM THE GARDEN CLUB

Planting your lawn with strawberries seems to me very much like breaking the French law of good taste which forbids us to "mix the kinds," but in France one often runs across calendula and clove pinks in the midst of garden peas and lettuce.

Yet when necessity of war or soil demands, strawberries are not out of place in the front yard. In one lawn which has been brought to my attention, were planted 3500 white strawberry plants a foot apart to make a ground cover, as the soil is very gravelly and not suitable for a grass lawn. These plants are almost entirely ornamented with large white blossoms and berries possessing a wonderful aroma. By fall the yard was covered as the plants send out runners in all directions.

Whether the strawberry lawn will be valuable as a permanent lawn remains to be seen but it seems a worth while project.

An ordnance plant which turns out 1,000,900 pounds of war goods a day must haul in and out 18,000,000 pounds of materials or enough to fill 600 freight cars.

not speak. But his own eyes darkened as he detected the look of hunger in the questioning hazel eyes resting on his face. He groped for her hand, with his heart pounding. Then he took her in his arms.

She roused herself and forced her quickly breathing body free of the encircling arms. The hungry look was still in her eyes. But time and the world had come back to her.

"What is it?" he asked, conscious of the firmness with which she was holding him away from her.

"I've a patient there," she reminded him, pointing to the knoll-top surgery.

Slade strode after her as she moved up the slope. He remembered about old Umanak.

"How is the old boy?"

"That's what I'm waiting to find out," Lynn explained. "Everything looks all right, but, of course, I can't tell. Father'll be here, any time now, to take off the bandages."

"Will he be able to see?" Slade asked. "I mean Umanak."

"If hoping helps any," answered Lynn, "that old hunter will be following a dog team again before long."

Slade arrested her in the doorway.

"I may be out of a job earlier than I expected," he said.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

The unofficial recess of the Congress has given the membership a much-sought opportunity to get back home to visit their constituents. Such visits are of extreme importance, not only to the members, but also to their constituents and the nation at large. For, try as we may through diligent reading of the district newspapers, through all too infrequent visits from our constituents, and from even too infrequent letters from home, we find that we cannot adequately maintain our contacts. We cannot hope to keep abreast of their local problems, cannot keep abreast of their needs or wants, cannot keep ourselves adequately informed on their reactions toward developments of the day in the conduct of their government. After all, despite some recent developments and despite the necessity, implied or real, for drastic wartime regulations which curb our individual freedom, we are still a government of, by, and for the people and we who are charged with the conduct of that government must keep close contact with the wishes and the desires of the governed. And the folks have a just right to see us and talk with us face to face as often as possible in order to better be able to express their desires and to keep themselves informed on the whys and wherefores of events of the day. If, by such personal contacts we can in some measure help to relieve some of the considerable confusion inevitably attendant to the changeover from a peacetime to wartime economy we have served a most useful function and performed one of our most important duties.

Several changes of importance in the conduct of the war effort in Washington have recently taken place which must be of interest to us all. In the appointment of Admiral William D. Leahy as his chief White House advisor, the President has apparently sought to quell some of the criticism that there was too much political interference with the overall war effort. Heretofore, Mr. Harry Hopkins has been in the driver's seat as the chief advisor. Mr. Hopkins has long been regarded as an astute politician and over the years, based on results at the polls, his conduct of our peacetime economy has been successful for his party. But a war is something else, and the successful conduct of it calls for minds primarily military, rather than political. Admiral Leahy can be expected to concern himself far more with practical military moves rather than social reforms or the political aspect of the various moves needed to win the war. His appointment should prove very helpful to the war effort.

Another shift in power has also come about recently. From all appearances, Mr. Donald Nelson will find that much of his power has been shifted to Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell who is in charge of the vital Service of Supply. It is his sole duty to put fighting weapons into the hands of our fighting men, not on any one front nor any projected second front, but on the thirty-one fronts in the thirty-one nations on which our boys are now stationed. His is a most vital and most difficult task. Heretofore there has been too much conflict between the military minds and the civilian minds in the conduct of the war production effort. Mr. Nelson's WPB has not succeeded to keeping vital plants in operation. Through faulty distribution of critical materials such as steel and copper, the WPB has tended too much to divert critical materials to non-war industries while ignoring army-navy priorities. At the same time it has allocated too large a share of critical materials to other nations.

On the other side of the picture the civilians in the WPB have been inclined to believe that the military demands were excessive, that their enormous demands represented more materials and equipment than could be used. In any event there is now the worst tangle yet in the war production effort due to this poor distribution and apparently the military, headed by General Somervell will be charged with the duty of untangling it.

Meanwhile there is little doubt that Mr. Leon Henderson will continue to function as the man who will regiment the civilians. His job will become increasingly unpopular unless the people are told more clearly just what is expected of them and a real, sincere, well-founded reason for such sacrifices as may be demanded of them. Unquestionably shortages of civilian supply will occur with increasing rapidity in exact proportion as the military needs increases. Meats, especially beef, may not be rationed, but it is certain to become more scarce on the civilian markets. Canned goods will shorten as the military demand increases. Practically all the fish pack has been bought up by the military. Fluid milk will decrease as the military demand for dried milk increases, but any real shortage is said to be doubtful. Poultry and eggs will be plentiful, as will fresh vegetables and fruits. Wheat is in huge surplus.

Those of us who have to remain in the East will have our troubles. Gasoline rationing will cut travel to an absolute minimum. Houses heated by oil will be kept down to daytime temperatures of 60 to 65 and much colder at night. A shortage of grates and labor has made it impossible to shift many over to coal burners. Looks like we will all have to haul out the heavy flannels this winter in the East.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Jacksonville, Fla.
August 6.

Dear Ken:

I know I should have written a few lines to you before this, but have just been putting it off so long that when I did try to write, we were too busy with our work.

We were given our choice of courses yesterday, and I chose that of aerial free machine gunner.

The gunners' school is at Hollywood, Fla. We stay there for six weeks course and then it's off to get a few Japs.

Our graduation comes off this Saturday and we all graduate with our third class petty officers' rating.

I am really going to hate leaving Jacksonville, because I have made many wonderful friends, but that is the way with this outfit. You make friends and then have to leave to some other station and make new ones.

All of us boys may yell and kick about the service during the week, but when Saturday comes and we're on parade, each and every one of us is proud that we're part of such a great service as the U. S. Navy.

I wonder if you would hold up the paper until I send you my new address, as I hate to lose a single issue of the paper.

Sure hope I will be able to get home for a few days of late fall fishing. The fish we get down here just don't taste like fish to me.

I'll have to close now and get busy at field day, and that means scrub and swab down the barracks.

Once again I thank you for the paper.

Yours truly,
Gilbert Powers.

In 1007, the year that the tuberculosis Christmas seal was introduced to this country, tuberculosis caused 156,000 deaths in the United States. In 1940 with our population one-half larger, there were only 60,000 deaths from the disease. Statisticians figure that since the Christmas seal's first appearance, three million lives have been saved in our country.

ization which would be adversely affected by the proposed home rule. Farmers are opposing the constitutional convention, while labor is favoring it.

MOBILIZING MANPOWER: It's one of the coming problems as the nation makes further adjustments to meet demands of army and navy for upwards of 9,000,000 men by the end of 1943.

War factories were employing 6,000,000 persons last January 1.

By next January 1 the total of workers in war plants may reach 20,000,000.

As Michigan employment planners see it, women will have to be recruited for war plant service or men will have to be brought here from other states. The hitch is the post-war relief load.

SIX BILLION: Airplane awards to Michigan industry already total this staggering astronomical sum, while other ordnance contracts near the dizzy heights of nine billion dollars.

It's too much for wage-earners to comprehend.

It means a near zero for unemployment in the state, a high level of prosperity for hundreds of thousands of families.

FOOD FOR FREEDOM: Michigan farmers have been called upon to increase their output of certain foods needed for victory. And it is being done on the voluntary, democratic system, not the Nazi slave system.

The government has set a Michigan goal of eight per cent more milk production, eight per cent more eggs, nine per cent more hogs and 56 per cent more soybeans for 1942 over 1041.

In Michigan, 127,826 farmers participated in the 1040 AAA conservation program to conserve soil fertility while increasing food production.

SECOND FRONT: When the casualty lists arrive and thousands of Michigan sons are listed among the wounded or dead, then an important test of the "Second front" will come. Whether a front is established this year on the continent of Europe with Russia still in the fight, or next year with Russia possibly knocked out, the military action cannot be made without severe sacrifice of life. Will those who now demand loudly for opening of a second front uphold the government when the American losses mount? Here is a neat problem in public morale.

A UNITED FRONT at home is essential if we are to have a successful front abroad. Sceuyler L. Marshall, editor-publisher of the Clinton County Republican-News and an ardent isolationist before Pearl Harbor, expressed this sentiment editorially two weeks ago.

"If we cannot win this war before China and Russia fall, we may see them at least passively allied with our enemies. Don't say it can't happen. It has happened in France, Norway, and a dozen other nations of Europe.

"This war is not a political campaign. It is a life-and-death affair."

ORGANIZED LABOR, with its jurisdictional squabbles, is speeding up union of the CIO and AFL.

Hitler invited labor leaders to celebrate May Day in 1933, but on May 2 he abolished all labor unions. Mussolini's fascism was financed by industrialists of the north and Junker landowners of of the south. It outlawed labor unions. There is no collective bargaining, no strikes, no walkouts permitted in Italy.

Democracy's freedom can also become its weakness. A united front by labor is imperatively needed for Victory.

GUARDIAN OF LIBERTY: One of the first acts of Hitler and Mussolini was suppression of a free press. A few years ago President Nicholas Murray Butler observed: "Nothing could possibly emphasize more strongly the vital importance of a free press than the absence of any free press today in a majority of the nations of this modern world. . . There are abuses of a free press, no doubt, but they are unimportant in comparsion with the absence of a free press."

The newspaper today is the guardian of liberty, the last stronghold of democracy. When a free press goes, democracy goes with it.

EVERY man, woman and child is in this war. There are no longer only military fronts, as in past wars. Instead, our whole nation is a "front" and we are all "fighters" in the sense that our individual efforts are closely linked to ultimate victory. There are many ways to help: in civilian defense, by supporting war organizations, by helping pay for the war, by doing the best we can in our daily work. those of a cow, because when the city parking program is completed there will be nothing left for us to eat but grass, so we'd better be prepared to be able to digest it.

Every parent can give his children an advantage that will be of great value throughout life. Let him teach his children to modulate their voices, and to learn to sit relaxed and still. If these two assets are acquired, the children will enjoy an advantage possessed by few Americans. They will be distinguished in company, and will live long and peaceful lives. Most of us strain our voices and instead of sitting in a chair, we sit on a chair. Not even a beautifully modeled face is as lovely as a beautifully modulated voice, or a graceful posture when standing or sitting. Parents willingly spend a thousand dollars to get the teeth of their offspring straightened, but few give a thought to voice culture or posture reform. Girls are taught to bake biscuits in school or at home, but for one husband who is driven out of his home by indigestible biscuits, a hundred leave because they cannot bear the shrill voices of pretty wives who never learned to talk.

Anyway, for your information, the scrap iron salvage depot has been located at the Charlevoix Lumber Co. yard on the east side of Michigan avenue. Regardless of its location, it is everyone's patriotic duty to deposit their scrap iron which is so vitally needed in the war effort. Proceeds from the sale of the metal go to the Charlevoix Service Organization to finance its splendid work.

Friendship is indeed shallow unless sincere enough to withstand some personal sacrifice. Neighborliness should have the same meaning, in public and private affairs, alike.

Although our delay in getting into the war has proved dreadfully costly in men, weapons, and prestige, I think that most of us are glad that our entry came about the way it did. I think that decency always pays, and that the man or nation that practices the right way of life is favored by the gods. I think that this will be proved again in the outcome of the war. In daily life we honor the man who keeps his agreements and contracts, gives the other man a break, and is willing to do what he asks the other man to do. Our nation is in this war with clean hands, and we will fight to the finish and to exhaustion, if necessary, because self-respect demands it. If, in the end, we have nothing to show for our struggle but freedom to live our lives in our own way, that will be sufficient.

TUBERCULOSIS FATALITY DECREASES

Michigan Rate Lowest of Industrial States in Country

A victory which will not make the front pages of the papers is gradually being won in Michigan, as the tuberculosis death rate is forced down. In 1041 it hit the lowest point in history, 32.4 per 100,000 population. Statistics prepared by the National Tuberculosis Association show that this is the lowest rate of any industrial state. Only 13 states in the entire union have death rates lower.

Since 1908 when the Christmas seal work was started in Michigan, the tuberculosis death rate has been cut 68 per cent. If it had remained the same, 5256 Michigan citizens would have been killed by tuberculosis last year. Since only 1723 were victims of the White Plague, it may be figured that 3533 lives were saved.

"The chief weapon in this 35 year battle against tuberculosis, is education", said Theo. J. Werle, executive secretary of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association. "Tuberculosis associations have used every available method, from pamphlets to color movies, to make people aware of the facts about tuberculosis and its prevention."

PATTERNS OF HUNTING TAGS ARE ANNOUNCED

Orange Small Game, Red for Deer Hunters This Fall

The conservation department reports that resident hunters this fall will be wearing orange colored back tags in the small game season, dark red in deer season, unless they are archers, in which case the color is blue.

Non-residents will be wearing yellow if licensed to hunt small game in all parts of the state, fawn if they buy only the $5 limited northern permit. Non-resident deer hunters will wear green if they carry guns, pink if they hunt with bow and arrow.

MILKWEED FLOSS CONTRACT IS SET

NAVY CONTRACT AWARDED TO PETOSKEY PLANT

Will Require Farmers Harvest Two Million Pounds of Green Pods; Machinery Being Set

With the granting of a contract by the Navy department to the Milkweed Products Development Corporation in Washington last week, farmers in northern Michigan were given assurance there would be a use this year for the wild milkweed pods in accordance with the proposed program mentioned by the Petoskey chamber of commerce last May.

"Our contract," stated Mr. Lyon, of the company, who visited Petoskey last Saturday, "is arranged on a basis of 200,000 pounds of floss for this year, the balance to come in 1943 and 1944. To this amount we are adding an additional 100,000 pounds for experimental purposes and some commercial need. To obtain this amount of floss will require approximately 2,000,000 pounds of green pods."

Harvesting will vary in certain sections, but present indications are that it will start the last few days in this month and continue through mid-September. Price to be paid to the farmers for dry pods this year will be $50 per ton delivered in Petoskey.

First supply of harvesting bags are due to arrive in Petoskey about August 16th. Those who have filed survey sheets will be notified when bags are ready; others who still wish to enter the program are asked to contact their county AAA office at once, or write direct to the Petoskey chamber of commerce for an application form.

"Due to the fact that it will be impossible to secure sufficient iron and steel this year with which to construct the commercial dryers, farmers will have to arrange to cure or dry pods in their own buildings. Complete instructions as to harvest and curing to be given when bag distribution occurs. Because of necessity to use a certain type of bag in the curing process, such bags being supplied by the company, no pods will be accepted from harvesters who have not made application or filed survey sheets prior to August 22nd," stated Mr. Lathers, president of the chamber of commerce after talking with company officials in Petoskey last Saturday.

Company officials further stated that delivery of dry pods to the plant in Petoskey would start within six to eight weeks after picking, depending entirely on the period required to dry, but we shall make it a point to have all pods in Petoskey before December 20th, so as to avoid any impossibility of delivery on account of road conditions. To store 2,000,000 pounds of dry pods is quite an undertaking, and it will be necessary to arrange deliveries at certain intervals during the early processing period to cover the bulk delivery during November and December.

Arrangements with regard to taking over the Preston Feather & Sons warehouse building are now in process of completion. One separator has been completed and orders for additional equipment have been placed to be shipped later in September.

TOURIST TRAFFIC AT STRAITS ON DECREASE

Highway Department Reveals 43% Drop During July

July reports of traffic at the Straits of Mackinac showed at 43 per cent decline as compared with July of 1941, it was announced this week by State Highway Commissioner G. Donald Kennedy.

On the basis of these reports, Kennedy said that the Steamer Straits of Mackinac would no longer be held in readiness to work in conjunction with the other three state-owned boats. Crews which have been kept on board this boat will be released immediately. The boat, however, will be kept in condition to go into service should any of the other boats be forced to stop operations for any reason. Crews from other boats can be transferred.

The Straits of Mackinac has been kept ready for immediate service during peak hours as was necessary at several periods last year. Kennedy said that the present action would in no way interfere with maintaining of present published schedules.

During July of 1942, the boats transported a total of 46,009 as compared with 80,444 during the same month of last year. Total vehicles for 1042 through July are 128,044 as compared with 167,502 for the same period of 1041, or a decrease for the year to date of 23.6 percent.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Office Defense Transportation to Conduct Important Meeting at Ellsworth, August 14th

Recent revisions and new orders by the Office of Defense Transportation makes it quite desirable to hold a meeting to discuss information effecting the conservation of truck transportation. The necessity of moving farm products to market makes any changes in transportation services very important. The meeting will be held at the Ellsworth community hall, at 8:15 p. m. Friday, August 14. We are glad to announce that D. H. Stark, extension specialist in livestock marketing, and a Mr. Cooper, state leader of ODT, will attend this discussion meeting and will be glad to give their suggestions for the maintenance of our legitimate truck services in northern Michigan.

County Land Use Planning Committee meet Friday, Aug. 14, at Boyne City

After a lapse of several months, attention is now being devoted to making recommendations for most effective use of our natural resources in Charlevoix county. 300 copies of the Charlevoix county land use planning report have already been distributed to leaders covering all fields of agricultural efforts. This report gives a fine analysis of land uses, land types, and several recommendations.

The county committee made up of over twenty agricultural leaders will hear a brief report covering the studies recently completed. Then a discussion will follow covering all the results of the study so that all may have a proper background for offering suggestions and recommendations to conserve our natural resources. Toward the end of the session we will bring up the suggestion of land zoning with the hope that rather definite effort could be made in this direction.

We expect that a most instructive and profitable discussion will take place Friday night, August 14th, in the Boyne City federal building when the agricultural leaders will meet at 8:15.

FURTHER CUT SEEN IN TRUCK TIRE QUOTAS

Vehicles Essential to War, Industry Must Be Kept Going

Drastic new cuts in the list of trucks eligible for tires are being studied by the OPA as a measure to keep the most vital vehicles rolling.

The rapidly increasing tempo of our war program which has put vast numbers of heavy trucks on 24-hour shifts, together with other factors, has caused the demand for truck tires to increase far beyond the estimates made at the time tire rationing was instituted.

It already is becoming apparent that the measure recently instituted will result in denying tires to privately owned trucks transporting alcoholic beverages, soft drinks and other luxury items, will not be sufficient to meet this rapidly developing emergency.

The problem is to keep essential trucks on the job—the trucks that haul the building materials for new army camps, that keep the lumber camps going, that haul the parts for our machines to the assembly plants and distribute the essential foodstuffs to our whole population.

Applications for truck tires by eligible operators have outrun the quotas which cannot be increased enough. A choice must be made between vital operations and the semi-luxuries. More than 100,000 trucks were taken out of the tire market when beverage and other luxury carriers were dropped from the preferred list for replacements. Now further determinations must be made as to what new groups can be eliminated with the least harmful effects on our war effort and public necessities.

Reports have been coming to the OPA from all sections of the country, showing that applications for tires for trucks performing vital functions have been piling up in local war price and rationing boards because of lack of quota.

Vehicles badly needed on a military construction job in the Far West face indleness unless they can be provided with tires soon. A farming area where crop plantings have been greatly increased to provide the food that is a part of the war effort needs more tires than it has been possible to assign for tractors and other farm machinery necessary to the harvest.

The vital softwood lumber industry, which has been called upon by the government to double its production, reports increasing impediment to its operations and the prospect of laying up of large fleets of its trucks for lack of tires. Scores of such cases come to OPA every day.

The functions of trucks of this kind are vital to our war effort. Any substantial tie-up of the services they perform could defeat us more quickly than an invading army.

TEN COAST GUARD VESSELS VISIT THIS PORT

Flotilla Enroute to Coast Re-Fueled Here Saturday Night

The familiar phrase, "The Fleet's In," was a reality here Saturday night and Sunday as a flotilla of ten Coust Guard Reserve vessels enroute to the coast entered port for refueling.

And to those who frequent the waterfront, the drab Navy gray paint failed to hide the identity of severul of these former pleasure yachts which havo in the past years frequented Charlevoix harbor on summer eruises. The Wrigley "Wasp" was one such example.

The sight of tbese fighting boats provided a grim reminder of the conflict in which this nation is now engaged.

LINE-UP OF LIONS NOW TAKE SHAPE

HOPP AND MATHEWS PACE BACKFIELD ASPIRANTS

Season to Officially Open With Annual Varsity-Freshman Tilt Here August 30th

Some Indication of the personnel of the 1942 Detroit Lions football tenm was given Tuesday when the club went through a tough scrimmage session nt the Charlevoix high athletic field.

It appeared that Detroit has n wealth of backfield material paced by the veterans, Harry Hopp and Ned Mathews. Hopp who wus a fullback has been moved to left half, the offensive threat nt all times in the Edwards single wing attack. Hopp, an excellent passer and kicker as well us a runner should be one of the stars nf the National league this year.

Mathews, a product of U.C.L.A. will bo cavorting for the second year in the League and seems to hovo gained the necessary confidence that make the difference between an ordinary ball player and a star.

Several rookies hava shown they havo the stuff necessary for tha big time. Big John Polanski, Wake Forest fullback who scored 96 points in college last season, aeems a cinch to make the grade. Big, fast and tough tackler he took the eye of the coachos his first time out. In addition to Polanski, Edwards has Frankie Grigonis and Harry Seltzer two more speedy plungers for the fullback spot.

Tommy Colella, sensational tailback from Canisius college, is improving with every day of practice and should bo a valuablo addition to the Lions roster.

PLAN FOR FALL FISH FESTIVAL

REVIVE EVENT INITIATED IN FALL OF 1940

Posters for Registration of Summer Visitors and Sportsmen Advertise Event

Disregarding tire rationing and threatened gasoline rationing, promotion of a fall fishing "festival" is under way through joint effort of the Charlevoix Sportman's Club and the board of commerce.

Working on the theory that sportsmen will enjoy the relaxation provided by fishing as long as facilities permit, and that Charlevoix offers the best in fall fishing for the tired factory worker on weekend vacation, a strenuous effort is being made to publicize this city's attractions.

Following a plan instituted in the fall of 1940 and allowed to lapse last year, attractive posters showing actual photographs of steelhead and mackinaw trout, perch and smelt, species of fish abundant in the waters of Round lake, Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix during the fall seasonal fishing period from late September through November, have been posted throughout the city. At the bottom of each card is pasted a sheet of blank paper, upon which those interested in returning for fall fishing are requested to write their name and address. When steelhead start "hitting," muskinaws are striking trolling lures and perch and smelt are plentiful, postal cards notifying registrants that the "sport is on" will be mailed out.

Local residents are urged to call attention of summer visitors to the cards, urging them to register and return in the fall. It is believed that through the cooperation of everyone, Charlevoix' fall fishing can be made to draw hundreds of sportsmen here during the fall months after the regular resort season has closed.

PICTURES OF FOSTER BOAT COMPANY TABOO

Photographing War Plant Forbidden Under Regulations

Officials of the Foster Boat Company have brought to our attention the fact that a number of people have been observed taking pictures of the factory on Ferry avenue, both from passing automobiles and from boats on Lake Charlevoix.

While the plant is an interesting snapshot subject, as a war production area it is a forbidden target for cameras. Under existing regulations, plant officials or watchmen are required to report to police for investigation the identity of such individuals, or license numbers of their cars or registration numbers of boats. However harmless the intent, any further photographing of the factory may prove embarrassing to the photographers.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

After more than two weeks of drought, Friday night's rain came to save many a garden and make big potatoes out of little ones. A couple light showers since have helped, too.

A noncommissioned officer wrote this in an essay: "It is commonly supposed that the first duty of a good soldier is to die for his country. This is a mistake. The first duty of a good soldier is to make his enemies die for theirs."

That the federal rationing of tires and freezing of automobile manufacture is now beginning, and will eventually become an automatic check on use of rubber and gasoline is revealed by figures released by two state departments, the highway and department of state. Autos licensed in the first three months this year are down 50 percent, meaning 100,000 less cars on the highways. Weight tax receipts for the second quarter were $1,132,843, compared to $2,525,323 in the same quarter last year. Gas tax collections in June amounted to $2,843,800, compared to $3,367,013 last year. That's only the start, too, because when present tire equipment on nonessential cars wears out, they'll have to be put in storage.

For the duration of the war we insist that our fiction gives us happy endings.

Once I read about a man, who, either during or at the conclusion of the Civil War, found himself penniless and was so pleased not to have to worry about his money and savings any more, that he rolled over and over on the ground in sheer delight. I never had that much money myself, but my observation is that almost every healthy, sensible, and industrious person is a little pleased that work, sweat and thrift are, due to the present emergency, once more among the topmost virtues. From work, sweat and thrift comes character. Every self-made man is grateful for the years of self-denial, long hours, and hard work that conditioned him for his place in the world. In his later days of

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Sixty days ago a high-ranking army official in Detroit said "off the record" that two out of every five Michigan citizens recently interviewed thought the war would be over in 1942.

A few days ago the Office of War Information at Washington issued a frank statement warning the people that "we are losing the war" and that industrial production was insufficient to meet present needs.

It has been the endeavor of American newspapers to deal with the war realistically, shunning Pollyanna optimism that would delude the public and would weaken the home front. As a "historian in the present tense," we offer the following items, all taken from this column since January 1, 1942:

"We May Be 'Too Late'"

Jan. 7: "Despite the encouraging headlines of Nazi defeats in Russia, the facts remain that Washington now plans for a 3-year war. Production of arms, growing as it has been, is totally inadequate to meet new needs. Unless the German nation collapses from weak morale or a lack of needed supplies, we must wait until 1942 and possibly 1944 before there are sufficient arms and trained men to justify a full-fledged military offensive. Unless we strip for action quickly, we may be 'too late'."

Complacency About War

Feb. 13: "We Americans have never lost a war. To lose a war is almost an impossibility as any one who remembers his history books can tell you. It just can't happen—or can it?"

Public Demands War Efficiency

Feb. 26: "The American people are united in a grim determination to win the war whatever the cost. But they do demand efficiency. If this requires scrapping a few public officials, the latter will be retired overnight. Mad voters are apt to favor a change."

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

County U. S. D. A. Board Active In Defense Projects

The county U. S. D. A. war board met last week and discussed the progress of many defense projects that are to be carried out in the immediate future. Several projects are receiving considerable attention and are making suitable progress.

The rural fire control committee reported that a survey is being made through every rural war club to secure information relative to the fire fighting apparatus that can be found on most farms. The secretary of the war board has written to each rural club leader asking them to submit the list of farmers and what they own in the way of tractors, plows, and power sprayers that can be used in time of emergency. The committee is made up of Ed Starback, chairman, representing the Conservation Department; Ed. Reuling, representing the defense council, and B. C. Mellencamp, representing the county war board.

Another activity that is getting under headway is the scrap collection campaign which will contact every farmer throughout the county. The state WPA organization is furnishing the personnel necessary in completing the drive to collect all scrap materials left on Charlevoix county farms. Fred Mitchell, Boyne City, represents the WPA organization; Barney Milstein, East Jordan, county chairman of all salvage programs, and B. C. Mellencamp, represeating the war board, make up the executive committee in this drive. Private trucks will be engaged to pick up the material. On each truck there will be a two-man crew which will help the farmer in picking up all types of materials that are useful in our war effort. They will weigh the material on the truck and if need be, break down the larger units so that they can be moved.

They are interested in gathering old fencing, car bodies and other types of material that thus far have not been picked up by dealers of scrap metals. The farmer will be given a weigh slip and in due time the United States treasurer will send the farmer the cash for his materials. A schedule will be made out so that each farmer will know when the truck will visit his farm. This program will continue until every farm has been visited and all scrap metals and materials collected.

Another activity that is receiving immediate attention is that of endeavoring to list the names of all young folks throughout the county who are contributing their bit toward winning the war by working on farms and thus helping produce the foods and farm products that are so necessary. Letters have been sent out to each local war club leader, asking them to send a list of all young folks represented in their community. Those who have worked over 200 hours will be given a certificate signed by the Governor and others interested in the program. This not alone includes farm young folks, but from the urban areas also. We respectfully ask all young folks in the cities and villages who have picked cherries, or who are picking beans or any other farm products and who have worked over 200 hours to submit their names to the Agricultural Agent's office. Certainly there is a job for each and every one of us and we want to in some way indicate to the young folks that their efforts are appreciated by the state leaders.

Farm Account Cooperators to Receive Summer Visits, Aug. 24-25

Some forty farmers in Charlevoix county have been keeping farm records during this last fiscal year which started March 1st. Of this number approximately 15 have kept records over five years. With the shortage of personnal and the increase in numbers of farm account cooperators, it will be impossible to visit the more experienced farmers in keeping farm records. It is felt, however, that those who have not been the project for as long a period do appreciate having a visit to help them in having an accurate book.

A representative of the Farm Management Department, Michigan State College, and your local county agent will visit some 25 farms on August 24 and 25 to check the items in the book for accuracy and completeness and to present the farm analysis. The summaries for the previous year's farming operations have been mimeographed and show the farmer the efficiency of their operations. For instance, the income per cow, the eggs laid per hen, the acres worked per man and many other significant facts are shown in this analysis. Only through a farm account record does a farmer really know the efficiency of the various departments of the enterprise. From the analysis one can make suggestions and recommendations for the general improvement of the entire unit.

It is gratifying that some eleven farmers are keeping records for the first time and obviously a little visit with each is very helpful in having a complete set of records. This past year we have had greater interest in this program than in any other year. The farm account book is used by many more farmers for their own information but without being summarized as assisted. It certainly is helpful when it is time to file income tax returns to have definite records to present.

A machine-gun in action will use — in four minutes — 30 pounds of copper. That's a mile and a half of telephone wire.

Copper — and other materials — are most urgently needed right now for actual fighting. That's why it's impossible to add enough telephone lines to handle all the increased volume of calls caused by the war.

Long Distance telephone lines to the places listed below are especially crowded with military and war production messages. And those war calls must go through.

Here's what you can do to help:

1. Make only the most essential Long Distance calls, and avoid these crowded lines especially.
2. Keep your conversations as brief as you can.
3. When possible, give the number of the distant telephone you are calling.

The same kind of cooperation will improve local service, too. Try to keep all calls as short as possible. And please don't call Information for numbers listed in the directory.

Get Out of Debt

WE BELIEVE this is sound advice, both from your personal viewpoint and the country's. President Roosevelt has urged paying off debts as a counter-inflation measure. It is also wise preparation for the uncertain post-war future. We shall be glad to help if we can. Perhaps by consolidating your debts into one low-cost loan you can better concentrate on paying them off.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: To keep Norland Airways in business Alan Slade agrees to fly a so-called scientist named Frayne and his assistant, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds his partner, Cruger, has bought a new plane, a Lockheed, which is stolen. When Slade returns from the Anawotto he starts out, with only two clues, to recover the plane. The first clue is the "davil bird" which the blind eskimo, Umanak, hears. Dr. Morlock, the "flying Padre," has operated on Umanak's eyes in the hope of restoring his sight. If the operation is successful Umanak will be able to help Slade. The second clue is Slade's hunch that the lost plane and the swan-hunter are somehow connected. But when he flies back to where he left Frayne he finds him apparently just hunting swans. There is no sign of the plane. But on the way home he learns that his gas cache at the cabin of Zeke and Minty, two old prospectors, has been robbed. He tells Cruger of a third clue, the disappearance of a flyer named Slim Tumstead, who knows about both the Lockheed and Frayne's expedition. Zeke and Minty discover prowlers near their camp and set out to investigate. Now Slade is talking to Lynn Morlock, the Padre's daughter.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XII

"What's wrong?" Lynn asked, startled by that newer note where fearlessness had always reigned.

"Cruger and I may go bust. We haven't been able to spot our stolen Lockheed."

"That's all I'm getting out of it," he contended. "And I'm about fed up."

Lynn's brow furrowed with thought.

"But who could get away with a thing like that?" she asked. "Even in country like this?"

Instead of answering that question, Slade asked one of his own.

"Have you ever stopped to ask what became of your friend Slim Tumstead, the flyer you fixed up after that bar-room fight?"

Lynn's frown deepened.

"I'd scarcely call him a friend," she objected. "He needed help, and I gave it to him."

"But they'd taken Tumstead's ticket away, remember. He's lawless and reckless. And he was at the end of his rope."

"And is probably drowning his sorrows in some McMurray gin mill," suggested the girl.

"On the contrary," said Slade, "he dropped out of sight there, without leaving a trace."

"But what would he do with a plane?"

"That's what I want to figure out," affirmed Slade. "It couldn't be just cheap-john smuggling. And it couldn't be high-grading. Not, at least, unless that man of science who calls himself Frayne is fooling us. Our birdman, of course, might be putting on an act."

"But mining and trapping is all anyone could do in country like that. It wouldn't be smuggling out marten and fox."

"It's not furs, naturally," conceded Slade. "But why is a plane flying between Echo Harbor and the Anawotto? And where did that plane come from? And who's flying it?"

"You're as bad as Umanak," Lynn observed as they stepped into the rough-hoarded surgery. "That's what he keeps asking."

But Umanak surprised them by an abrupt movement of his bandaged head.

"Kabluna come back," he quietly announced.

That, Lynn knew, meant the Flying Padre. And her quick cross to the door confirmed Umanak's announcement.

"It's Father," said the girl, with her eyes on the blur of blue that grew bigger as she watched.

He could hear her cry of "Dad!" as she ran light-footed down the talus slope.

The Flying Padre's greeting to Slade was cordial but preoccupied.

"You're just in time, Alan," Lynn's father asserted, "to see whether I'm still a surgeon or not. We're going to unsheath our old friend Umanak."

Slade tried to be casual as they darkened the little surgery and examined the patient. But he was, he felt, the most excited of the three.

The Flying Padre, after a study of his patient's face, reached to the shelf for a candle, which he lighted.

"You see now?" he questioned as he held the small flame well above his head.

"Me see," said Umanak.

"High or low?"

"High up," answered Umanak.

The Flying Padre blew out the candle.

"And now?" he asked.

Slade could feel Lynn's fingers tighten on his arm.

"Me no see," was the old Eskimo's answer. "Light gone."

Slade could hear Morlock's sigh of relief as he stepped back and stood straighter.

"Me go find devil-bird now!" cried Umanak.

"That happens to be my job," said Slade.

"What's this talk about a devil-bird?" asked the Flying Padre, looking up from his instrument bag.

Slade explained about the plane that had been seen between Echo Harbor and the Anawotto. But the man of medicine was not impressed.

"I see planes," he observed, "in some mighty unexpected places."

The Flying Padre's gaze rested on the younger man's face.

"That's mean country to meander about in," he said.

"I've been over it," answered the man with the Viking eyes. "That's where I took those two swan-hunters."

"Wait a minute," cried the Flying Padre, arrested by a sudden thought. "What was the nationality of those swan-hunters?"

"It's hard to say," Slade explained. "But a good deal of their equipment was German. They were certainly foreigners."

"German?" meditated the older man. "That doesn't seem to fit in."

"Fit in with what?" asked the flyer.

"With what's been happening along the coast here. Short-wave sets have been picking up messages from time to time in Russian. A good part of it, they tell me, is in code that can't be made out."

"It might be a whaler," ventured Lynn, "between here and Echo Harbor."

"Then me go Echo Harbor," was the unexpected cry from Umanak, "and find out."

But Lynn disregarded that cry.

"Don't you remember, Dad, how we kept picking up stuff like that when the Russians made their transpolar flight three years ago?"

"Yes, I remember," said the Flying Padre. "But where are these people sending from? And what would a Russian be doing in this back yard of Nowhere today?"

"That," said Slade as he glanced down the talus slope toward the Snow-Ball Baby that floated in the shallows, "is what I'm going to find out."

A gold-green light lay over the evening world as Slade left Ivluk Inlet behind him. He was too close to the land of the midnight sun to hope for much darkness, even after two hours of heading southward. But, since his one wish was to remain unseen, he flew low over the scattered waterways and ridges, his floats all but brushing the meager spruce tops as he advanced on the thinning timber line. He flew with his lights out, feeling his way along by the stars.

The thought of flying dark over a steadily darkening terrain gave him the feeling of being singularly alone in a world that had fallen asleep. He wondered if, some day, camps and town-sites would mark that world of emptiness. And as though in answer to that unuttered question he observed the darkness punctuated by an unmistakable sign of life. Up from the empty world ahead of him he saw a signal rocket flare and die away again. Then out of the gloom his eye caught the repeated winking of a flashlight.

He watched those flashes closely, doing his best to read them. But they meant nothing to him beyond the fact that they were spelling out a message, and a message obviously not intended for him.

Slade made a quick decision. He banked and turned, still keeping uncomfortably close to the ridge crests, skimming over the broken woodland like a swallow skimming over ruffled water. He quartered off at right angles in his earlier course, idling on until he felt certain he was beyond the vision of the flashlight signaler. Then he doubled back until he found open water enough to make sure of a landing.

All was quiet along the starlit lake surface that took up his headway. He let his plane drift in closer to the shadowy shoreline. Then, making sure that all was still silence, he poled his ship patiently along the shallows. He worked his way westward, toward the source of the rocket flare, until he came to a landing spot that suited his purpose. There he moored his plane against the shelter of a sparsely timbered bluff and took up his rifle.

For several minutes, after mounting the near-by ridge, he stood silent and watchful. When no sign of life came to him he began picking his way carefully over the broken terrain toward the quarter from which the flashlight signals had first shown themselves. His caution became greater as he noticed where timber had been cut along the ridges that grew bolder as he advanced. He even observed where a hillside had been cleared and stripped. The scattered dikes and hollows clearly showed how a prospector had been busy there with pick and shovel. Slade crouched low in one of these hollows and struck a match, wondering if the light would show up a telltale vein of gold-bearing quartz. But all he saw was dark and pitch-like rock.

He went on up the slope, puzzled by the repeated signs of an enterprise that seemed without meaning or purpose. Then he stopped short, arrested by a movement above him.

In the vague light he could see a man, a huge-bodied man stripped to the waist, moving along the ridge crest. Balanced on his shoulders he carried what had every appearance of an ore bag, an ore bag so heavy that the big body bent forward under its weight. He seemed to be following a path that led into the scrub timber ending abruptly in the shimmer of lake water.

Slade, watching from the shadows, saw that figure return empty-handed along the hilltop trail. Then he saw it once more forge lakeward, once more burdened with the weight of its ore bag. He could not be sure, but something about that great body with its gorilla-like arms made him think of Karnell. And if it was Karnell, Slade felt, the man who called himself Frayne would be somewhere in the neighborhood.

That thought prompted the watcher to push farther up the slope, seeking the cover of the underbrush as he went. He crept on until he crossed a well-trodden trail and again entered the underbrush that furred the declining hill slope. From there he could see a strange-looking structure of spruce poles partly obstructing the view of the lake water between the shouldering hills. In the rocky cup behind the odd-looking spruce canopy he saw a small tent, and beside this tent he caught sight of a small campfire carefully ceilinged by a tarpaulin on four stakes.

But what held his attention was a figure squatting beside that fire, a figure in a leather flying jacket. He could not make out the man's face. But he could see him replace a coffeepot on the coals and drink from a granite cup, which he tossed aside when he had emptied it. Then the man by the fire looked up as a second man spoke to him, apparently from inside the tent.

"Not on your life," cried the man beside the fire. "I'll be damned if you'll get me to do any navvy work."

What was said in response to that Slade could not hear.

"I sweat enough unloading the damned stuff," contended the man in the flyer's jacket.

A figure emerged from between the tent-flaps and stood looking down at the fireside lounger.

"You would sweat less, my friend," the newcomer said with stately-voiced precision, "if you restricted your use of alcohol."

The other's laugh was not pleasant.

"That's all I'm getting out of it," he contended. "And I'm about fed up with living like a timber wolf."

"But that plane must be loaded, a ton a trip," retorted his companion. "And Karnell can do only so much."

Slade knew then that his guess had not been wide of the mark. The huge-bodied man who carried the ore bags was indeed Karnell. And the indignant figure standing above the man who still squatted beside the campfire was Frayne. When, a moment later, the fireside squatter rose to his feet and stood with his face to the light, Slade saw that it was Tumstead.

"Your bullhead can do the loading," Tumstead was saying. "I'm a flyer."

"Who's drinking too much to keep a clear head," amended Frayne.

"What I drink," retorted the other, "is my own affair. I've carried your cargoes and kept this crate afloat, haven't I? And now that an outsider or two is edging in on your little enterprise I'd rather like to know where I get off when the blow-up comes."

"There will be no blow-up, as you term it," was the cold-voiced response. "And there will be no edging in on this enterprise."

"But there's a snooper or two around this camp, and you know it. And when they stumble over what you're after I'm left out on a limb."

MOTHER: Now, Bob, blow out the candles, dear . . . sixteen of them this year!

BOB: Gee, Mom, that's a swell cake! See, I blew them all out. Can I wish now?

SISTER: Here it comes! . . . He wants to drive the car!

FATHER: Well, he's the ogo for a junior license. Bob, if you'll take some responsibility for the car—in stretching out its life—I'll say "Yes!"

BOB: Fine, Dad . . . I've already started. I stopped at that Conoco Mileage Merchant's station this morning to get air in my bike tires, and the station man gave me this book.

FATHER: Let's see. M-m-m . . . "INTO THE VALLEY OF DEATH." Interesting. In a certified test of six cars run to destruction, Conoco Nth oil lasted over 13,000 miles—more than twice the mileage averaged by five other big-name oils.

BOB: And look, Dad, about this OIL PLATING. Gee!—lubricant really sort of bonded to inner engine parts!

FATHER: You win, Bob. Conoco Nth can make the car give us the years of service we've got to have now.

POOLE-GUNTHER WEDDING WAS EVENT OF SUNDAY AFTERNOON

In a ceremony solemnized Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Miss Emilie Gunther, daughter of Mrs. Julia Cihak of East Jordan, became the bride of Elmer Poole Jr., of Detroit, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Poole of this city. Rev. Leigh H. Hagle performed the ceremony at the Methodist parsonage in the presence of immediate relatives and a few close friends.

Attendants to the couple were Ralph Nutter and Miss Marjorie Mayville of East Jordan.

The bride's gown of powder blue was floor-length, and she wore a corsage of white asters and sweet peas. Her bridesmaid wore a pink gown, with a corsage of red roses.

A 5 o'clock dinner was served to 45 guests at the home of the groom's parents. Bouquets of asters, dahlias and gladioli were used for floral decoration. On the bride's table was a six-tiered wedding cake, crowned by miniature bride and groom figures.

The couple are spending this week in East Jordan, and Charlevoix. They will reside in Detroit, at 2108 Clark street.

V-MAIL SERVICE IS AVAILABLE LOCALLY

Letters Sent To or From Service Men Outside Country

Charlevoix people who have relatives or friends in service outside the continental United States may send letters to them by "V-Mail" through the local post office.

Blanks specially designed for V-Mail service are available, with instructions for their use. The letter is written on a single sheet of paper, which is then folded to form an envelope, and is mailed in the regular manner. On arrival in New York or San Francisco, or what ever port of embarkation is designated, the letters are micro-filmed and reproduced upon arrival overseas. This enables concentration of thousands of letters in small containers of film, saving vital space on supply ships and also insuring swift delivery.

The service is intended only for letters sent to or from points outside the continental United States. Service men's letters to points in this country may be sent free, while civilian's letters require the usual postage.

The post office department separates V-Mail by army and navy post office units, and deliver it to the military authorities who control and operate the V-Mail stations, over which the post office department has no jurisdiction.

WILL ASK FARMERS TO CUT WHEAT CROP

Divert Land to Feed Crops to Lessen Wheat Surplus

Michigan farmers will be asked to underplant their wheat allotments next year and divert their land to soybeans, dry beans, sugar beets and other feed crops in an effort to reduce the nation's bulging wheat surplus, Maurice A. Doan, chairman of the Federal farm war board for Michigan, has announced.

The 1943 wheat acreage allotment was announced in June as 55 million acres—the minimum provided by law—by the U. S. department of agriculture. Doan said Michigan's share would be 967,000 acres, about the same as 1942.

Michigan wheat growers will vote some time next spring in a national referendum for the third successive year on the question of whether they wish to continue the use of the quota system for marketing their 1943 crop. Quotas have been voted for the past two years.

Doan reminded farmers to keep the referendum in mind so they could take it into consideration when planning their fall seeding operations. The exact date will be announced later.

The Secretary of Agriculture is required by law, Doan said, to proclaim marketing quotas and call for a referendum whenever it is apparent that the total supply of wheat for any marketing year will exceed a normal year's domestic consumption and exports by more than 35 percent.

LINDSAY RESIGNS AS WELFARE DIRECTOR

Will Be Succeeded by Sylvester Vaughan, of Kalkaska

William B. Lindsay resigns as supervisor-director of the County Social Welfare department and Bureau of Social Aid for Charlevoix county. Mr. Lindsay's resignation became effective August 15.

Mr. Lindsay has accepted a field position with the bureau of pardons and paroles of the department of corrections and will work in Muskegon, Ottawa, Allegan and Kent counties.

Mr. Lindsay has been in some phase of social welfare work in Charlevoix for about nine years and became supervisor-director in May, 1941. Since that time the public assistence program has been excellently administered.

Sylvester Vaughan, of Kalkaska, succeeds Mr. Lindsay, effective immediately until a civil service register can be established for Charlevoix county. Mr. Vaughan comes to Charlevoix county with a splendid background of experience in both the department of social welfare and bureau of social aid.

Employees in his office honored Mr. Lindsay with an informal farewell party Friday afternoon. Light refreshments were served, and a gift presented by the staff.

CO-OPS. CREAMERY NAMES DIRECTORS

East Jordan Concern Showed a Steady Growth Last Year

Two directors, Elmer Murray and Elmer Hott, of East Jordan, were re-elected at the annual meeting of the Jordan Valley Cooperstive Creamery, held August 3rd.

Charles Cetas, of Harbor Springs, was elected to succeed Arlo Wickersham, of Charlevoix. Howard S. Stephens and Clinton Blanchard, of Charlevoix, and G. P. VanDerArk and Lewis Osterbaan, of Ellsworth, comprise the rest of the directorate.

A tabulation of the 1941-42 year's business showed an increase of 14 percent over the preceding year in butter production and 15 percent gain in the amount of dried buttermilk made. Also 200 new patrons have been added to the association, bringing the total to approximately 1,400 members. Nine trucks are collecting the milk along the various routes.

The report showed that 88.3 percent of the total income was returned to the farmers for butterfat, at an average price per pound of 39c, compared to 33 1-2 cents in 1940-41. 1,503,320 pounds of butter was made, an increase of 221,914 pounds over 1940-41. Dried buttermilk produced totaled 190,035 pounds, a gain of 27,586 pounds over the preceding year. A comparison of the amount of money paid to patrons in the last three years is as follows, 1939-40, $260,769.31; 1940-41, $307,592.08; 1941-42, $496,290.43.

URGE HOUSEWIVES TO INCREASE USE CHEESE

Surplus Exists; Use Would Release Other Foods for Army

The agricultural marketing administretion announced today that domestically produced cheese will be featured by all food dealers as a "Victory Food Special" during the period of August 17 through August 29. Department of agriculture reports show that the commereial holdings of cheese in July were the largest on record for that food.

Housewives who use more of this "Victory Food Special" will be helping the United States win the war by leaving foods that are not so abundant for shipment to the armed forces and to our allies in Europe and Asia, according to John W. Piercey, area supervisor of the AMA. The amounts of cheese needed for lend-lease shipment and for use by the military forces are now being met.

As the "food basket" of the world during the war, the United States must plan its consumption so that highly concentrated foods may be left for shipment to our allies, and so that foods produced in abundance may be used on the home-front to keep civilians at the peak of health.

"Victory Food Special" campaigns offer farmers and processors a price-supporting market when unpredictable surpluses appear. The abundant supply of the "special" results in extra quality at reasonable prices for consumers.

THREE PLEASURE BOATS GO INTO WAR SERVICE

U. S. Navy Takes One, Coast Guard Acquire Two Craft Here

Acquisition of local pleasure craft for war duty hit an accelerated pace this week with three going to the Navy and Coast Guard services.

The El Rumba, owned by E. F. McDonald of Harbor Springs and Detroit, was taken over by the U. S. Navy and cleared port here Saturday night.

The two boats acquired by the Coast Guard were the S. T. Gilbert "Sylvia-Gee II" and the famous deisel-electric powered "Wanderer," owned by R. W. Allen, of New York. Both are undergoing preliminary preparation for duty.

Louis Mosier, officer in charge of the local Coast Guard anchorage office, has been placed in command of the "Sylvia-Gee II", it is understood, and will take the craft to its next destination. Mosier will be succeeded temporarily by Egzanes Cyerinak as officer in charge of the Anchorage Office until replaced or commissioned, it is understood.

LINE-UP OF LIONS NOW TAKES SHAPE

The line should be bolstered by the addition of George Speth and Henry Goodmen, both over six feet and both going better than 225 pounds. Sloko Gill at center and Tony Zuzio, George Sirochman, Al Gutknecht and Tom Tressa rookies and Augie Llo veteran guards give the club strength at that spot.

The Lions early season weakness at end has been remedied by the addition of five new wingmen in the last four days. In camp now and going great guns are Bill Fisk, veteran, Mike Balitsaris, Tuffy Chambers, Joe Stringfellow, Ed. Behan, Bill Meredith and Bill Kennedy.

Early workouts would indicate that the lineup would be something like the following; at center the veteran Alex Wojciechowiez, Llo and Sirochman at guards, the veterans Pavelec and Uremovich at tackles and Fisk and Chambers at ends.

In the backfield Paul Szakash has been working as the No. 1 quarterback with Harry Hopp and Ned Mathews at the halves. Polanski is the fullback.

The Lions will officially open the season at Charlevoix on Sunday, August 30 when the annual Varsity-Freshman game is held.

They went from here to Kalamazoo, where Mr. Fuller attended the American Legion state convention. On Wednesday the Fullers, also Dick Fuller and Miss Betty Wilson, of Petoskey, went to Elk Rapids to visit relatives. Thursday they drove to Petoskey to visit Mrs. Robert Wilson.

Mrs. O. W. Trayte, daughter, Mrs. Charles Asher, and grandson, Charles Asher, Jr., came last Wednesday afternoon from Sturgeon Bay, Wis., for a visit at Mrs. Trayte's home on Belvedere avenue. She will then return to Fort Myers, Fla., for the winter.

CHRISTINE HONIG IS BRIDE OF CLARE L. McGHAN AT DETROIT

Miss Christine Honig, of Detroit, became the bride of Clare L. McGhan, also of Detroit, in a ceremony performed Saturday, August 14, at seven o'clock in the evening. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gaister, of Detroit, while the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. McGhan of Charlevoix.

Rev. Andrews read the ceremony, for which the church was decorated with an arrangement of pink gladioli against a background of palms.

Attendents were Miss Doris Elzerman, as maid of honor, and Miss Mary Kutar, as bridesmaid. Paul Marquardt served as best man. Ushers were George Farrell and Grant Mudge.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a princess style gown of white satin, with a lace yoke and panels. Matching lace edged her fingertip veil, and the hem of her dress and long train. She carried a white Bible, with a lavender orchid tied with white satin streamers.

The maid of honor wore blue taffeta, while the bridesmaid was in pink taffeta. Both wore shoulder length veils and carried bouquets of pink rosebuds centered with an orchid.

Following the ceremony, a reception for relatives and close friends was given. The bride's table was centered by a three-tiered wedding cake, garlanded with white gladioli.

Mr. and Mrs. McGhan left for a trip to northern Michigan, and after their return will reside in Detroit.

Among guests were the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. McGhan, daughter, Joyce, and his grandmother, Mrs. George Meggison, of this city.

The groom is a graduate of Charlevoix high school, and also attended Michigan State College.

CAMP CHARLEVOIX WEEKLY COLUMN

Ken Smith, Camp Scribe

As all good things must come to an end, thus must we come to the final week of camp. This is a glarious sunny day, the wind just right to make the big waves wash upon shore with a delightful rush.' By the time you read this, some of you will be already to come north to get your son. The final banquet is on Saturday evening at 6:30 (7:30 your time). It will be permissible to take him any time after that. The train to Detroit and Chicago leaves here Sunday night and arrives in either city about 7:30 Monday morning. Sometimes plans to get the boys home are more difficult to arrange than plans to get them here. Do try to come to the banquet if you can, as great plans are being made for it and the banquet always brings the successful season to a successful close.

Last week was our week of big trips and there was a great rush around here Monday morning getting the boys packed and seeing them off. The first trip to get away was the horse trip which took the boys completely around the lake. They travelled 65 miles and from all reports it was "swell." "Beau" and Don Neisch were heads of the trip, ably assisted by Sandy MacDonell. The boys were Jim McGerry (who has become a fine rider this summer and assisted on the trip also), Cary Bachman, Charles Kinzig, John Davis, Gene Davenport, Johnny Hunting. They arrived back Wednesday noon. This trip had no more than left camp than the sailing trip was ready to leave. Tom Hart was in charge of this trip, assisted by Fritz Steketee. They sailed all over this huge lake and everyone enjoyed it a great deal. These boys were Bill Kerr, Tom Duncer, Bud Grimes, John Craig, Bill Kampo and Buddy Gago. They also returned Wednesday around noon.

Everything ran smoothly Tuesday, but Wednesday the Juniors had a terrific disappointment. "Chief" announced in the dining room several times that on Wednesday the Junior section will go into town to see the Lions. Well, needless to say the Juniors were all pepped up about the event and Wednesday afternoon were taken into Charlevoix to see the Lions. However, no one had thought to tell said Juniors that they were to see a football team (Detroit's professional football team is called the Lions). Well, jaws dropped and comments were many when the truck parked on the field to watch the football team practice; but how were the Juniors to know that Charlevoix does not have a zoo.

The annual birthday party was held at supper that night with those having birthdays during the camp season being seated at a long table with special decorations, place cards and 'nevrething. Mrs. Reimann is always in charge of this and this year the event ran true to form in being a "swell" affair. Billy Lutz gave some of his imitations, Chris played a group of numbers on the accordian. The highlight of the program was the skit put on by Mrs. Reimann, Lu Smith (our nurse) and Ruby Smith. Lu, as the patient, received terrific treatment from acting nurses Smith and Reimann, who after weeks of first aid instruction, surely showed us that the time had been wasted.

Thursday afternoon the Juniors hiked over to Mt. McSauby, where they had a great time playing on the beach, sliding down the sand dunes and cooking their supper and breakfast. Another group (Intermediates and Pioneers), who had not been in to see the Lions practice, were taken into town.

Friday more long trips left camp. Once again the horse trip was the first one to get away. Wes Brushares went along this time to help "Beau," as did Jim McGerry. The trip once again circled the entire lake and these lucky boys were Jimmy Fox, Billy Lutz, Ernie Evans, Bud Kampe, Gene Chapman, Buck Dillon, Barry Ewbank and Louis Scher. Tom Hart and Fritz Steketee soon had the sailing trip all ready and they sailed away about 10:30. Bob House, Don Korten, Hal Caldwell, Konrad Matthaei, Bill Usher, Chuck Lambert and Paul Winans were on this trip. Jim Plate and Don Neisch took their two cubins on a canoe trip down to Ironton. Among the boys on this trip were Jim Lewis, Jack Niffenegger, Frank Smith, Peter Hanson, Billy Farley, Quay Kinzig and Johnny Hunting. A very quiet evening in camp with practically the whole Intermediate and Pioneer sections away.

Saturday was a fine day for the boys to pass off tests in different activities. All activities have certain tests which are quite rigid and a boy tries to pass as many of these tests in each activity as he can. Well, Saturday was a great day for tests and many boys earned the elusive blue star which is given us each test is passed. . . In the late afternoon, those boys and men left in camp hiked down the shore to Strawberry Cove where each section cooked its own supper. Afterward Charlie Bach told one of his splendid stories to the boys.

Yesterday (Sunday) the chapel service was held in the clubhouse around the fireplace. Charlie Boch was the speaker. He chose for his subject "Loyalities", and gave a splendid talk. Mrs. Reimann played for the service. . . Around noon both the long horse trip and the long sailing trip arrived back in camp, so that at the noon meal everyone was present, and it seemed good to have the whole family together once more after a week of most everyone being gone on trips. . . In the afternoon the Green-Grey Track meet was held and after the whole afternoon of running and jumping events the Greens won another three points to add to their total. Steketee, McGerry, Birdsall and Matthaei were the big point winners for the Greens while Grimes tried to uphold the Grey's honor. At the vesper service in the evening, Don Neisch and Charlie Bach talked. Lu Smith (the nurse) played the piano for the service.

This morning the last trip left camp to canoe down the lake, up the Jordan river and back. They will return Wednesday. Tex and Bill Matheny are in charge of this group which is made up of Bud Grimes, Al Birdsall, John Craig, Bob House, Don Korten, and Cury Bachman. The waves are high to-day and these husky Pioneers will have a thrilling time.

I suppose that next Monday morning I'll plan on unleashing the ol' typewriter on you folks again, only to realize that the season is over, and those chats are a thing of the past.

Had a card from Ed Muran (Sgt) this morning whom several of you will remember. His address is, Officers Candidate Class, No. 33, Fort Sill, Okla. If you find a minute, I'm sure that Ed would like to hear from his many Camp Charlevoix friends. He says that he is very busy in officers' training. . . It certainly will seem good to have this war over and things get back to normal. Sometimes one has to stop and really think just how things were when they were normal. It seems so long ago, doesn't it?

The staff at camp wants to thank everyone of you for letting us have your son this summer. We have tried to give him a good time with lots of fun, plus putting into our living those ideals which he can carry away with him. Feel assured that your son was a vital part of this camp this season, and we all hope that another year will again find him enrolled at Camp Charlevoix "The Camp Where Pines and Friendships Grow". Until another season when "Once again We'll come together". . . "We will love thee, we will serve thee, Dear Old Charlevoix, and be ever Loyal to Thee, Dear Old Charlevoix."

The war has so slowed mail service from "down under" that requests from Canborra, Australia, for Michigan department of conservation forestry publications, mailed before the war began for the United States, are only now being received. The war has not halted such correspondence, however, as the most recent request from Honolulu is dated January 19, 1942.

Reports on a recent inquiry sent out to former Navy men who were still following the skilled trades they had learned in the Navy showed the average salary of these workers to be $165.00 per month. Ninety-seven per cent said their time in the Navy was of great value in civilian life. Eighty-three per cent said they would do the same thing if they had it to do over again.

W. H. WALLACE

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

There has been considerable reference in the press and by various individuals of late that this is the time for the United Nations to open up a second front on the European continent in order to relieve German pressure on Russia. However, our military strategists are the ones to decide the time of so important a move since they alone are aware of all the factors involved. They realize that it is futile to attempt a second front until we can be positively assured that our supply lines to Europe can be kept moving sufficiently to keep our men at the front supplied with reinforcement — men, munitions, food, etc.

True, American industry is producing the materials of war, men are being inducted into our armed forces at a rapid rate, but the bottleneck at this time is transportation.

Our emergency shipbuilding program started December 20, 1040, when the British Purchasing Commission placed its initial contracts. Our Maritime Commission began its program with the award of two sets of contracts on January 10th and 17th, 1941. Since this program began there have been constructed 99 active shipbuilding ways and 250 ships have actually been built and put into commission, representing a total carrying capacity of around two and one-half million dead-weight tons. The Bethlehem Fairfield Shipyard at Baltimore laid its first keel 103 days after receiving a contract for constructing a new yard and since that time has built 46 ships on 16 active ways. They recently launched their fiftieth ship, which was built in the record time of 48 days and their 59-ship original contract will have been completed eight months ahead of schedule. The Kaiser shipyards on the Pacific Coast have even bettered Bethlehem's record and have built a total of 101 ships so far on 27 active ways. This truly is a remarkable achievement so speedily attained by our ship builders.

However, we find when looking at the other side of the ledger that submarines have sunk, according to the Associated Press, 418 United Nation's cargo ships from December 7th up to August 8th; the United Press sets the number at 433.

Donald Nelsan's office recently claimed that the Germans have been sinking United Nation's ships at the rate of almost a million and a quarter dead-weight tons per month; and this means we are not only losing these ships, representing somewhere around 400,000 tons of scarce materials which go into their construction, but more particularly we are losing much of the trained manpower which operates them and the 6,700,000 tons of badly needed war goods which they are carrying.

Our Navy has done a magnificent job of convoy duty, but here again our program for building vital Navy convoy ships has woefully bogged down. Mr. Elmer Davis, Director of War Information, stated a week ago that in June less than one-half of the scheduled number were completed. He went on to say that we could lose this war and did not hold out much hope for a quick second front, because, he stated, the United States has less ships available now than it had before Pearl Harbor.

Since the shipping picture is far from bright, Washington officials are giving much careful thought to various substitute methods of transporting materials. Simon Lake, the 70-year-old father of the submarine — who has been designing and building them for over 50 years — comes forth with a proposal to build enormous cargo-carrying submarines, and his scheme undoubtedly has considerable merit. We are given to understand that the Germans have gigantic submarines operating along the African coastline which carry midget subs as auxiliaries. The main objection offered to Mr. Lake's plan is the shortage of steel and other critical materials needed for their construction. Another inventor, consequently, proposes that these be made out of concrete. Some marine architects, however, doubt their practicability because of their lack of flexibility in a heavy sea.

Shipbuilder Kaiser, as you know, advocates the construction of a huge fleet of gigantic airplanes. He proposes that nine shipyards, now in production or under construction, be turned over to this program and that as a starter they build duplicates of the 70-ton Glenn L. Martin Mars flying-boat. The War Production Board will decide if such planes can be constructed without causing interruption in our present all-out war production program. Mr. Kaiser stated he could turn out his first plane eight months after the materials and working drawings are made available, and being very optimistic, hopes to later build 200-ton flying boats, capable of carrying over 100 tons of cargo and making at least 3 round trips a week between this country and Europe. The W.P.B. committee, appointed by Donald Nelson on May 29th to study this problem of cargo-carrying planes, reported that arrangements should be made at once to double at least our cargo airplane program and urged that the development of longer range land and sea planes be accelerated. Lt. General Arnold, Chief of the U. S. Army Air Force, testified that 21 per cent of the multiple-engine bombers to be built in this country during the second half of 1942 would be cargo planes, and that before the end of this year it would be around 32 per cent.

If aircraft in the form of cargo planes it to be the answer to the submarine menace, we must remember that the bottleneck in any such program may well be found first in a possible aluminum shortage. A serious shortage could also develop in the manufacture of extremely delicate and technical instruments needed for long distance all-weather flying. It is expected that our aluminum production by next year will have been stepped up to over one and a quarter million tons, almost eight times our pre-war capacity. Also, we are developing and perfecting substitute materials for replacing aluminum. Planes constructed of plywood and paper plastics have been constructed. Recently I saw a sample of a product made out of laminated plywood which had been compressed under tremendous pressure until it had a tensile strength and a hardness greater than some grades of steel, while being far lighter. This material is now being used extensively, with success, for the manufacture of aircraft propellers. Propellers made of this material weigh one-third less than those made of steel and I am told are now preferred to steel. This material also is being used extensively in the construction of sub-chasers, landing boats and other pantoon-like structures. So, it is safe to assume that such materials—the supply of which we could tremendously increase on short notice—could very well be used in the construction of the hull structure and possibly also the wings on Mr. Kaiser's big flying boats. One thing certain; American ingenuity and inventive ability is seeking to, and will, solve the submarine menace, if it is permitted to do so in time.

MICHIGAN COUNCIL OF DEFENSE
Michigan War Week

Newspapers Help Make Blackout Great Success

Lansing, - - - Forty-one counties of Southern Michigan,, including all the major industrial areas, were blacked out successfully for a half hour Aug. 12 in the biggest civilian defense test ever attempted in the middle west.

Last-minute changes in plans, made at the request of the Army, advanced the time for an hour, but this change did little to hamper the effectiveness of the test, Michigan council of defense officials declare. Portions of Illinois and Wisconsin, including Chicago and Milwaukee, which were to have been blacked out simultaneously, followed the Michigan test by an hour.

Much of the credit for success must go to newspapers for their cooperation in giving full publicity to the test, in the opinion of Lt. Col. Harold A. Furlong, administrator of the council, and Capt. Donald S. Leonard, State Commander of the Citizens Defense Corps. The response to the Council's request for cooperation in publicizing the blackout in the rural areas was especially gratifying, they said.

Scrap Harvest Moving

Michigan's Scrap Harvest, designed to produce scrap for war from rural areas is getting into real action all over the state. Many communities have set special Scrap Harvest Days as occasions for "bees" and neighborhood picnics to speed up the drive. Early reports indicate huge collections of badly needed scrap from forgotten junk piles.

Spur Drive Against Farm Fires

The Michigan Council of Defense is sending out urgent requests to county councils of defense to spur completion of the rural fire prevention program during August. The program calls for organization of permanent fire control committees in every county, composed of the state conservation officer in that county, and one representative each from the county council of defense and the county USDA war board. A survey of farm buildings and property made earlier in the year by rural school pupils, revealed a shortage of fire-fighting equipment on many farms. County fire control committees are asked to begin educational campaigns and to study all phases of the important problem of protecting farms against fire loss.

Growers Look Ahead

Northern Michigan cherry growers met with representatives of the Michigan council of defense, the United States employment service, the Michigan department of agriculture and county agricultural agents at Traverse City on Aug. 18 to make plans for the 1943 cherry harvest. Enlistment of harvest hands, housing for transient pickers and transportation were subjects under consideration. The agricultural committee of the Michigan council of Defense has already planned revision of its volunteer lists to be ready for next year's harvests.

AT THE MOVIES

"Jackass Mail"

For the first time since their inception as a comedy team, Marjorie Main wins Wallace Beery in "Jackass Mail," coming August 25-26 to the Palace Theatre.

Although they have played a romantic team in three previous pictures, this is the first time they have made the trek down the aisle together.

"Jackass Mail," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, centers around the Western mining town of Gold Creek. Murmaduke, "Just" Baggot, played by Beery, is a would-be outlaw who becomes the pillar of law and order in the town thru a series of accidents and the refining influence of Miss Main, owner of the local dance hall.

"The Gay Sisters"

Another great novel, "The Gay Sisters," has been brought to the screen by Warner Bros., who are noted for their fine treatment of important novels. The picture, which will be shown locally August 27, 28, 29 at the Palace Theatre, has an exceptionally fine cast. In the leading role is fiery Barbara Stanwyck as the eldest of the three Gaylord sisters, a sometimes fierce, brusque and level-headed person who thinks that sentiment is a silly emotion.

Her two sisters, the other members of the Gaylord family (the trio was dubbed by newspapermen 'The Gay Sisters') are played by Geraldine Fitzgerald and Nancy Coleman. Gig Young, a dynamic, breezy newcomer to the screen, makes his debut in the film as a young artist, and advance reports have it that he is a sensation. George Brent, in his usual casual, but ot the same time forceful manner, plays the role of a civil engineer who becomes a millionaire, and also is the reason why the Gay sisters are held practically penniless.

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

We now are on the offensive.

For the first time in this war, American forces have moved against the enemy. This first offensive re-emphasizes the need for increased effort on the home front. The operations against the Solomon Islands at the very start cost us one crusier and damage to other warships.

"Considerable losses, such as are inherent in any offensive operation, must be expected," said Admiral King, commander-in-chief of the U. S. fleet.

We must go from offensive to offensive, if we are to win this war. We can win only by driving the Japs from the territory they have seized, by driving the Nazis from Europe and the Near East. To do this, we must accept losses on a great scale, and we must prepare for these losses.

Unity, Sacrifice, Action

Materials and more materials—that is the desperate need.

This is a war in which tanks are destroyed by hundreds in a single sector of one front. Yet into a medium tank must go about 26 tons of steel, 600 pounds of copper, 500 pounds of chromium and more than 600 pounds of manganese, aluminum, lead and zinc.

More than ever today, the emphasis must be on salvage and on further restrictions of an already restricted civilian economy.

We Can Lose This War

We must forget that we are the richest country in the world. Until the war is won, we must live as though the U. S. A. were a poor country. Work clothes will have fewer buttons, fewer buckles, fewer pockets and less cloth. But what are a few buttons and buckles to us on the home front.

We're going to have to give up a lot of things—already have given up many. These many things, too, are unimportant in comparison to our liberty and our freedom, for which we willingly sacrifice to preserve.

"Materials! Materials! Iron steel, copper, cloth, food!" cry the hungry war gods.

We must not only give up many things to meet this demand. We also must take the offensive on the home front and continue to save and salvage every bit of material we possibly can find, if that material is needed in our war effort.

Everyone Must Help

War time transportation is another of the many keys to victory. Production on a huge war scale is a matter of distribution—a matter of getting the materials to processing plants, thence to fabricating factories, to the points of final assembly and ultimately to where it is needed on the fighting fronts.

Our transportation systems can do their job only if civilian demands on these systems are cut to the barest possible minimum. This, we are doing. This, you must do. Don't make unnecessary trips.

Likewise, every time the big rubber tires of a delivery truck revolve, they bring nearer the time when that truck must be laid up. Whether our five million trucks serve America until the war is won depends upon the assistance of those on the home front.

Plan ahead when you buy, buy for as long a period as possible. This means fewer trips for the trucks. Carry your own packages. For years, we have depended on department stores and groceries, laundries and dry cleaners, bakeries and dairies and drug stores for all sorts of deliveries which were convenient — but unnecessary.

We're ALL at War

The office of price administration denies it plans to add new commodities to the rationing program. The rumors arose from OPA's plan to prepare rationing machinery for future emergencies. Part of this plan is "a universal rationing book which, placed in the hands of every citizen in the country, could be used for the rationing of any commodity or article in which a shortage occurred".

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Dear Ken:

Received the paper today. Junior Boss and I have been thru it column by column, one page after the other, and it was sure good to get all the news.

Both of us are in sick bay due to our reaction to a typhoid shot we received.

This is sure a swell place here and there are only sailors to be seen for miles around.

We are about two miles from good old Lake Michigan. We were on it for a few hours the other day for crew, but that is the only water I have seen in two weeks since I left Charlevoix.

Hope to see you all in about four weeks.

As ever,
"Bergie."

The following letter from Robt. Pearl, U. S. N., Hawaii, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Pearl, came by V-mail, a recently instituted plan of photographing service men's letters on small film, and printing on small sheets of paper to reduce weight of mail transported on supply ships.

Dear Ken:

Just a few words to let you know that the most looked forward to and most important event of the day is the arrival of the Courier.

With so many of the local fellows scattered around this world from Australia to England and Alaska to Iceland and points south, Charlevoix-the-Beautiful is well represented.

No news to speak of—the war being the main topic of conversation as well as partaking, here's to a swift victory so we all can come home and enjoy life in "God's Country."

My best wishes to you and yours,

Regards,
Bob Pearl.

Dear Ken,

Just a few lines to let you know my new address and that we are going to be stationed here long enough to be worth while to send the paper.

The instructions for aviation free gunnery course will last eight weeks, as far as we know at the present.

We will start off with shot gun shooting, skeet and traps, to adopt ourselves to the feel of shooting at a fast moving target. Then we will begin on 30 and 50 caliber machine guns.

After completing this school we have to go to another station for advanced training. This means we have to have twenty hours in the air, firing at sleeve targets and other objects from a plane.

We are only 18 miles from Miami, so we really have a wonderful place to spend our liberty.

There are cocoanut palms right outside our window, so I think I'll pick a few one of these days.

There are only four fellows to a room and we even have our private bathroom, just like a high class hotel.

Thanks a million for the paper, it really helps a lot to pass away our spare time.

Yours truly,
James Gilbert Powers, AMM 3-c

There's enough metal in a broken-down farm tractor to make 38 .30 calibre machine guns.

"Ten Million Men by 1944"
March 12: "In 95 days we learn that democracy must become dictatorial to save itself from dictatorship, that we must deprive ourselves of freedoms so that we can save them, that a dozen expeditionary forces and our home units will require upwards of ten million men by 1944, that tens of thousands of women must replace men in war plants everywhere. What a change!"

"Our Vanishing Illusions"
March 12: "Vanishing by degrees are illusions that we cannot lose the war, that we are invulnerable against attack, that we will fight best when we are optimistic, that we can beat the Axis on a 40-hour week, that we can win somehow without using our best men in government regardless of party, that lend-lease of arms will suffice without American men to arm them, that the war can be won be defense instead of offense."

"We Are Losing a War"
March 26: "We are losing a war, and we don't like it a bit. The idea of Americans being beaten isn't natural to us. Hence, we would like to kick someone in the pants, toot sweet, and if a Nazi and Jap isn't handy, we'll take the next best thing at home."

"Greater Danger in Sabotage"
April 3: "While enemy bombing raids by airplanes are expected to be made against Michigan military centers, such as the St. Mary's river locks at Sault Ste. Marie, the Willow Run bomber plant near Ypsilanti and the Chrysler tank plant in Macomb county, a greater danger lurks in the possibility of disastrous sabotage being committed by a handful of enemy agents. Most of them would be emigrants or American-born citizens, Quislings to the cause of the United Nations."

If Germany Triumphs in Russia
May 29: "If the Germans triumph in Russia, seize the Suez or take over the French fleet, the Michigan transportation problem would be very insignificant, wouldn't it? And so would everything else, for that matter. Never in history has the fate of free peoples hinged on the outcome of events so world-wide in their cataclysmic effect."

"Worst Beating in History"
June 18: "The biggest problem on the Michigan home front, according to a high ranking army official in an off the record talk in Detroit last week, is a widespread over-optimism by the public that the war will be over in six months. 'The truth is this (quoting the army officer); In six months time we have taken the worst beating in our nation's history. We're not ready yet to do any major fighting. Our war plants will not be in full production for many months to come. The public is being deluded if it expects anything but a long, long war with great sacrifice. We should face the facts: The situation is very serious."

"We Can Lose It"
July 23: "The war isn't won yet. In fact, we can lose it on the home front—unless management and labor produce more and more airplanes and tanks and other urgently needed arms for our Yanks and our hard-pressed Allies who, incidentally, are doing most of the fighting for us until we are ready to hold our own."

He probably occasionally wished that his own children might face the realities of life as he was compelled to do, but he found that the whole social and economic syatem was against him. His son had to have an automobile, a tuxedo and a fraternity pin before he earned a cent, and his daughter had to have a permanent, a manicure, and several evening gowns before she tried to fry an egg. Well, we've made the round trip. For a long time to come it's going to be work, work, work, and save, save, save. STATE GAS STATIONS MAY CLOSE EARLIER

Plan Now on Trial in Four Southern Michigan Counties

An early closing time of 8 p. m. on week days and 5 p. m. on Sundays appeared imminent for filling stations throughout the state as Michigan retail gasoline dealers association officials announced the plan had been adopted permanently for four southern Michigan counties.

Following a three day trial period during which member stations in Wayne, Oakland, Washtenau and Macomb counties observed the shortened operating hours, members voted at a meeting to continue the plan indefinitely .

Rankin Peck, executive director of the association, said the action would involve 3,400 member stations in the four counties and "would undoubtedly be extended to the entire state." Peck emphasized, however, that state plans were tentative, but would include provision to keep enough stations open to handle the tourist trade.

With a starting huur of 7 a. m. the new schedule is expected to release 500 mechanics for vital war work.

LIONS LICK LOCALS IN SOFTBALL GAME

CSO Benefit Game Played Tuesday Night South Side Field

Abandoning the pigskin temporarily, the Detroit Lions took on Charlevoix's crack softball team Tuesday night at the south side athletic field and beat them at their own game, 11-2.

A large crowd was on hand for the game, proceeds of which went to the Charlevoix Service Organization.

Using 20 men in their line-up, the Lions romped through the game with the greatest of ease, in spite of the fact that the local team is rated among the best in northern Michigan. Kennedy, Michigan State College tackle, who pitched for the Lions, is classed as one of the best nmateur softball pitchers in the state. Other Lions have nlso played in organized bnsebail.

A triple by Coach John Karsis in the fourth, with bases loaded, und a home run by Gutknecht in the sixth, with bases loaded, put the Lions well ahead of the locnl tenm.

Batteries were Kelth Carey and Ira Smith for Charlevoix; Kennedy and Uremovich on the mound and Szakash catcher for the Lions.

A return engagement is scheduled for next week, date of which has not yet been announced.

KIWANIS NOTES

East Jordan and Boyne City Rotary and Charlevoix Kiwanis clubs participnted in a joint meeting at the Belvedere Golf Club here, Tuesday evening, with seventy members and guests in attendance.

Robert Bridge, chairman of the program committee, introduced "Bill" Edwards, head coach, and "Al" Sawdy, trainer of the Detroit Lions, who by word and motion picture gave the meeting a word and oyo picture of professional football.

Coach Edwards said that the life of n coach in professional football, in these times, is no bed of roses. He stated that 25 of last year's squad were lost for this year's play and that 20 of the players now in training have already enlisted in the Marines or the Air Corps or some branch of the military service and are awaiting call to duty. The balance of the squad are married men and these have to form the backbone of the team and bolster replacements.

Most of the players in professional football today are men who are using this means of making money to finish their education, purchase a home, or for some other very definite purpose. Coach Edwards expressed the hope that Charlevoix would like the boys and would ask them to return next year.

The Detroit Lions vs. Green Bay game of last year, at Detroit, was shown in motion pictures in natural colors. Mr. Sawdy operated the machine while Mr. Edwards discussed the plays as they appeared on the screen.

Opinion was general that get-together meetings of this kind promote the finest kind of teamwork in the county. Frank F. Bird, chairman of the Inter-club relations committee of the Charlevoix club, said that plans are being made for a similar meeting to be held later this year.

ANNUAL COUNTY PICNIC SEPT. 7

LABOR DAY EVENT AGAIN AT WHITING COUNTY PARK

Program Includes 4-H Club Exhibits, Award Victory Garden Emblems, Sports Events

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

Arrangements are being made for the 20th annual Farmer-Merchant picnic to be held at Whiting park on Monday, September 7th.

This year's event takes on added significance and doubtless will attract the largest crowd ever assembled. This may well be called a "Victory Picnic," as plans are being formulated to recognize the outstanding Victory gardners of the county by presenting them special emblems. It is expected that a representative of the Michigan Defense Council will be present to make the awards.

Additional features this year will be the 4-H club exhibits. Included will be fifty young dairy calves being shown by dairy club members. Also a large display of canned goods. In addition, food preparation club members will display muffins, cookies, breads and cakes. Tentative arrangements are being worked out with the various garden clubs to have a county-wide flower show. With the registration of victory gardens at approximately 800, you can expect to see a wonderful display of vegetables.

A picnic without sports wouldn't be a picnic, so running races and sports will be featured. Already it can be announced that a big softball game will bring together Charlevoix and East Jordan. Both teams have wonderful records and an intersting tussel in in prospect.

Another feature which will be greatly enjoyed will be a mass band concert. With all the bands in the county, both high school and city organizations, combining, it will be a real musical treat.

As usual the American Legion Posts will take care of your hunger and thirst. Free coffee, sugar and cream during the noon hour. Watch next week's paper for a more complete program, but don't forget we will be seeing you at the county picnic on Labor Day.

WILL RE-CLASSIFY ALL MEN NOW IN 1-B

Men Physically Fit for Limited Service to be Called

Abolition of selective service classification 1-B—for men physically fit only for limited military duty—will affect an estimated 800,000 men and provide a new reservoir of manpower for the armed services.

All 1-B registrants will be placed in either 1-A, and made subject to immediate induction, or in 4-F, and deferred indefinitely because of major physical defects, selective service headquarters announced Thursday.

Reclassification of 1-B's will be bein Sept. 1, with one fourth of such registrants in each draft board placed in a new category each month and action completed on the entire list by Jan. 1, 1043.

RAIN COMES TO END DROUTH IN REGION

Heavy Shower Saturday Was First Here in Nearly Month

Rain, widespread ever this section of the state, cut the forest fire hazard to a low count and brought relief to hundreds of farmers throughout the region early Saturday morning.

With nearly a month of dry weather and with less than a half inch of rain during the past four weeks, potatoes and other late crops were beginning to suffer. Potatoes especially were in serious condition. Growers have stated that most of the late varieties are just beginning to set and the volume of the harvest depends now on the amount of rainfall received within the next three weeks.

SET DATES FOR JUNK ROUND-UP

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY ARE PICK-UP DAYS

Scrap Metal to be Gathered by City Trucks; Call Local Salvage Committee to Haul Junk

The Junk Round-Up in Charlevoix is scheduled for Friday and Saturday of this week, when city trucks will pick up junk at homes throughout the city and take it to the depot in the Charlevoix Lumber Co. yard.

Citizens who have collected piles of scrap metal may call any member of the local salvage committee to arrange for hauling it away. Clifford McKibbin, Jr., city superintendent, is chairman of the committee. Other members are Fr. John W. Collins, Ralph Hamilton, Rev. H. J. Pulsiphor, Mrs. Charles Bellinger, Mrs. Harry Walstad and Mrs. P. R. Ross.

Those who do not wish to wait for trucks to pick up junk may take it to the lumber company yard.

Junk collected from attics, basements, garages, barns, household articles no longer useful, will all go to furnish scrap metal to keep the nation's steel mills at full production. Shortages of scrap metal threaten to curtail production in many mills unless at least six million tons of junk is collected in this nation-wide campaign. Every home has some article to contribute, such as an old lawn mower, flat irons, garbage pails, which will help to make the Jank Round-Up a complete success.

The Charlevoix Service Organization, in charge of the drive, will use money obtained from sale of the junk to further its numerous activities in behalf of the city's part in the war effort.

The local team defeated Curtis and Roosa, Traverse City outfit, by a 7 to 3 count. Junior Supernaw, local hurler, allowed four hits to five for Green, Traverse moundsman. Charlevoix scored two in the first inning when Keith Carey reached first on an error and Supernaw doubled. They tallied three in the second stanza when Campbell and Zelly singled, Swanson walked, Tapovic was safe on an error, Keith Carey walked and Supernaw hit a fielder's choice. Bill Supernaw singled and Tapovic hit a long home run for two scores in the seventh.

The Traverse City team marked up three runs in the third inning for their only scores.

Charlevoix had previously won from Traverse City Rennie Oils and Petoskey Elks, the latter by a 11 to 4 score, to enter the finals.

The local team, providing satisfactory financial arrangements are concluded, will represent the northern district at the state softball tournament in Lansing.

HANG ONTO YOUR GUN PERMIT IS WARNING

Permits Now Being Issued Are On Permanent Basis

"Hang onto your gun permit—it's permanent!" conservation officers and agencies selling the new fall hunting licenses are reminding their customers.

Discarding the old-style annual permits with expired hunting licenses is a habit of many years' standing. Since early this year, however, the conservation department has issued only permanant gun permits, good while the holder also has a current hunting license. These continue in force until revoked or suspended for a period of years by the court, after conviction for some game law offense.

Approximately 30,000 Michigan hunters now hold the permanent permits to carry guns in game territory in the off-season.

The Woman's Republican Club will meet Friday at 3 p. m. in the community room at the city hall. All Republican women are invited.

In some state primaries already held, less than 25 percent of the registered voters have gone to the polls. If the November elections are to be a test of public opinion, a mere handful should not be permitted to decide in the primaries who will make the final race. Every voter should be informed about candidates and issues.

EXTENO SEASON FOR WATERFOWL

TEN DAYS ADDED TO MICHIGAN HUNTING

Conservation Department Has Set Dates for Duck Hunting from Sept. 26 to Dec. 4

The state conservation commission, meeting at Roscommon, added 10 days to the Michigan waterfowl hunting season which will be open from September 26 to December 4.

In adding five days to each end of the erstwhile standard season, the commission said it was taking cognizance of the federal fish and wildlife service report that there will be a marked increase in the 1042 duck population.

The commission also extended fowl shooting hours from sunrise to sunset to make hunting more equitable along the time zone borders and to avoid confusion over war-time regulations.

In keeping with the federal report that geese numbers are dwindling, the commission altered the geese bag limit from 0 per day and 12 in possession to 6 daily and 6 in possession.

The commission approved taking of one wood duck daily and extended the post-season possession limit to 30 days. It rejected a proposal to reduce the distance between permanent duck blinds from 600 to 400 feet.

The commission approved a request by the state correction department to establish a penal labor camp at the abandoned Higgins lake civilian conservations corps site, providing the army will release the title. It was estimated between 100 and 150 inmates could be employed on forest projects at the camp.

Other commission action included closing of Cheboygan county to grey squirrel hunting and refusal to retain a 2 p. m. closing of duck shooting on Houghton lake.

LIONS FOOTBALL CONTEST SUNDAY

VARSITY VS. FRESHMAN TILT IS SCHEDULED

Thirteen Veterans In Varsity Line-Up Pitted Against Rookies Seeking Team Positions

"The football game of the year"—that's the way one can classify the contest between the varsity and freshmen of the Detroit Lions football club, which will be held next Sunday at the Charlevoix athletic field at 3 p. m.

Every year the veterans have played these up and coming rookies and the results have been most gratifying to the fans. The Rookies, trying to impress the coaches with their ability to make the grade in the Big Leagues, and the vets fighting to keep their jobs, produce a type of football that is interesting to watch.

Last year the freshmen came out on top in a rip-roaring battle by the score of 24 to 17.

Because of the great number of players lost to the armed services since the end of last season, this year's varsity team will have a few rookies spotted in the lineup. There are only 13 players who have had previous experience in the leagues.

But those 13 veterans pack quite a potent wallop. There's Harry Hopp, the veteran tailback from Nebraska, and two more former Huskers, Bill Callihan, blocking back, and Lloyd Curdwell, wingback, Ned Mathews, U. C. L. A. back, and Paul Szukash to form the nucleous of a very tough backfield.

In the line the veterans will have Alex Wojciechowicz, former Fordham all American, at center, Augie Lio, Georgetown all American, at guard, three tackles, Ted Pavelec, Emil Uremovich and Alex Schihanoff, and end, Bill Fisk.

The rookies will rest their hopes in Tommy Colella, Mickey Sanzotta, Frankie Grigonis, John Polanski, Harry Seltzer and Emil Banjavic, in the backfield, while several big huskies can be counted on in the line.

Sloko Gill has been a standout in the line during scrimmage and should cause the varsity plenty of trouble in the center of the line. Tony Zuzzio, Tom Tressa, Bill Kennedy and George Sirochman are available for the guards.

George Speth and Henry Goodman, the biggest men in the frosh line at tackles, will give the three veterans an interesting afternoon. The rookies have the edge in ends with Mike Balitsaris, Mike Spann, Larry Knorr, Ed Behan and Tuffy Chambers standing out in a field of eight flankers.

When shopping in local stores, ask the clerk to give you your change in war savings stamps.

Even is he doesn't catch another brook trout this season, Clare Staley has ended the season which closes Labor Day in a manner which would delight any sportsman. The 1 1-2-pound, 15 inch trout he took Sunday out of Intermediate creek was a beauty.

When weather conditions permit, mackinaw fishing in Lake Michigan off South Point isn't so bad. Last Tuesday was a banner day in this year's rather drab record. A party with Bill Gibson had a 16, 12 and 8-pounder, Don Clothier's boats brought in four. Saw-three brought in this Monday, too, including a 7-pounder landed by Charles Godcheaux, local summer resident. They aren't too thick, it's true, but anything is better than what we've had so far this summer.

Another flotilla of former pleasure yachts now in coast guard service entered port Tuesday, presumably enroute to the coast. Like the fleet which stopped here August 15-10, several were familiar craft which had frequented this port in previous summers and some even within recent weeks. Such incidents bring home to us the fact there's a war on.

Any time you think the old diehard deer hunters aren't watching the calendar closely to keep track of the number of days "before when", you're badly mistaken. Last week I erroneously said there were only 66 days before the boys could start hunting wild mutton, and you know, I nearly got hung for such a trifling mistake? It should have been 88 days at that time and now, just to show you I'm on the right track, it's just 71 days hence.

In these wartime days of registrations of various sorts a person could get mixed up, so watch out that you don't confuse your social security card with your sugar card, and don't hand a cop your selec-

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Despite a shortage of labor and higher operating costs, Michigan farms are enjoying a year of prosperity. But low-price years are coming.

Rains have been abundant this summer. Prices rose 30 per cent during 1041, and they have continued on an upward trend in 1942.

Lend-lease needs for food are creating a sustained demand. War has upset the normal balance of supply and demand.

It's an abnormal situation. Better plan accordingly.

Farm management during the war, as summarized above, is the theme of a study recently made by the Michigan State college agricultural experiment station. J. C. Doneth and K. T. Wright of the farm management section, the authors, offer some interesting suggestions for a "Food for Victory" program that will contribute to the government's war program and at the same time will avoid some of the pitfalls of a post-war depression.

"No doubt there will continue to be a shortage of farm labor", they report. "Yet it is possible for many farmers to increase their labor efficiency 20 to 25 per cent. This would be desirable during periods of high, average or low farm prices, but it is especially desirable when wages are high, as at the present time."

Better labor efficiency may be obtained by the following practices:

1. Increase the size of business. Rent more land. Increase crop yields through use of lime and fertilizers. Improve production of livestock through better feeding, more feed, stricter culling and better stock. Clear or drain land. Keep more livestock. Grow more intensive crops.

2. Plan enterprises and work better. This will effect more even labor distribution throughout the week and the year.

TOMATOES ARE NAMED VICTORY SPECIAL

Frosh tomatoes will play a return engagement on the Victory Food Special program during the period of August 24 through September 5, the department of agriculture has announced. This time, however, they will be featured only in states east of the Mississippi river and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers.

Special emphasis will ba placed on homa canning of tomatoes where such use is practical and where facilities and equipment for processing ara avaiinbie. The Victory Food Special program is designed to assist in management of the nation's wartime food supplies. Its purposes aro to keep perishnbles from going to waste, to take tha emphasis off other foods needed for direct war use and to stimulate continued high production during the war period.

This year's planting of tomatoes for summer and fall harvest is at an all-time record leval. Sharpest increase is in production of tomatoes for canning to meet wartime requirements. Acreago of tomntoes for marketing in fresh form and plantings in Victory Gardens also havo been greatly expanded. With continued favorablo growing conditions, good yields are expected.

Designation of fresh tomatoes as a Victory Food Special was made by Roy F. Handrickson, administrator of the agricultural merketing administretion. Tomatoes were featured as a "Victory Food Special" nationally during tha period of June 29 to July 4, when particularly heavy supplies were coming in from Texas, Mississippi and other southern producing areas. Now large supplies are expected from farms in the northern area whera they will be featured during the August 24-September 5 period.

Tha Michigan State College extension service in agriculture and home economics lends emphasis to the home canning program. Department of agriculture officials point out that tha best time for canning tomatoes varies with each state.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Because he and his partner, Cruger, need the money to keep Norland Airways in business, Alan Slade agrees to fly a "scientist" named Frayne and his partner, Karnall, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds Cruger buys a plane, a Lockheed, which is stolen. When he returns from the Anawotto Slade starts out to look for the plane. He has three clues, one of which appears to have lead up a blind alley. Slade thought the missing plane had some connection with Frayne, but when he returned to where he left the swan-hunter there was no trace of the plane, and Frayne appeared to be hunting swans. The second clue is the story of Umanak, the askimo, about a "ghost" plane that is supposed to come from Echo Harbor. The third clue is Slade's hunch that if he finds a flyer named Slim Tumstead he will find the plane. Tumstead, who knows about the Lockheed and about Frayne, has disappeared. Now Slade, Umanak, and Slade's old prospector friends, Zeke and Minty, are all out looking for the plane. Slade has just learned that his hunch was sound. Tumstead is with Frayne, and they have a plane somewhere.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XIII

"On the contrary," retorted the older man, "you will sail away quite comfortably on the Kovalevka when she takes out her cargo. You will be carried safe and sound to Vladivostok, with money enough, remember, to give you three years of travel in Europe and all the vodka your heart may desire."

Tumstead seemed to be considering this.

"But why doesn't your Kovalevka show up?" he questioned.

"She will come," was the precise-noted answer, "when we are ready for her. Ice conditions have not been of the best. And we, too, have been a little slow in getting our shipment in shape."

"So damned slow," Tumstead retorted, "your stuff won't be any use to you. While you're combing the icicles out of your hair the war'll be over."

"Silence," commanded the steelier voice. "The men of my race are taught to do what they are commanded to do."

"And some of it," retorted the other, "I'd call uncommonly dirty work."

"It is not for you to question the nature of my work."

Tumstead's laugh was harsh.

"No, I'm merely a flyer," he acceded. "But I'm not the kind who can keep a ship going without gas."

It was the older man's turn to stand thoughtful.

"That is a problem," he finally said, "which we must in some way solve."

Tumstead's repeated laugh was edged with bitterness.

"I've gathered in everything that's lying round loose between here and the Pole," he protested. "And the next pinch may put us all in the dog-house."

"I think not," said the other. "And we have a problem more imminent."

"What problem?"

"Those snoopers which you spoke of. A means must be found to discourage them." The speaker's glance circled about in the uncertain light that surrounded him. "They may be closer than we imagine."

As Frayne disappeared within the tent Tumstead groped about for his fallen cup and reached once more for the coffeepot. Slade, watching him, backed quietly away through the underbrush. But his retreat was a brief one. He worked his way down the hollow between the hills and slowly ascended the opposing slope. Then, seeking what cover he could find, he circled back toward the lake front. He stopped, from time to time, to listen and look. But nothing, as he want, came between him and the object of his advance.

That objective was the shadowy tangle of spruce trees at the water's edge. He noticed, as he drew nearer, how a rough ramp of spruce logs had been built out from the hillside. It was so plainly a landing stage, to make easier the passing of heavy freight into a plane cabin, that no shock of surprise touched Slade when he peered under the matted treetops. For, standing there in the shadows, he saw the stolen Lockheed.

He climbed to the rough-timbered ramp and advanced to where two filled ore bags stood together at its outer edge. He stooped over one of the bags, intent on determining its contents.

He failed to see the hare-shouldered and burly figure that emerged from the tree shadows behind him and quietly reached for a spruce pole as long as the long bare arm that wielded it.

He failed to hear any movement as the newcomer crept forward, as silent as a shadow, and brought the spruce pole down on the stooping flyer's head.

Slade went down like a clouted rabbit.

Slade, as consciousness slowly returned to him, found it no easy matter to orient himself. His head throbbed and his body seemed cramped into quivering helplessness. Then the singing in his ears and the quivering of his frame merged into the throb and drone of a motor. He awakened to the fact that he was in a plane, and that plane was in flight.

He failed to see the hare-shouldered and burly figure that emerged from the tree shadows.

He thought, at first, that his bodily helplessness was due to being so tightly wedged in between sacked ore bags and the pilot's seat. But it was due, he found after an effort or two to move, to the fact that both his hands and feet were tied.

Memory came back to him as he lay back trying to figure out the reason for all this. The final mists eddied away as he looked up and saw that the man at the controls was Tumstead. Slade made no effort to speak. Instead, he quietly tugged and twisted, in the hope of freeing himself. But his struggles were without result.

The plane's pilot, however, must have become conscious of them, for his smile was sardonic as he glanced back over a shrugging shoulder.

"Coming round?" he nonchalantly called out.

"What does this mean?" demanded Slade.

Tumstead flew on for a moment or two of silence.

"It means you're lucky to be alive," he finally announced. "That bullhead who knocked you out went back for his Luger. He was all set to give you the works."

Slade seemed to be giving thought to that statement.

"What are you going to do with me?" he asked.

"That," retorted Tumstead, "is what I'm trying to figure out. The easiest way, of course, would be to drop you overboard. And that's where you'd go, all right, if we both weren't flyers."

"Then as one flyer to another," Slade asked, "why did you steal this plane?"

Tumstead's reply to that was a snort of laughter.

"That's my own affair," he said. "And you should have known better than nose in on it."

"You're flying for Frayne," said his prisoner.

"Can you suggest anything better?"

Slade considered that question.

"Yes," he answered, "I knew something better."

"What?"

"To head back to Waterways with this Lockheed, while there's still a chance of saving your scalp."

Tumstead's laugh was hard and reckless.

"Not on your life," he proclaimed. "It's your scalp you need to worry about. And it's going to be some time before you get back to Waterways."

"Why do you say that?"

Tumstead's glance went over the terrain beneath his floats.

"Because, a little farther on, I'm going to drop you where you'll stay anchored for a considerable stretch of time," he said.

Slade's response to that was to struggle against the cords constricting his wrists and ankles. But those struggles, he still found, were useless.

"Are we over the Anawotto?" questioned Slade, embittered by the thought of his helplessness.

"We are," answered Tumstead. "And it's sure empty country."

Slade's trained ear told him, a minute later, that they were dropping lower. But from where he lay he could see nothing of the outside world. He concluded, from the length of time that Tumstead taxied along the surface, that the waterway on which they had landed was by no means a small one. He could hear the grating of the pontoons on a gravel bar.

"All out," cried Tumstead.

He half-swung and half-tossed his prisoner ashore, where with a still deeper sense of helplessness Slade tumbled full length along the pebbled slope. There, after taking a shuddering breath or two, he writhed and twisted about until he was able to fight his way back to a sitting posture.

"So you're going to leave me here?" he said.

"I am," said Tumstead. "And I can't waste time on talk."

"But why are you doing this?" persisted Slade.

"Because you got too ambitious."

Slade watched the plane being warped around in the shallows. A surge of desolation swept over him as he glanced about at the ice-scored and barren-ridged island surrounded by its lonely reaches of open water. That island, he saw, had little to offer him. Any scrub timber that grew between its ridges, he realized, would be too small for the making of a raft. And even with a raft to deliver him from that watery prison, he further realized as he stared about at the distant blue-hazed horizon, he would face a wilderness quite empty of life.

"I won't get away," he said, "and you know it."

Tumstead's laugh was defensively gruff.

"Let's hope for the best," he said as he turned back to his cabin. He emerged, a moment later, with a sheath-knife in an old and battered holster. But as the other man unsheathed the knife Slade saw that the blade was keen-edged and long. His eye remained on Tumstead as he stepped closer, the knife in his hand. The quick look of apprehension that came from his captive caused Tumstead's dark face to crease with a smile.

"I'm not that yellow," the latter announced as he stooped and cut the cords that bound Slade's wrists together. He was about to do the same with the cords that bound the ankles. But on second thought he drew back and replaced the knife in its sheath. This, after a moment's hesitation, he tossed a few paces farther up the shore slope, discreetly out of reach. Then as Slade set trying to work life back into his benumbed hands the older man coolly explored the other's pockets. From them he extracted a lighter and a package of cigarettes.

A cynic smile played about his lips as he touched the little flame to a cigarette end and tossed the lighter back to its owner.

"You may need that," he observed. "But seeing I've been out of fags for over a week I'll keep the smokes."

"So that's all the chance you give me," said Slade, watching him as he luxuriously inhaled.

"It's about all I can afford," Tumstead said as he swung about and glanced down at his fellow-flyer. No look of commiseration softened the older man's face. But for a moment a frown of meditation wrinkled his forehead, a frown followed by a small shoulder movement of dismissal.

"Happy landing," was his curtly ironic exclamation as he turned away and climbed aboard his ship.

The man on the beach waited for the roar of the motor. But that familiar crescendo of sound failed to greet him. What he heard, instead, was Tumstead's cynically indifferent voice calling down to him. At the same time a package was tossed ashore.

"That's a pound of German army chocolate," Tumstead announced as he tossed still another object toward the motionless figure on the shore slope. "And here's a can of bully-beef."

He shrugged when no word of gratitude came from that still motionless figure.

"And here's something for your cigarettes," was Tumstead's last curt call as he threw overboard an empty tobacco-tin which struck Slade on the shoulder and came to a rest between his throbbing knees.

Slade sat watching the plane as it taxied across the gray-blue water and rose in the air. He continued to watch as it headed northward over the blue-misted ridges and faded away along the empty skyline.

He sat without moving until the ache in his tightly bound ankles reminded him of other things. Then he looked about for the sheath-knife. He gave a gulp of gratitude when he saw it lying there, within ten paces of him. It took him some time to worm his way to the knife. But a little of the listlessness went out of his face as his fingers closed about the heavy haft.

He lost no time in sawing through the cords and freeing his feet. When he attempted to stand up, however, he discovered that his benumbed legs were unable to support him. He had to sit there, for several minutes, waiting for feeling to come back to them.

MICHIGAN COUNCIL OF DEFENSE
Michigan War Week

Protect State Against Enemy Raiding Planes

Lansing.—The Michigan Aircraft Detection Corps, a new defense unit to be responsible for the detection and reporting of enmy planes in areas determined by the Army, is being created by the Michigan Council of Defense. The new corps will have a special status under jurisdiction of the Michigan Council of Defense, but will be placed at the disposal of military authorities. For operational purposes it will be attached to the council's civilian protection division of which Capt. Donald S. Leonard is director.

Capt. Leonard has announced the appointment of Capt. Laurence A. Lyon, superintendent of the uniformed division of the Michigan State Police, as chief of the MADC, with Durward Robson, of the conservation department, as his deputy. Members of the corps will be recruited from veterans' organizations and other sources and will be given intensive courses to fit them for the work.

Extend Warden Training

A state committee on Air Raid Warden training has been named by Capt. Donald S. Leonard, commander of the Citizens Defense corps of Michigan. The committee, headed by Col. Owen J. Cleary, state chief air raid warden, will work out plans for making more instructors available in sections of the state where training of wardens has been lacking.

Representative in U. P.

The appointment of Robert A. O'Neill of Escanaba, as upper peninsula field representative of the Michigan council of defense has been announced by Lt. Col. Harold A. Furlong, administrator. O'Neill, now district deputy for the Elks in the upper peninsula, was formerly plant and sales manager for the Superior Products Co., of Detroit. He is a veteran of the World War and has been active in American Legion affairs.

Stresses Need for Nurses

Recruiting of volunteer student nurses must be stimulated if nursing personnel is to be maintained for care of the civilian population while graduate nurses are released for military service, according to Dr. LeMoyne Snyder, deputy chief of the Emergency Medical Services Division, Michigan Council of Defense. Nursing deputies and the civilian war service division of the MCD will assist in the recruiting program through distribution of information and general help in organization.

Pushing Scrap Harvest

Local salvage committees, with the assistance of community newspapers, are assuring success for the Michigan Scrap Harvest, now underway in all rural sections of the state. Daily and weekly newspaper publishers are contributing many columns of space and spurring farmers and rural groups to intense activity. Methods of pushing the drive vary in different communities, from neighborhood "bees" to county-wide celebrations.

WAR is on the wires!

You know of Michigan's great contribution to the war effort in planes, tanks, trucks, guns and boats. But, do you realize how important telephone communication is to this huge volume of war production? In the building of a single heavy bomber, as many as 12,000 local and Long Distance telephone calls may be necessary! That's what we mean by "war is on the wires!"

Today Long Distance lines to the places listed at the right are carrying a staggering load of war calls. Any Long Distance call you make — particularly over these lines — may delay an important war message.

Because of material shortages, we can't add enough new lines to handle all the increased traffic. We must get along with what we have. Here are some ways you can help:

1. Make only the most essential Long Distance calls, and avoid these crowded lines especially.
2. Keep your conversations as brief as you can.
3. When possible, give the number of the distant telephone you are calling.

Remember that war is on local wires, too. Your own telephone line may never carry a war message, but every call you make passes through a central office switchboard that may be jammed with war calls. So try to keep all your conversations short.

LOCAL YOUTH GRADUATE GUNNERY SCHOOL

Frederick Ager Promoted to Sergeant at Harlingen, Texas

Graduating this week from the nation's largest aerial gunnery school at Harlingen, Texas, was Frederick G. Ager, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ager of this city, who enlisted in the army air corps in January.

Ager was awarded a pair of silver gunner's wings, combat air crew insignia, and was promoted to sergeant the day he completed the intensive five-week training course. He qualified as an expert in flexible gunnery after careful study and practice at aircraft identification, sight harmonization, machine gun nomenclature, and shooting every kind of a weapon from BB guns to Brownings. He had previously graduated as a radio operator at Scott Field, Ill.

After graduation ceremonies at the gunnery school, he left under sealed orders to join a combat unit.

CHARLEVOIX WINS FROM TRAVERSE "9"

Took "Rubber" of Five Game Series by 2 to 0 Score Sunday

In a "challenge" baseball game played Sunday on the neutral East Jordan diamond, Charlevoix won the "rubber" of a five game series with the Traverse City Merchants.

Each had won twice on their home diamond and Charlevoix's victory in the deciding contest was a decisive 2 to 0 shut-out. Traverse failed to get a man beyond first base as Saxton held them to two hits. His teammates collected six, all singles, off Southwick.

Charlevoix scored its two runs in the eighth inning, combining an error, sacrifice and two singles for the counts. They missed an opportunity in the second frame, when, with the bases loaded, Southwick struck out Bulow and forced Saxton to pop to the catcher.

NO. 8 SUGAR STAMP TO BE GOOD AUG. 23

Valid for Purchase Five Pounds Sugar Until October 31

Beginning August 23, stamp No. 8 of the War Ration book, was valid for the purchase of five pounds of sugar. Deadline for the use of this particular stamp will be October 31.

These dates are set to coincide with the calendar month for the purpose of making later ration dates more uniform. The longer period covered and the larger amount this incorporated in the purchase will enable processors, wholesalers and dealers to dispose office, 10 and 25 pound packages of sugar without the expensive and time wasting work of repackaging.

All questions regarding this new set-up should be taken to the War Rationing office at the courthouse and not to the county clerk's office.

Possibly the average victory garden maker does not know that if he cuts off the heads of his cabbages, instead of pulling up the plants by the roots, new leaves will be thrown out in a short time. It is a good plan to adopt this practice as the second growth of leaves may be used in the house.

It is well to remember that the earliest onions are not good keepers, for which reason they should be eaten first. They should be pulled with long necks, and hung up in a cool dry place for a few days, when they will be ready for table use. Most of the white varieties are the quickest to spoil. The red onions are the best keepers, with the yellow varieties next. Bearing this fact in mind, the gardener will be wise to eat them in the order named.

It pays in the home garden to place short pieces of board under muskmelons and watermelons, or else stand them on end.

Are you entitled to wear a "target" lapel button? You are if you are investing at least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every pay day. It's your badge of patriotism.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Tractors and motors will never wholly replace the Army Mule as a factor in the mobile units of our army. The Army Mule is a tradition and the "mule skinner" is a breed unto himself. Army Mules are used by the Field Artillery and the Cavalry in areas where the terrain is rough and tractors cannot operate.

Pack trains in mountainous sectors are often necessary and here the mule, slow but sure-footed, plays an important role. Our Army buys thousands of mules paying from $175 to $190 for each. The mule eats less, carries more, and some declare is smarter than the horse. Your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps helps pay for these Army Mules. Invest at least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every pay day. U. S. Treasury Department

Use of Convoy Old Habit With Beavers

Wyoming Explores Past in Planning Fur Farms.

CHEYENNE, WYO.—The convoy system, generally regarded as an innovation of the World war, has been used by Wyoming beavers for centuries.

However, hunters only recently discovered that mamma beaver often gives junior a ride upon her broad, flat tail.

A crude application of the convoy system first was noticed in a holding pen for trapped beavers when members of the Wyoming beaver survey noticed a youngster enjoying a ride about the pool upon the tail of its mother.

Further study revealed that young beavers are convoyed frequently—both in water and on land. The rides are so common, beaver experts say, that the practice is a characteristic habit.

Officials of the Wyoming game and fish department are studying a number of possible reasons for the use of the system by the animals.

Officials also are checking the possibility that the beavers' prowess in swimming is acquired.

The convoy system also may be used to assist the comparatively frail youngsters through water currents that older beavers negotiate with ease.

The interest in the beaver habits is prompted, to a great extent, by the realization of Wyoming authorities that beaver is the state's most valuable fur resource.

The state game and fish commission is launching a long-range project of producing beaver on state and public lands as a crop.

"Present plans are to have Wyoming virtually a state-wide 'beaver farm' by 1946," said Lester Bagley, state game warden.

Site of Old Fort Osage Is Found in Missouri

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Old Fort Osage where the Santa Fe Trail began its path to the West, has been found after having been "missing" for a century.

Historians knew its location outside Sibley, Mo., a few miles northeast of here, but they believed that all traces of the stockade and few buildings had disappeared shortly after its abandonment in 1836.

However, highway workmen digging in the area have happened upon what are considered certainly the stone foundations of the fort's old log buildings.

The discovery came only a few months after Jackson county had appropriated $10,000 to purchase 16 acres for a Fort Osage historical park. Now the county plans reconstruction of the stockade and buildings on their exact site over the old foundations.

Fort Osage was built by Maj. George Sibley, sent out from Washington in 1804 after the Lewis and Clark expedition recommended the bluff site as a Far Western outpost.

Because of the protection afforded by the fort Sen. Thomas Hart Benton obtained a $20,000 appropriation from congress to build a road from it to Santa Fe. The "road"—a wagon path—became the Santa Fe Trail.

Selectee Calls Half Day In the Army From 6 to 6

HARTFORD, CONN.—The following letter from Connecticut draftees at Camp Blanding, Fla., was received at Hartford selective service headquarters:

"My dear Friends, Hartford, Conn.: Having a swell time here in so-called Florida. Work only a half day. After that we can do anything we please. But I guess that you don't know that a half day in the army is from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. After that, if you're able to you can do anything you want—if you're not on guard. They tell us we are going to have a pretty time in Louisiana. We only wish that we had you all down here to share it with us."

The letter was signed "Local Boys."

Overzealous Informer Cites Police to Police

SALT LAKE CITY.—Salt Lake City police had before them the case of the overzealous informer.

They were called to a local sandwich lunchroom by the informer, who told them "two suspicious looking men were here and they look like they have guns."

Upon arriving at the lunchroom officers found the "suspicious characters" were two members of the police antivice squad eating on off-duty snack.

The informer was taken to the city jail on a charge of "suspicion of being a bit drunk."

It's a "crying block" where members of the squadron may unburden themselves without boring other soldiers with their tales of woe. It is constructed of rough, unpainted plank.

Mr. and Mrs. Vic Smith, of Detroit, who have been visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jess Smith, left Monday for Fort Custer, where Mr. Smith reported for duty in the ordnance department of the army. He had enlisted at Detroit. They accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ance. The Ances and Mrs. Smith went on to Detroit, and returned to Charlevoix on Tuesday. Mrs. Smith will spend two weeks in this city and with relatives in Boyne City before resuming her duties as instructor in Detroit public schools.

Naval Air Corps, Pensacola, Fla., son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bloomfield Smith, of Bay City. The wedding will take place at Pensacola soon when Cadet Smith receives his "wings" and commission as ensign. Miss McRae is a graduate of Charlevoix high school, class of 1936, and Central Michigan College, Mt. Plensant, in 1940, and has taught in Lapeer public schools. Cadet Smith graduated from Bay City high school and also attended Central Michigan College.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

A district AAA meeting which included county committeemen, secretaries and county farmer fieldwomen from 15 northern Michigan counties was held on Monday, August 17, at the Dilworth Hotel.

Officials from the state office presented information and instructions to county AAA workers, emphasizing the additional responsibilities that are now placed upon them in the present all-out effort to produce the food so vital in this world emergency. Robert Casler, of the state AAA committee, in an interesting talk braught out the fact that the Covernment had selected the AAA to distribute publicity and information throughout the country. With its organized committees functioning in every township, county and state in the nation, the AAA is recognized in Washingtun as an efficient, inexpensive means of distributing needed information with speed ard dispatch.

Mrs. Esther V. Smatligan, state fieldwoman, discussed farm fieldwomen activities. She pointed out that farm women are now taking over a grent share of the farm work and therefore a definite need had been created for an organization among farm women to essist them in mobilizing their efforts in the "Food for Freedom" drive.

Weller Taylor, in his talk emphasized the necessity of using more of the surplus wheat for stock feed during the coming year as a substitute for corn. The corn surpluses under war demands is being depleted too rapidly in feeding operations. In addition, many acres in the corn belt area are being diverted to the much needed saybean culture. In order to maintain a balanced ever-normal granery and due to the danger of a corn shortage in the future, it is becoming necessary to substitute wheat in many feeding programs.

Wheat crop insurance, wheat loans, marketing quotas, distribution of conservation materials and other important phases of the AAA programs were discussed in detail during the day's meeting.

The first farm check-up has been completed in Charlevoix county and nearly 400 applications for payment are ready for signature in the AAA office at Boyne City. This check-up shows that the farmers of Charlevoix county have gone "over the top" in all their pledges. Wheat shows one of the best yields in years, threshing reports show. The East Jordan creamery reports a 16 percent increase in butter made to date. Mere hogs are being prepared for fall and winter marketing than ever before and beef and chickens show the same trend. No slackers among our farmers!

One hundred twenty-five million bushels of feed wheat are to be released for sale to farmers this fall for livestock feed, under the provisions of the new AAA act. The AAA is anxious to get this feed wheat distributed to farmers as soon as possible in order to release storage space for the new wheat crop now being harvested. This will enable farmers to stock up before winter snows make hauling difficult and before railroads are so congested with war production hauling that cars may not be available for this purpose. Michigan's share of this grain is five million bushels. There will be no more corn for feed purposes this year. Short crop in the corn belt makes it necessary to retain corn now in storage as a reserve for the ever-normal granary.

FROM THE GARDEN CLUB

Let us consider the lily. It is old in song and story. It has had an important place in the literature and architecture of the world. It has been used medicinally and as an article of food. To perhaps no other flower has such universal admiration been given. The lily has all the qualifications of a perfect flower: form that is harmonious and rhythmic, coloring that is artistic and resplendent, and the charm of fragrance. In these times of trial and stress we still appreciate the beautiful and the royal beauty of the lily cannot be surpassed.

Being a true bulb, the lily will if given half a chance, deliver its flower at least once. The flowers are already neatly packed away in its heart. Keeping it growing year after year is a different matter, and involves certain general principles which if followed, insure success. Once a lily plantation is established, there is less bother than with most other flowers of the garden.

A primary factor in growing lilies successfully is adequate drainage. No lily will tolerate wet feet. The ideal location for a lily plantation would be a well drained slope. A raised bed is the next preference. If neither is available or practical, the solution then lies in the preparation of the spot where the lilies are to be planted so that perfect drainage results. A cushion of sharp sand one or two inches deep may be provided upon which the bulbs rest, or the entire bulb may be surrounded with sand. This should be done only in soil that tends to drain rapidly, never in heavy clay, also the sand pocket will become a death trap.

Fall, when the stems have died down, is undoubtedly the most logical time to plant lilies. With any lily, time to establish roots in the soil before cold weather is important.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Mr. Usher,

This is just a letter of appreciation, to let you know how much I appreciate having "The old home town paper", each week. It is surprising, how much one can enjoy news from the home town, after one has been away for a while. Here at the station, I manage to keep busy, there are lots of magazines, technical books, and many things, such as puttering around the lawn. However, every time the mail comes, on Monday mornings, I am right on hand, to get the Courier, to find out what is happening back home.

I guess I am one of the fewer lucky ones, in the Navy. I am on what is called 'detached duty' and I do not live on the station to which I am attached, but have a room on the "outside". It seems to me to be just like a civilian job. Of course I cannot state the type of work I am doing, but I assure you that I enjoy the service very much, and when it comes to making that old choice between the types of service, I think it will be Navy for me every time.

It seems this is a small world after all. I have had the good luck to run into, a fellow who knows, Charlevoix quite well. He is a Coast Guardsman who has been on the coast guard cutter, "Escanaba" and put into Charlevoix several times. He seems to be quite well aquainted with northern Michigan. His name is Denny Denton, he is a Radioman first class in the Coast Guard. We have formed a very nice friendship on the basis of our mutual liking for northern Michigan.

Well, asmuch as I dislike to, I guess I will have to close. It is late in the afternoon, and I am a victim of the bad habit most of us humans have, and that is eating. Yes, as we put it here, it is "chow" time, so I really must close for now.

Indefinite as it may be, I promise to write more later, and perhaps I can make it more interesting.

As a parting shot, I will have to ask a favor, I would like to have the address on my paper changed, again.—This time the address, (I hope) will be more permanent. My present address is:

Desmond K. Johnson, seaman 2/c USNR
U. S. Naval Radio Monitoring Station
Georgetown Station,
Seattle, Washington

Thanks a lot, couldn't miss the Courier for anything.

Sincerely,

or as they say to put it now:

Yours for Victory,
Desmond K. Johnson

Dear Ken,

I want to apologize for not writing to you sooner and to thank you for sending me the home paper.

I receive the Courier every week and it does wonders for me. I am quite a little way from the home town and when I read your paper it makes me feel as if I am right back there again. I generally read it over and over again for fear I had missed some of the news.

I've been down in this part of the country for two months now, and don't like it any better. I know now why Michigan is such a great state. I'm in the field artillery and have just passed my examinations for officers training school and that's the only part I like about it. We have a tough job to do and I'm in an outfit that's going to do its share.

From what I hear and read Charlevoix is well represented in this conflict, and I'm sure glad to be one of those who are in it.

I can't think of any more to write about at the present time but hope to soon, and I promise you will receive a few lines from me then.

I want to thank you again, Ken, for sending me the best little newspaper ever printed. It really does wonders for me.

Here's to Victory
Glen Helse
E Batry., 32nd Bn.,
8th Reg., F. A. R. T. C.
Fort Sill, Okla.

Following is a composite of two letters from Richard Bergmann, U. S. Army, with the A. E. F. in the far east.

Although passed by the army censor, this letter revealed the presence of American troops in an area not yet officially announced as a combat zone. The Courier has voluntarily deleted any references to this locality, in accordance with newspaper censorship regulations which do not allow publishing the whereabouts of any A. E. F. until announcement is made by governmental authority.

Dear Mother and Dad and Gang,

How do you like the paper? It should be made of solid gold for the price I paid for it. . . We don't know where we are or where we're going or the places we stop at. . . We stopped in a harbor and got a few hours shore leave. It helped to break up the trip and did most of us good. The people were very nice to us. A lot of the boys were asked to private homes to dinner. They had clubs there very much the same as the U.S.O. at home. It looked very much like some towns in the States, and there were many things that did come from the States such as slot machines, pinball machines and the likes of that stuff. The shows were built very much the same as the big shows in the cities at home. The pictures are mostly from the States. But they're put on different than at home. They put the lights on about every 15 minutes. Some of them even serve tea, coffee and cakes.

July 23: Got here O. K. From what some of the soldiers on the dock say, things aren't so good. It sure is plenty hot.

July 26: We got in this camp yesterday off the boat. Got three letters from home, mailed June 19. The mail comes and goes by air. We're only allowed two letters a week, two pages on one side to a letter. Some of the mail goes by boat, so it takes from two weeks to four months.

We get paid in native money. But things are so cheap a private is a rich man. There isn't much to buy anyway. We can get soap, candy, cigs, coke and things like that at the P. X. We get our food from the States an it's pretty good. We have showers, shows almost every night, ball games. We sleep in tents. We have lizards about a foot long that almost live with us. But they eat flies and bugs and don't harm us any so they're good to have around.

So far I've seen nothing but sand. I can't see what people want here. The people look like scare crows. The buildings look nice on the outside, but if the insides are like the people, they're pig pens. It rained the other day. They say it was the first time in five years. Not is no word for this place, but it get real cool at night, so we sleep with a blanket. We're getting near the end of this trip and then it will be all work.

It's almost dark, so will have to stop. I'll send this post card of Cape Town, South Africa, instead of writing another page.

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

We now are doing what we said we would do!

We're fighting the enemy wherever he is to be found—afloat, ashore and aloft—on all seven seas and in far places of the earth.

We are entering upon that time for which we have waited patiently, a time in which we carry the offensive to our enemies. We do not have our enemy by the throat—not yet—but we have came to grips with him. The fight is under way.

From now on, then, we at home must redouble our effort in the tasks assigned to us. Every move our fighting men make is upheld and supported by the united efforts of all of us.

The mechanism of the home front is a complex mechanism. Materials, production, distribution, the system of rationing and of controlling prices, the salvage program—all of these, and much else, combine to make the cogs and gears and wheels keep our war effort rolling.

You may be tired of hearing about salvage and rationing, you may be weary of collecting scrap—yet we cannot win our fight on the world's far flung fronts without full cooperation on all phases of the war program laid down for us. Only if each one of us does his part will we have enough—barely enough—for our needs.

At this moment, when our troops are fighting, we cannot tolerate sly attempts to dodge restrictions. Most of us accept the deprivations cheerfully. The person who tries to dodge rationing regulations, who tries to beat price and rent control, who thinks it smart to get illegally materials reserved for the armed forces—that person is as surely a saboteur as though he had been landed on our coast from a Nazi sub.

Here's news for housewives. Office of Price Administration has announced that during the 10-week period beginning August 23 and ending October 31, ration stamp No. 8 will be good for five pounds of sugar. That is more sugar than has been assigned to any previous ration stamp, but it is a longer ration period too.

Next month a lot of feet are going to be stepped on, a lot of arms are going to ache. The Office of Defense Transportation says that by mid-September the nation's local transportation systems will be carrying the heaviest load in their history. A lot of us will be hanging onto straps and stepping back into crowded cars and buses. But that's war!

The only two man labor-management committee in the war production drive consists of Jake Sparling, 60, and Percy Fogelsonger, 70. They're the entire force of a Bay City, Michigan, "factory" making steel flanges for war machinery.

Looks as if the wooden ice box will be back in the American home. The ice box is one of many items in which wood will be replacing metal. And you'll probably be seeing more wooden wash tubs and pails around the house than you have for years. However, the high quality timber will go first of all for military purposes.

The Boy Scouts are distributing leaflets explaining price control to 25,000,000 homes throughout the country. WPB has started a program to reclaim millions of gallons of chemical solvents and oils. These products are critically needed by our war machine and are being wasted now—and the department of interior is making it possible to harvest yucca from public lands. Yucca, which grows wild and abundantly throughout the southwest, is a domestic substitute for the hemp and jute fibers we used to get from the Far East. It can be used to make rope and twine, burlap and materials used in mattresses and in upholstery. A loss of key men in coal mines to other war industries and the armed forces is limiting production and threatens to make it impossible for the mines to supply the fuel needed for war industry and essential civilian uses. Not to be opened until Christmas—OPA has exempted "trees, mistletoe, holly, ferns, plants and other green stuffs" from the provisions of the general maximum price regulations.

AT THE MOVIES

"Reap the Wild Wind"

Three rousing cheers for Cecil B. DeMille, the only man in Hollywood who could have made "Reap the Wild Wind" the rousing, roudy, resplendent riot of color, adventure and sheer "bigness" that it is. The film, starring Ray Milland, Paulette Goddard and John Wayne, has its local premiere at the Palace theatre August 30 and run three days.

DeMille took a thrilling story, written by Thelma Strabel and published in the Saturday Evening Post, and turned it into as thrilling a Technicolor movie as the eyes of this reviewer has ever seen.

Set in 1840 when America's sea borne trade was threatened by wreckers who operated out af Key West and took advantage of the wild hurricanes of the Caribbean, "Reap the Wild Wind" tells the exciting story of a boy and a girl, Milland and Paulette, who helped to end the piracy. Behind the love story is the broad sweep of history, forrunner of a later day when steel-hulled undersea pirates would wreck ships off the very same shores.

Supporting the stars is a large and distinguished cast, including Raymond Massey, Lynne Overman, Robert Preston, Susan Hayward, Charles Bickford, Walter Hampden, Martha O'Driscoll and Janet Beecher.

"Are Husbands Necessary"

Ray Milland has clipped the comedy jackpot in Paramount's comedy of dizzy domesticity, "Are Husbands Necessary?", due on September 2 at the Palace theatre. He's ably aided by Betty Field, who shares the stellar spot, and by exotic Patricia Morison, Eugene Paliette and a half dozen other first-flight film funsters.

Made from the best-seller Isabel Scott Rorick novel, "Mr. and Mrs. Cugat," the picture presents the tall and handsome Ray in his top comedy role to date. As George Cugat, a young banker with a future and a slightly giddy wife, he frolics through some of the funniest scenes of his career. Betty, of course, is Mrs. Cugat and the sultry, blue-eyed Pat Morison is the "ther woman," a manned divorcee who sets her cap for Ray and almost wrecks a happy home.

Much of the picture's comedy centers aronnd the Cugat habit of "whiffling," telling little white lies. The twosome "whiffle" themselves into one tight spot after another—and then get out again by telling more "whiffles."

REDUCE WHEAT ACRES, NOT YIELD

Reasonable reduction of wheat acreage in Michigan makes logic, but any wheat grown ought to produce efficiently a high yield, asserts Paul Rood, soils extension specialist at Michigan State College.

He points to the huge national wheat stockpile, but also reminds producers that wheat has become one of the standard livestock and poultry feeds in the state. Regardless of acreage, he maintains, 30 bushels of wheat should be produced on one acre, not on two.

"Only land well suited should be planted to wheat," says Mr. Rood. "High yields are gained by early and skillful seedbed preparation, good seed varieties, dust treating of seed for disease control and not planting without fertilizer."

Nitrogen will not be contained in commercial fertilizers for 1942 wheat plantings. But nitrogen is available in farm manure. One load of manure an acre supplies as much nitrogen as is normally applied by nitrogen fertilizers.

Manure should be applied and worked into the seedbed before planting, Rood suggests. Then the phosphate or the phosphate and potash fertilizer mixture should be applied through the fertilizer distributors of the grain drill in liberal amounts as the wheat is seeded.

Wheat growers accustomed to using 300 pounds an acre of an 0-20-20 analysis may be able to purchase only a lower analysis such as 0-12-12. The answer, Roods says, is to apply 500 pounds of the 0-12-12 to get the same amount of plant food an acre.

For heavy soils the commercial fertilizer recommendations suggest 18 or 20 percent superphosphate with or without manure for nitrogen. For light soils such as sands or sandy loams, growers should use 0-20-20 or 0-12-12 preferably with manure for nitrogen. Winter and early spring topdressing of wheat fields with manure is recommended especially on the sandy-textured soils.

SALVAGE FATS GO INTO EXLOSIVES

American kitchens until recently have been witnessing the waste of more than two billion pounds of fat annually. Now Michigan housewives and those in other states are beginning to participate in a fat salvage campaign designed to corral glycerine for use in explosives.

Through neighborhood leaders, the extension service of the Michigan State College, in cooperation with the national program, is urging the saving of excess cooking fats and arranging with meat dealers for collection. The fat is then passed on to renderers.

Waste fats should be saved and used when usable in preparing foods. Seasoning, frying, baking or making gravy are logical uses. When the fats are dark and strong, or when a surplus is evident, this should be saved, kept cool and not permitted to get rancid.

Meat dealers have asked that fat not be brought to them on weekends when they are busy with their regular retail trade. Instead, the fat should be taken to the meat dealer earlier in the week, in quantities not less than a pound.

The salvage fat should be free of meat scraps and should not be carried to the meat dealer in glass containers. Breakage would involve danger to the handler and the glass fragments would be difficult to take out of the grease. Clean, wide-mouthed cans such as coffee cans make good receptacles for storing and carrying the fats to market.

A few cents a pound will be paid to the housewives by the meat dealer, who handles the fat at cost in passing the collection along to the rendering firms.

TEA AND COFFEE

Canada has begun a definite rationing of tea and coffee. Four ounces per person per week is the coffee allowance, one ounce of tea—and not both. This means that if a person is accustomed to drinking coffee at one or two meals a day, tea at the other, it is going to come hard. The quarter pound of coffee must last two weeks. So must the ounce of tea. Americans are not down to that limitation yet, but they are on the way. The coffee scarcity may be remedied if the shipping to South America can be made safer, and the prospects are fairly good for improvement. But the tea scarcity, alas, seems definite and final for the year at least. There is little hope of lightening it.

Perhaps Americans will find themselves turning to other herb drinks. There was "camomile tea" known to the grandmothers, for example; peppermint, and boneset, too, and half a dozen others.

In the Civil War, parched wheat was often used for coffee, so the real coffee could go to the soldiers. If people take to staying at home evenings and going to bed earlier, they may not need so much strong coffee.

Keep 'em firing—with junk!

FARM TOPICS

CHECK UP DAIRY FEED SUPPLIES

Follow Composition Table For Best Results.

By DR. GEORGE E. TAYLOR
(Extension Dairyman, New Jersey College Of Agriculture, Rutgers University.)

Now is the time for American dairymen to take inventory of their dairy feed supplies. Not only is it wise from their own economic standpoint, it's also the patriotic thing to do—patriotic because it is one step toward fulfilling the government's request for a 6 to 8 per cent increase in milk production during the national emergency.

By following a more regular feeding schedule, you'll avoid drops in production due to sudden changes in ration. Don't forget that purchased feed will cost more this fall. Check on your supply of corn, oats and barley.

Consult a composition table before buying feed and purchase the kind which supply nutrients at the lowest rate. Sometimes that which is the cheapest per 100 pounds is the most costly in the long run. For example, suppose wheat bran is priced at $1.54 per 100 pounds, soybean oil meal at $1.79 per 100 and linseed oil meal at $1.70 per 100. Wheat bran contains 15 pounds of total protein per 100, soybean oil meal 40 pounds and linseed oil meal 37 pounds, according to the table.

If you divide the pounds of protein into the cost per 100 weight, you'll find that protein in wheat bran—the cheapest per 100 weight—costs 10 cents a pound, in soybean oil meal 4.5 cents a pound and in linseed oil meal 4.6 cents a pound. Thus buying the soybean oil meal and the linseed oil meal—two for the sake of variety since the cost is approximately the same—dollars will be saved in the long run.

Turkey Industry Is Expanding Rapidly

New features of the poultry situation include the prospect for heavy production of commercial broilers this winter and next spring, the possibility of a poorer cold-storage demand for turkeys this year than last, and a fairly good storage demand for eggs during the period of flush production next spring. The expanded commercial broiler industry now affects the prices of chickens, ducks and turkeys at all times of the year.

There was a time when broilers sold in early spring for two to three times the price of fowl, but now they are practically on a competitive basis. Approximately 100,000,000 commercial broilers are produced annually, and marketed the year 'round. Areas of large production include Arkansas, California, Delaware, Indiana, Maryland, the New England states, and Virginia. The production of ducks also is an expanding and competing industry. Ducks commonly are priced so low that producers complain the only profit is in the sale of the feathers.

Seasonal, of course, has been the expansion of the turkey industry. California this year has replaced Texas as the leading producing state; and Minnesota, with nearly 3,000,000 birds raised this year, is a close runnerup. States producing between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 turkeys include Ohio, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, Nebraska, Virginia, Oklahoma, and Oregon. The 1940 turkey crop of more than 32,000,000 birds was the second largest on record, but the effect of this upon price may be offset by the improved consumer demand.

Simple Test for Egg Freshness Explained

An egg is a sealed package of fine food when it is laid by the hen. It is the only product that Nature gives us that is sealed without the touch of human hands. "However," points out T. T. Brown, extension poultryman of North Carolina State college, "eggs that bring a premium on the market are those that the consumer desires—eggs that are fresh, large, clean, uniform in size and color, and sound in shell.

The State college man suggests a simple home method of determining if eggs are fresh. "Place the eggs in a pan of water," he says, "and the good ones will rest flat on the bottom of the vessel; those that have lost some of their quality will stand on end; and very poor ones will rise somewhat. Those that rise are older or poorly kept."

Electric Help

C. T. Keen, Marshall county, Iowa, hog raiser, keeps litters of different ages separated when out on pasture by the use of temporary electric fences. These divide the field into strips, with one or more houses in each section for shelter.

In this way, robbing of younger suckling pigs is avoided. It makes feeding and watering more of a chore; but later, as the pigs get old enough to hold their own, the fences are removed.

Throw your scrap into the fight.

3. Use well-established machinery. Exchange labor with a neighbor. Use livestock to harvest crop whenever possible.

4. Study the farm and building layout—changes can sometimes be made to save labor.

Machinery means power, when prices and wages are rising, "farmers with the most machinery make the highest farm earnings," the experiment station reports.

"In depression or low-price years the farmer with the most machinery suffers the greatest losses. Thus, while farmers are justified in spending to buy badly needed new machinery and in making needed repairs, they should guard against becoming over-mechanized because 'there will be a day'."

The mechanized Michigan farm must make wide use of its machinery "to keep down the cost per hour of use." Before investing in new machinery, farmers are urged to consider the size of business, topography of their farms, and the farm layout itself.

"Buying good second - hand equipment often pays, if there is not too much work to be done."

Cooperative purchase and use of farm machinery is also recommended as a means of assuring a low production cost.

When farm prices are high, make needed repairs or improvements in the farm plant, is another recommendation. They will enable efficient operation for several years during a period of low prices.

"Remodeling of buildings now being fully used is sometimes the most economical procedure. Unused barn space can be made into cow stables, or the upstairs of an old building might be made into a poultry house. Dairy barns and poultry houses should not exceed the value of the animals houses."

Low-income years are coming, just as surely as the night follows day.

The college study recommends making "hay while the sun shines" with regard to today's increased farm income.

"Surplus funds, which may develop as a result of higher farm prices, might well be used for the following purposes:

"1. Reduction of debt obligations, particularly those of a long term nature.

"2. Purchase of defense saving bonds.

"3. Providing for the education of the children.

"These would build up the reserve for low-income years and tend to reduce farm overhead expenses."

tive service registration card when he asks to see your driving license, or mistake your coast guard identification card for a hunting license. Instead of eliminating portions of one's clothing, they should add at least one more special pocket to hold the cards, licenses and papers you have to carry nowadays for normal existence.

And that reminds me Ed. Snider reported seeing a big buck and doe munching away in his sweet corn patch just south of town a few days ago.

Most everybody having a coal pile probably shoveled some of it into the furnace in order to keep warm Sunday and again Monday night. And if you're in the habit of keeping track of how the weather runs from year to year you'd not be surprised at the consistency of cold spells during August. In 1940 we stoked the furnace August 23, 24 and 25, last year it was August 21 and 22, and this year on the 23rd and 24th.

When national selective service officials warned that calls for military duty would be heavy during late summer and early fall, they weren't fooling. Charlevoix county's second August contingent will leave for examination the 27th and the first September call is scheduled the 2nd—just 6 days apart.

Navy officials were looking over the Hamilton & Son boatyard a few days ago. Looks like something is in the air!

Carl Kohler, who has been operating his machine shop practically on a 24-hour basis on regular and defense production, slipped up into the upper peninsula over the week end for a couple days of rest. Too much of anything is bad for a fellow, and there's nothing quite so good to sooth jangled nerves as the big woods.

SERVICE FLAG CARDS AT COURIER OFFICE

V. F. W. Gives Flags for Homes Represented in Armed Forces

Service flag window cards are now available, at the Courier office, by courtesy of the local post of Veterans of Foreign Wars. No charge is made for the cards, which are designed for display in every home that is represented by a father, husband, son or brother in the armed forces of the United States.

Service within boundaries of the United States is indicated by a blue star. The silver star denotes service outside the continental United States, whether on the seas, in United States possessions, or on foriegn soil. The gold star is a tribute to those who have given their lives for the country in time of war.

When the soldier, sailor or marine represented by the blue star leaves the shores of the United States for any combat zone, a silver star will be furnished on request, to be affixed over the blue star. AIRCRAFT CARRIER SIGHTED THURSDAY

U. S. S. Wolverine Passed on Way to Chicago Base

Local citizens were afforded a sight of the first and only aircraft carrier on the Great Lakes last Thursday, when the former pleasure cruiser "Seeandbee", now the "USS Wolverine," passed on her way from Cleveland to Chicago.

Sighted first early in the afternoon, the ship cruised slowly back and forth some distance out in the lake until about 8 o'clock in the evening, when it headed south.

The "Seeandbee"was purchased by the navy last March, and a Cleveland shipyard transformed it into a carrier, shifting her superstructure and smokestack to the port side and erecting the huge, overhanging flight deck. Only the sidewheel propellor remains as a reminder of its pleasure usage, making it probably the only sidewheel aircraft carrier in the world.

Commissioned at Chicago Saturday, the Wolverine will be used on Lake Michigan as a training carrier for student aviators learning carrier landings and take-offs. Her home base will be the Chicago naval armory.

4-H TO COMPETE AT MSC SEPT. 7

Boys and girls from 70 of Michigan's 83 counties will compete at Michigan State College September 7 in events that will include the greatest 4-H club livestock show ever held in the state.

The program will include judging of more than 800 head of livestock, compared with the 571 exhibited in the State Fair at Detroit a year ago. In livestock and other events the premiums available will total approximately $7,000, explains A. G. Kettunen, state leader of 4-H club work.

Educational exhibits will present a sampling of what more than 55,000 youths in 4-H club work are doing in Michigan as their part in Victory production. The show will be combined with the college Farmers' Day which will permit visitors to see the latest in research and farm science.

As the 4-H club members bring in their livestock and other exhibits they will be registered September 5, 6 or 7. Boys will be given sleeping quarters in the women's gymnasium. Girls are to sleep in women's dormitories.

Commission men from the central livestock markets will use the club livestock to give a public exhibition of cattle grading. Members of the Michigan Cattle Feeders association will meet to consider pooling purchase orders for getting western feeders this fall.

Judging of demonstrations, achievement booths and a dress revue are included in the 4-H club program for Sept. 7. Some of the club members will remain on the campus for judging contests scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 8.

MEMORIAL FUND DIRECTORS HELD MEETING

Report on Lenore Goldman Myer Fund Operations Is Given

A joint meeting of the directors and local operating committee of the Lenore Goldman Myer Memorial Fund was recently held at the home of Alvin Goldman on Michigan avenue.

The local operating committee, composed of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bridge, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Myer, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ranger, reported in detail on the cases handled and the amount of aid extended during the past year. This August marks the second year of operation of the memorial fund. Its aim is to provide emergency aid to cases not qualifying for county relief, but in need of assistance not otherwise obtainable.

Approximately fifty cases have been handled during the existence of this memorial fund, and relief has been given in the form of clothing and footwear, fuel, food, and some household necessities. In addition, an annual contribution has been made to the local school feeding project to provide milk to needy children who otherwise might be without this valuable nutrition.

The committee wishes to express their appreciation to those who have shown an interest in this work and to the many friends who have contributed to the fund.

EDITORIAL

"THE EMPTY ROOM"

That is the caption of an advertisement—one of the most inspiring advertisements we have ever seen. The illustration shows a middle-aged man, standing alone and looking into a boy's bedroom. The text has him saying:

"This is my boy's room.

"This is where he slept.

"This is where he dreamed a child's dreams.

"This is where he saw a man's visions.

"Here, in this empty room, are faded pictures of teammates and heroes . . books scribbled over with notes and exclamations . . . the gloves and spike shoes we hung up for good before he went to war . . . the silver cup he won at Sea Bright . . . bright pennants . . . and all the careless memoranda, the echoes of his days.

"If fathers could only pour their hate through the hot barrels of smoking guns and write the records of their grief with bayonet steel!

"They say I was too old to fight, though I'm only 50.

"But, if I'm too old to sight and drop a stick of bombs, I'm not too old to lay my money on the line for War Savings Stamps and Bonds!

"Maybe I am too stiff and slow to fly, but I've got control enough to keep my car speed under 40 . . . so they can keep their fighting planes above 400!

"And if I can't march 30 miles a day with a full pack, I can walk two miles to work and back to help save gas and rubber!

"No, I'm not bitter any more because I won't win this war behind a gun or on a ship or in the sky.

"I've come around to thinking that here at home we've got the job of passing the ammunition along, of sacrificing little things, of giving up and going without, of looking ahead to 'less' instead of 'more.' Somebody's got to do the necessary, undramatic things . . . and I guess that's what older men are for."

To the United States Rubber Co., which sponsors this advertisement, and to the artist and the writer who prepared it, our thanks. Through the door of an empty room they have given us a glimpse beyond the squabbling and striving for advantage, the petty arguments and futile buck passing that sometimes seem to be the chief substance of our war effort here at home, into the real heart of America.—This editorial is reprinted from the New York World-Telegram, July 15, 1942.

Pay Bounty on 37 Coyotes

Bounty payments on 37 coyotes and nine bobcats in July cost the conservation department $715. All except three coyotes taken in Alcona county were bountied in the upper peninsula.

Nails are little things but 4-H Club members in Greensburg, Kentucky, recently salvaged 3,125 pounds of them from the ruins of a burned tobacco warehouse to help keep the steel mills going.

LIONS VARSITY TRIMMED FROSH

SCORED 23-14 VICTORY HERE SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Harry Hopp Stars for Veterans; Tommy Colella Sparked the Yearling Attack

The varsity, composed of the veterans of the Detroit Lions football team, avenged the defeat they suffered at the hands of the freshmen last year, when they hammered out a 23-14 decision over the rookies before about 2,500 fans here Sunday, in the annual varsity-freshman football game.

It wasn't an easy task, for the freshman eleven had a fellow named Tommy Colella, who came to the Lions with a reputation as a passer but who Sundsy turned out to be a spectacular runner.

Tommy scored both the freshmen touchdowns, one a jaunt of 60 yards and the other a 74-yard sprint during which he demonstrated that he was a dangerous broken field runner.

Just as Colella was the big gun in the freshman attack, Harry Hopp, back at his old tailback spot, sparked the varsity scoring. His first touchdown was only a short eight yard jaunt that was made easy by some hefty blocking on the part of Harry Seltzer and Bill Calihan, but the second was a masterpiece, running 75 yards from a play that had been rehearsed but twice.

The varsity drew first blood when the veteran Alex Wojciechowicz intercepted one of Colella's passes on the rookies' 30 yard line and lumbered back to the eight. Hopp carried it over from there.

That made the frosh mad and they came right back two plays later to score on their own. Emil Banjavic, the rookie from Arizona, brought the kickoff 24 yards and then added two more to the 26.

Then Colella gave his first running exhibition. He started out to his right, picked up Murray Evans, blocking back from Texas who mowed down two of the varsity, cut to his left and was off on the 74 step gallop. Then George Speth kicked the extra point and the score was tied.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

Some folks are never satisfied, I guess. A week ago Sunday I heard some people complaining about the cold and last Sunday the same persons were lamenting the fact it was so hot.

Football is pretty much alike, no matter where it is played. There is a difference, though, between high school and professional football from a standpoint of quality—and that's what a couple of thousand fans who witnessed the Detroit Lions varsity vs. freshman tilt discovered last Sunday at south side athletic field. It was a real exhibition and the first example of high class pigskin-toting a lot of us natives had ever seen.

And speaking about football, it appears Charlevoix is gaining somewhat of a reputation as a pre-season training location. Wayne University's squad will locate here within a short time, along with the Detroit Lions. The cooler climate makes it possible to work the men harder and thus whip them into proper physical condition sooner. The Lions like it here and no doubt the Wayne University group will do likewise. And to those responsible for bringing these two football clubs here, will say it was a nice piece of work and merits commendation.

One of our rural friends says he has a hickory nut tree which bears more nuts than anything he ever saw except one of those new fangled social projects.

There have been some awful nice catches of bass taken from the channel between Round lake and Lake Charlevoix during the past week. And for your information, there's an occasional steelhead being taken in Lake Charlevoix. A party from Dan Clothier's had a nice one Monday, another party hooked hut lost one Saturday and I heard it rumored three were taken one day earlier last week. Maybe the "run" will be on early this fall, and if so, let's hope it's better than the past couple years.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Dear Ken:

Just a line or two this evening while I've got a few spare moments. The good old home town paper reaches me every Monday.

There's a fellow in the same barracks with me who is from Petoskey, he too finds the Charlevoix Courier very interesting. He also gets his home town paper, so we swap whenever we get through reading the paper.

I always read your column "Letters fro the army camps."

This parachute outfit is really tough and I mean tough. Every day we go out and fire about three hundred rounds of ammunition with the tommy gun, another week of that and I should be able to hit a barn (I hope). We never jump during the day any more, It's always during the middle of the night. It makes the ground hard to judge but I'll get used to it if I keep that up.

Well, I guess I'll close for now, hoping this letter finds you in good health. Keep the presses rolling. Good Luck,

Yours truly

MICHIGAN COUNCIL OF DEFENSE
Michigan War Week

Neighbor Clubs Bring Families Into War Effort

Lansing,—Plans of the Michigan Council of Defense will bring Michigan families into all phases of the war effort in close cooperawith their neighbors. Under a program suggested by Don C. Weeks, director of Civilian war services of the MCD, neighborhood groups of as many as 50 families will organize War clubs to take over salvage and other war effort campaigns. The neighborhood clubs will be available for service in all communities with an organization set-up ready to go on any project of the war effort, which may develop.

War clubs will select their own leaders and hold regular meetings to receive and discuss information on all types of home front defense problems. Neighborhood groups will form the framework for any community or state-wide campaign in which their service may be utilized. Through state-wide family organization, the Michigan council of defense expects to bring all efforts to the levels of well directed neighborhood activity.

Rubber Moving on Schedule

Michigan's drive for rubber was a success. Scrap rubber is moving out of the state to the stock pile at Cleveland on schedule and at a rate to assure the removal of all rubber by Oct. 1. The few piles now remaining at filling stations are being picked up as rapidly as possible. Limited authorization for rail and motor truck facilities has tended to slow removal but transportation has been greatly accelerated recently. There are only about a dozen reclaiming mills in the country.

OCD Gives Answers

The new handbook, "What Can I Do", issued by the office of civilian defense, answers the questions of millions of citizens, who have been asking how they can serve their country in the war effort. The new manual, distribution of of which started Sept. 1, has complete information on qualifications, training and duties in all branches af the protective and home front services. The book will be distributed through the Michigan council of defense and local and county councils.

Invited to Michigan

Robert P. Patterson, under secretary of war, has accepted the invitation of Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner to come to Michigan, Sept. 12, to inspect the Ford bomber plant at Willow Run and the state's defense highway system leading to it. He will dedicate the highway department's trilevel grade separation structure at the plant. On a tour, sponsored by the Michigan council of defense in cooperation with local and county councils, the under secretary will share in western Michigan war production day activities at Muskegon the same day. The tour will extend Sunday to Negaunee, where all Upper Peninsula counties will participate in a war production day program.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

WHEN I drop into Sam Abernethy's store, I usually come away with something worth rememberin'.

Sam's our town's most successful storekeeper and he's not one to do much talking, unless he figures he's really got something to say.

Last evenin' he said plenty.

Stranger was in the store. And Ben Ryder, Homer Bentley and some others were talkin' about the scrap collection when this feller sort of horned in . . .

"I hear these scrap collections are a lot a bunk," he says. "Fact of the matter is, this junk they're gathering ain't no use for makin' steel. Just a waste of time gettin' it together . . ."

At that point Sam steps in.

"Just a minute," he says, fixing him with a cold and steely eye. "May I inquire where you got them so-called facts?"

The stranger hems and haws, and Sam advances on him grim and unsmilin'.

"Name your authority, sir," he says. And he wasn't kiddin'! "Tell us, where did you get all this inside, private information?"

Well, sir, I never saw Sam so mad since Lem Martin's dog chased the cat into the pickle barrel. And I guess I never saw a man crawfish out of a place fast as that feller did.

Thinking it over afterwards, I came to the conclusion that Sam's got the real system for handling folks who throw facts and figures around free and easy like.

F'instance, I've noticed there's some pretty fancy fact and figure jugglin' done by some of those who oppose the right enjoyed by millions of decent people to drink a friendly glass of beer when they want to.

Lately I've been asking these folks the same kind of questions that Sam asked that rumormongerin' stranger. Try it yourself, next time you hear anybody making derogatory remarks—whether it's against the war effort . . . or just against beer.

THESE ARE BATTLE STATIONS TOO

War calls must go through!

You probably never thought of central office switchboards as "battle stations." They are vital today . . . and unnecessary Long Distance calls bottleneck the switchboards.

Normally, we'd build enough extra circuits to handle the load. But, today, war production needs the copper, steel, rubber and other materials required for adequate telephone expansion.

Here are a few ways you can help speed the war effort:

1. Make only the most essential Long Distance calls, and especially avoid the crowded lines listed at the left.
2. Keep all your conversations as brief as you can.
3. When possible, give the number of the telephone you are calling on Long Distance.

We can all help to make the most of present telephone facilities. For example: Never ask Information for a number that is listed in the directory. It crowds the already busy equipment unnecessarily. Before you pick up the telephone — remember: WAR CALLS MUST GO THROUGH.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: To keep Northland Airways in business Alan Slade agrees to fly a so-called scientist named Frayne and his partner, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds Slade's partner, Crozer, buys a Lockheed plane, which is stolen. When he returns from the Anawotto Slade starts out to recover the plane. In this he is being helped by an eskimo named Uolanak and by his old prospector friends, Zeke and Minty. Acting on a hunch Slade has gone to Frayne's camp and has discovered that the missing plane is hidden there. Cliff Tumstead, a flyer who has lost his license for drinking and is little more than an outlaw, has been flying it for Frayne. But when Slade attempts to examine the plane's cargo he is knocked unconscious by Karnell. Tumstead saves him from being killed by Karnell, only to abandon him later on a deserted island because he "knows too much." Tumstead has just taken off again, after leaving Slade with only a knife, a pound of German army chocolate, a can of "bully" beef and what looks like an empty tin.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XIV

He placed the knife on the shore slops. Beside it he placed the pound of German chocolate, and beside that again the tin of bully-beef. After studying them for a long time he reached for the tobacco tin.

This, when he opened it, proved not to be entirely empty. In it, to his surprise, he found half a dozen steal fishhooks.

"If they want to do it Injin style," said Minty, "it's okay with me."

—14—

He stared at them for a full minute, remembering how more than one bush pilot had the habit of carrying such things in his emergency equipment. They gave a promise of food, in case of a forced landing in a wilderness threaded with waterways.

Then, with a gasp of apprehension, he crawled about the slope, carefully retrieving the scattered lengths of cord that had been cut from his wrists and ankles. The best of them were only a few feet in length. But he had proof enough of their strength. And when knotted together they would provide him with a fish line that might land anything from an inconnu to a five-pound whitefish.

That gave him the courage to climb the rocky ledge behind him and examine his island. There was growth enough about him, he saw, to make a shelter of some sort, growth enough for firewood and the smoking of fish. And along the westerly shore where the slopes ended in sedgy meadows his gaze came to rest on a wide field of bulrushes. That gave him new hope.

He was alone in an empty world. But as he stood straight on his lonely ridge of rock he told himself that he hadn't yet reached the end of his rope.

Two embattled and odd-looking figures groped their way northward between the muskegs and the rocky hogbacks that stretched out to the skyline beyond Lake Avikaka. Each man carried a rifle and a cartridge belt that bristled with shells. Each was further burdened down with a blanket roll and a grub-bag. From the waist of one dangled a belt-ax, from the waist of the other swung a skillet and tea pail.

They went on, stoically slapping at black-flies and mosquitoes, until weariness overtook them and a lowering sun told them it was time to call it a day. Then they made camp, cooked their bacon and flapjacks, adjusted their mosquito bars, and rolled up in their worn and smoke-stained four-pointers.

When morning came they broke camp and once more hit the trail. They saw the sun climb higher in the heavens and the muskegs become fewer as they advanced into a country of bolder rock ridges with a scattering of tamerack along their southern slopes. They saw the shadows lengthen and the light once more thin out. And once more they made camp, and slept, and pushed on again.

"We're on the proper trail all right," observed Minty as he mounted a knoll and surveyed the surrounding landscape. "There's the black-water lake I skirted on my way back."

"There's been folks here before us," asserted Zeke, pointing to where scrub spruce had been cut along the hill slope.

"From the first crack out o' the box," said Minty, "I had a queer feelin' about that two-eyed swan-hunter. I knew he wasn't edgin' up into this district of ours for any good."

"Then why's he here?"

"That's what I'm a-goin' to find out," retorted the grizzled old prospector, "before he gits another sneakin' shot at my carcass."

It was as they were circling cautiously along the westerly arm of the lake that Zeke stopped short on a ridge crest that ended in a deep-water bayou. For moored close in under a cliff there he saw the scarred and sun-bleached wings of a plane.

"That's the Snow-Ball Baby," was Minty's sudden exclamation.

"That's Lindy's old crate all right," agreed the perplexed Zeke. "But where's our puddle-jumper?"

They still hesitated in their approach. But curiosity finally overcame them. When they found no pilot there, after invading his cabin, they regarded each other for a moment in silence.

"I don't like the look o' this," Zeke finally asserted.

"Chances are he's scoutin' round on foot," maintained Minty as he clambered ashore. But Zeke, who remained to assess the cabin's contents, shook a dubious head.

"There's grub and extra gas in there," he reported when he rejoined his companion. "There's even blankets and fly nets and one o' them new-fangled air mattresses."

"Then you'll see him headin' back here pronto," Minty persisted.

But at the end of an hour's wait the azure of his optimism was shadowed by a cloud or two.

"Something's happened to that boy," averred Zeke as his old eyes once more swept the silent rock ridges.

"Then it's up to us to roost here and keep an eye on his plane," was Minty's suggestion.

"I don't like the idee o' that ship anchored close in here where any outsider could climb aboard," said Zeke. "Where she ought to be is out in the middle o' that lake with a quarter-mile o' water between her and shore."

"How'd you git her there?" asked Minty, as he studied the plane. "I always had a hankerin' for knowin' how to handle one o' them contraptions. And right now that hankerin' is stronger'n ever."

But Zeke had his own ideas about the matter.

"I could float her out and anchor her there with a couple o' rock-slabs tied to her moorin'-lines," he explained. "Then she'd be where no one could sneak up on her."

"And how'd you git back?" demanded Minty.

"I'd blow up that air mattress of Lindy's and paddle ashore. And when our bush hawk shows back he can sail out to her in the same way."

"S'posin' he don't show back?"

"Then it's up to us," said Zeke, "to find out what's keepin' him away from a ship he'd never desert of his own free will."

But the shifting of the Snow-Ball to its new berth was no easy matter. And even with the plane safely anchored in mid-lake Zeke's troubles were not over. The inflated air mattress, from the first, proved a precarious craft. When halfway to shore, in fact, Zeke lost his balance and went overboard, with Minty's anxious eyes watching his struggles as he floundered about and finally resumed his perch on the little raft of rubber.

Minty, standing guard on his rock point, knew what would be needed, and needed at once. He dropped his rifle and lost no time in gathering wood and starting a fire. The flames were roaring by the time the wet and bedraggled Zeke crawled up the shore slope. His teeth were chattering and his language was blasphemous.

"Quit cussin'," admonished Minty, "and git out o' them clothes before they chill you to the bone."

Zeke's shirt was dry by the time he was ready to drink his tea. And his ill temper had departed by the time the dignity of clothing was restored to his sinewy old body.

"We can't squat round these embers no longer," he announced. "What we've got to do is sleuth out them white-skinned Comanches who're muscling in on our domain."

"Lead me to 'em," said Minty as he shouldered his pack and took up his rifle.

But Zeke, at the moment, was busy mounting a near-by ridge. He stood scanning the blue-misted slopes between him and the lowering sun. He squinted long and closely at the wooded crest across a wide valley studded with glacial bardheeds. And as he looked he saw a puff of smoke bloom for a moment against the hill-top spruce gloom at the same time a bullet whined over his head.

His reaction to that was automatic.

He dropped to the far side of the ridge, where he lay shouting for Minty to get under cover. But Minty disregarded that advice. He stood with his rifle at half-arm, studying the wooded crest across the valley. But the whine of a second bullet sent him ducking behind the shelter of a hardhead.

"They want fightin', eh?" he cried as he leveled his rifle along the stone top. "Well, they'll git it a-plenty."

But, after a two-man council of war, they realized that closing in on the enemy was not so simple as it might seem.

"If they want to do it Injin style," said Minty, "it's okay with me. There's no reason why two can't play at that game."

"But dodgin' round rock corners ain't goin' to find Alan," Zeke protested. "And our first job is to git trace o' that boy."

If they declined to retreat, however, they made their advance a more circuitous one. When nightfall came they quartered off at an angle, advancing craftily from rock shadow to rock shadow, their old eyes searching every ridge slope and hollow. But they encountered no sign of life. When weariness overtook them one would sleep for two hours while the other kept watch.

"I don't like this lull in things," observed Zeke as he blinked about the silent ridges. "Makes me suspicion them swan-hunters might be puttin' something over on us."

"Let 'em try it," barked Minty after a look into his cartridge chamber.

Zeke's weathered old face remained troubled.

"But while we're pirootin' through these empty pine woods and indulgin' our personal appetite for lead-slingin' they might be back-trackin' to Alan's Snow-Ball Baby. And I don't want to see anything happen to that boy's ship."

"It won't," averred Minty, "while I've still got a trigger to pull."

"Then my vote," said Zeke, "goes to gittin' back to that plane and standin' watch there until Alan shows up."

Minty adjusted his blanket roll and tightened his belt.

"I reckon you're right for once," he conceded.

Seated on the barren shore of his sub-arctic island, Alan Slade knew a recurring pang of despair much sharper than any pain in his abused body.

His first task, he told himself, was to take in the circle of his world, the only world that remained to him. His steps grew steadier as he mounted the shore slope and worked his way up to one of the bolder ridge crests.

From that vantage point he carefully studied his island.

That island, he found, was not so large as it had first seemed. So far as he could see it was empty of animal life. And this seemed confirmed as he explored its irregular shorelins. Along the rockier shore to the east, where he had hoped to stumble on driftwood, he found nothing beyond a tangle of bleached boles and branches, the best of them little thicker than a caribou-prong. They were useful only as a reserve of firewood.

The thought of a fire reminded him that one of his first needs was a shelter of some kind. He knew the north too well to nurse much fear of marauding animals. More than wandering bear or wolf, his enemies there would be the voracious arctic mosquito and the black-fly that left a burning ring of poison about its bite.

Under one of the higher crests he found a rock-jut with an over-hanging lip that made a shallow cave. The floor of that cave, he saw, he could bed with dried moss and sedge grass. The face of it he could close in with loose rocks and a matrix of scrub-timber branches from the near-by slopes. It would not only protect him from wind and rain but with a smudge fire going in its entrance it would be a defense against mosquitoes and black-flies. It would, for the time being, be his home.

To it he carried his beef-tin and his chocolate, his sheath knife and his precious little can of fishhooks, together with every carefully salvaged foot of the equally precious cord that had been cut from his wrists and ankles. For on those strands of cord, he remembered, might yet hang his hope of deliverance. With the evening coolness deepening around him he felt the need of a fire. He regretted not having an ax.

FROM THE GARDEN CLUB

Generally shasta daisies are considered free from disease. Recently, the fungus disease verticillium wilt has appeared among them. This can be a serious handicap to large plantings, as there is no known remedy, although some of them afford a measure of protection against its spread.

It is noticeable just before or at blooming time. One or more of the stems wilt. During the night the plant recovers but the next day it wilts again. Gradually the entire plant dies. If such a plant appears in the garden one should dig it out, together with the surrounding soil, and burn the plant, for it is practically impossible to save a plant so affected.

A very choice plant may sometimes be saved by the following method, if done when the first signs of wilting are observed. The plant should be dug carefully and the soil washed from its roots. That portion of the root containing the wilted stem should be cut out and half of the remaining plant, to be certain all the disease is removed. What is left should be soaked in a strong solution of disinfectant. Then, it should be replanted but kept away from the rest of the daisies. Another and perhaps better method is to take cuttings. If one of the roots hormones is used, nearly 100 per cent will root.

Verticillium wilt is perennial in the roots and is readily spread by dividing the infested clump. This disease is undoubtedly one cause for the loss of many plants during the winter, since infected plants are more susceptible to winter injury than normal plants in vigorous growth.

WRITTEN HUNTING PERMIT REQUIRED

Farmer, However, Has Right to Grant Oral Consent to Hunter

If likely looking pheasant territory draws more than the normal number of early fall purchasers of farm food stuffs, one good reason for such an increase could be the fact that this fall the farmer may require hunters on his land to carry his "written consent"—and some hunters do not want to be total strangers when the time for signing permit blanks rolls around.

In an opinion prepared at the request of the conservation department and dated October 31, 1941, the attorney general ruled that the farmer does not need to require written permits if he does not care to. But in any action by the owner for trespass, lack of the written permission will leave the hunter defenseless in court.

HUBERT E. McCANN IS TAKEN BY DEATH

Was Manager of Barry Hotel in Athens, Ohio

Hubert E. McCann, 34, a former Charlevoix resident, died suddenly Saturday morning at a hospital in Athens, Ohio. A heart attack following complications resulting from an appendicitis operation performed during the previous week, was the cause of his death.

Born November 1, 1907, at St. James, son of Mr. and Mrs. James McCann, he came to Charlevoix with his parents as a very small child. He graduated from Charlevoix high school in 1927, as class vice-president and an outstanding athletic.

Employed several summers at The Inn, in 1927 he went to Southern Pines, N. C., where he was employed by W. E. Flynn at the Highland Pines Inn. In 1928 he went to the Hotel Sinton in Cincinnati, Ohio, becoming assistant manager in 1932 and manager in 1939. Last December he left Cincinnati to take over management of the Barry Hotel in Athens, Ohio. He was a Kiwanis club member and held offices in various hotel associations.

He was married December 29, 1937, to Mrs. Harriet Schmitt of Cincinnati, who survives him.

Surviving besides the wife are a daughter, Clairjewel; his mother, Mrs. James McCann; a brother, Dan; and five sisters, Mrs. William Coveyou of Petoskey, Mrs. Monroe Block of New York, Ann and Mary McCann of Detroit, and Mrs. Herbert Campbell of this city.

The body was brought here Tuesday for funeral services on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock from St. Mary's church, Fr. John W. Collins officiating. Interment was at the Catholic cemetery.

CSO ASKS DONATIONS SUBSCRIPTION FUND

Nearly Hundred Service Men Sent Courier Free of Charge

While the Courier continues to be sent free of charge to service men, expense of printing and mailing papers each week has been taken over by the Charlevoix Service Organization.

Since the beginning of complimentary subscriptions to service men in May, 1941 the list has increased to almost one hundred names, and shifting of financial responsibility, based on actual cost, became necessary in order that the subscriptions might continue.

Appreciation expressed by the men for receiving the home town paper hundreds and sometimes thousands of miles from home has made the plan well worth while. But to carry on the project, CSO needs the support of every person in Charlevoix who understands how stimulating to the soldier's morale it is to receive news from home, to know what's going on back there.

Ralph Hamilton, CSO chairman, is receiving contributions for the subscription fund at Wallace's gas station. A coin container painted red, white and blue has been placed in the Central Drug store, where donations may also be made.

RAISE AGE LIMIT FOR SKILLED MEN

War Department Will Accept Enlistees from 45 to 50

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson announced Thursday that the war department has raised from 45 to 50 the age at which specially skilled men may enlist in the U. S. Army.

Heretofore, enlistment has been confined to men between the ages of 18 to 45. Under the new ruling, American citizens who reached their 45th birthday prior to February 16, 1942, and who at the time of application have not reached their 50th birthday are now acceptable for enlistment. Men in this age group, however, must have special qualifications.

They will be assigned to service command or war department overhead units where they will release younger men for general military service, Stimson said.

Prior to acceptance, men in this age group must obtain clearance from their local draft boards to prevent them from leaving positions in war industries to join the army.

KIWANIS NOTES

At the dinner meeting of the Kiwanis Club, Tuesday evening, the members enjoyed an address by Fred Bradley, Congressman from this district, on the subject of national defense. He traced the requirements of national defense and told of the remarkable strides industry is making to fill these requirements. It was a very definite presentation of facts showing the needs of our nation and the part each should take to attain the goals set.

Visiting guests were: Rev. W. Paul Nichoids, Detroit; H. G. Bird, Traverse City; John H. Brayfogle, Saginaw; Fred Willis, Charlevoix.

CHARLEVOIX WINS FINAL BALL GAME

Defeated Dearborn Merchants by 5 to 4 Count Thursday

Charlevoix's Independent baseball team closed its season last Thursday evening with a 5 to 4 victory over the Dearborn Merchants.

Saxton and Cihak, Charlevoix hurlers, gave only four hits, while the locals collected eight off Ruchala, Dearborn moundsman. Charlevoix scored in the first, third, sixth and seventh innings. Cihak struck out the first three batters to face him in the fourth inning and Saxton fanned three of four men coming to the plate in the seventh.

Charlevoix has an outstanding record for the season just closed, winning 12 out of 17 games.

CLASS 3-A MEN TOLD TO INVESTIGATE OPPORTUNITIES IN THE NAVY

Men in Class 3-A who face early reclassification and induction should investigate opportunities offered now by the United States Navy, according to Lieut. Bryon E. Flechtner, officer in charge of Navy recruiting for this area.

Lieutenant Flechtner's announcement followed a statement last week by Maj. Gen. Louis B. Hershey, national selective service director, that men with dependent wives only should begin making arrangements now to enter military service since the supply of single 1-A men is virtually exhausted.

Qualified men can obtain petty officer ratings paying as high as $126 per month as soon as they enlist plus a minimum $34.50 monthly allotment for a dependent wife

In the Navy "Seabees," or construction battalions, all men receive 20 per cent additional pay because of foreign service. Thus, a man with one dependent who qualifies as a chief petty officer in the "Seabees" receives $185.70 per month, or more if he has over one dependent

Men may enlist in the navy even though they have been placed in class 1-A and received notice to report for induction. Lieutenant Flechtner advised such men to visit a Navy recruiting station immediately upon receipt of induction notice to assure completion of their enlistment.

CSO Sells Stamp Corsages

Corsages of war stamps were sold at the Detroit Lions varsity-freshmen football game Sunday, by the Charlevoix Service Organization. Wanda Adams, Helen Jean Hammond and Virginia Young sold a total of $35 worth of the novel bouquets.

NOTICE

To Our Patrons:

About mid-September this store will be operated on a complete Self-Serve and Cash-and-Carry basis.

Emergency conditions brought about by the war have necessitated our taking this action. Federal regulations requiring a price ceiling on the majority of commodities have narrowed the margin of profit upon which business must operate. Consequently we must reduce our operating expenses. The rationing of automobiles and tires makes delivery service impossible.

This store will be remodeled and equipped with the most efficient and modern self-serve facilities. Through this reduction in operating costs, we shall be able to give our patrons lower prices than would be possible otherwise.

We invite the public to come to our opening. Watch for the date.

A fitting end to one of the finest trout fishing seasons in years is the extra full week of fishing on the schedule because Labor Day this season falls on the latest possible date. Abundant rainfall and groundwater supplies have kept streams in good condition. Though fishing pressure has been light, license sales indicate as many anglers as ever—though on fewer trips—are enjoying the refreshing thrills and satisfactions like those provided by this four-pound brown trout, taken recently on the famous Au Sable river near Grayling

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON
From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

In my travels around the district, I find that one of the principal questions in everyone's mind is the matter of rubber tires. The next question people ask me is how we permitted ourselves to get caught in a predicament such as this, with an inadequate reserve supply of crude rubber or without adequate provisions having been made for producing synthetic rubber. One of the most important of these reasons which people seem to realize and about which they have asked me many times, is the deal which the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey made with the I. G. Farben Industrie of Germany, to control the synthetic rubber business in the United States and throughout the world. So many people have asked me so many different questions about this contract, that I shall endeavor to explain it briefly, and in making the explanation do so based on the report issued by the Truman Committee of the Senate and which is an official government document.

The rubber shortage in the first World war started experiments in laboratories all over the world. The first synthetic methyl rubber developed by the Germans back in 1920 was unsatisfactory. They began to make headway, however, in the development of buna rubber in the early 30's.

In November, 1929, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Farben Industrie made a contract designed to assure them a joint monopoly all over the world on certain end products which could be developed from oils and chemicals. It is of interest to note that the oil patent rights were to be controlled entirely by the Standard Company all over the world, except in Germany, while the patent rights for products to be developed from chemicals were to be controlled by the Germans in every country of the world, including the United States. This unequal agreement was made despite the fact that Standard owned 80 percent of the stock in the organization and the Germans 20 percent. As a few border-line products were developed, which could be made either from oils or chemicals—which included synthetic rubber, to avoid conflict with the earlier contract the two companies formed the third patent-holding Company, known as Jasco, in which the stock of this company was divided equally.

The effect of this monopolistic patent arrangement was to stifle investigation, invention and development of synthetic rubber all over the world, except in Germany. Back in 1932 and 1934, four of our large rubber companies, and at least one chemical company, endeavored to secure patent licenses to produce synthetic rubber in this country, but the terms offered were so onerous that the companies gave up the effort entirely. It is true, however, that despite these patents, some of our independent companies did proceed with investigations of their own and did develop methods of making synthetic rubber, which they contended were not in conflict with the Standard-German patents. Standard, of course, claimed otherwise, and filed suit for patent infringement, withdrawing these suits only after the government stepped into the picture due to the investigations by the Department of Justice in 1940. This investigation disclosed very definitely that this agreement between the two companies was made very definitely with the thought in mind of gaining a monopolistic control over all synthetic rubber in the United States, and was very definitely to the detriment of the war preparation effort in this country.

From all appearances the way the contractural arrangement was worked out, it would appear that the Germans played Standard for a sucker, because during the life of the agreement, and until it was terminated by order of the United States government, all Standard ever received from Germany were copies of their patents—the formula.

The Germans never told them how to make synthetic rubber. It must be said, however, that both Standard and the German company did try to build a synthetic plant in the United States back in 1938, but the German government stepped into the picture and refused to give its permission, and then later in 1939, after the first plant had been built in Germany, refused "for reasons of military expediency" to permit the Farben Company to tell Standard how to actually make buna rubber. In view of the fact that all of those patents had to be filed in the United States patent office anyway, it is to be seen that Standard as well as the United States gained absolutely nothing as far as synthetic rubber is concerned out of this contract.

After we got into the war, and it became apparent that there was to be no more natural rubber, the rubber companies again endeavored to make arrangements with Standard, but here again Standard offered them an agreement which was so onerous that the rubber companies would not accept it.

"The licenses, * * * fixed a high royalty rate so as to make operation impracticable except for relatively high-cost specialty rubbers. It required the rubber companies to license back their improvements to Standard. It required the rubber companies to produce only for consumption in their own products and prohibited them from selling any of their rubber to others. It gave Standard an option to buy one-fourth of the licensees' capacity for distribution to the trade generally."

"The government's Rubber Reserve Company eventually worked out an agreement with the rubber producing companies, whereby all the companies agreed to pay royalties to Standard, after the Rubber Reserve Company had indicated that if they did not do so, it would itself enter into an agreement with Standard."

It is also interesting to note that "although butyl rubber seemed to be promising, specially for large-scale production Standard at first failed, and later refused, to issue licenses for the manufacture of butyl rubber, and until the hearings before the committee (May 1942) did not provide samples to the rubber industry as a whole on which the industry might experiment so as to familiarize itself with the new techniques necessary to turn butyl into manufactured goods. This deprived Standard (and we might say the nation) of the benefit of tests run by experienced rubber handlers. Although Standard itself had no facilities for trying out its product such as the major rubber companies offered."

The report makes this very damaging statement:

"* * * the conclusion remains that whether or not Standard so wished, it put itself in the position of furnishing information to the German company, through which it would be available to the German government, while withholding the same information from the United States. This was done after it had become apparent that this country might be in desperate straits for lack of natural rubber, and that the synthetic rubber program would be retarded by the withholding of patents or the maintenance of high royalty rates."

"Another example of how Standard sometimes kept to the letter in its relationship with this government but not to the spirit can be found in the instance of the contract between the Brazilian subsidiary and Condor, a German airline operating out of Brazil. Standard was asked in 1940 to refrain from making shipments of aviation gasoline to either the Italian or the German airline in South America, since notorious German agents, propaganda material, and strategic war materials for Germany were carried on these lines from Europe to South America and back, thus breaking the British blockade. Standard itself complied, but continued through its Brazilian subsidiary and under the supervision of the American ambassador at Rio to make limited deliveries of the gasoline under a contract with Condor. In October, 1941, Standard notified the State Department that unless the United States government was willing to protect and indemnify its subsidiary against a possible lawsuit and fine, the contract would have to be fulfilled. The State Department was forced to threaten to blacklist Standard's Brazilian subsidiary in order to stop the deliveries. Deliveries of gasoline by Standard's Brazilian subsidiary were, however, continued under direction of the American ambassador to Brazil until a substitute service could be established. An overwhelming majority of the companies asked by the State department to refrain from doing business with German companies in South America complied immediately and had taken whatever losses accrued from it."

"The world-wide business of Standard and the impact of this business upon the government's interest, has led Standard into questionable positions on specific issues. The executive committee's minutes of February 17, 1941, indicate that although Secretary of State Hull had advised Standard that he hoped shipments would not be made from any place in the Western Hemisphere to the Italian airline, Ali Littoria, Standard decided to supply this airline for six months from stocks of the Standard Oil Company of Brazil. The question was raised before the executive committee of Standard's board of directors: 'whether the State Department should be informed of all of the current developments in this situation.' The committee was not inclined to feel this was necessary."

In conclusion, by way of explanation, let me make this fact perfectly clear. This whole arrangement was made between the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the I. G. Farben Industrie of Germany. The Standard Oil Company of Indiana, which serves our district, had nothing whatsoever to do with this patent matter and no one should unfairly criticize or condemn the Standard Oil Company of Indiana nor any of its dealers in our territory for what was done by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, which is solely an Eastern concern.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

American farmers are not the only ones that are experiencing a shortage in labor in producing food for war and home uses. Canada, in the war more than two years ahead of this country, has had similar trouble in securing sufficient farm labor. This was due to the fact that manpower was drawn from the farms without limitation. Now however, farming is recognized as an essential industry and a new selective service law recognizes the farmers right to claim certain exemptions in order to keep up full production.

It is possible that a similar law will have to be enacted in the United States in order that increasing amounts of food may be produced for our ever enlarging army and its requirements. We may be forced to organize labor brigades as Canada did in the spring of 1940. Some of these organizations are, first, "The Farm Cadet Brigade", young men 15 years old and up to draft age, including those rejected by the draft; Second, "The Farmerette Brigade", consisting of teachers and young women from 16 years up for fruit, vegetable and truck farming, and third, "Womens Land Brigade", for duty in year round work on general, livestock, poultry and dairy farms.

Don't forget to get your fertilizer orders into the AAA office as soon as possible. If you have not made up your total soil-building allowance for 1942. A new ruling allows the larger allowances, over forty dollars, to take their entire payment in fertilizer instead of only 70 per cent.

New Towns Rise In Rural Britain

Model Centers Will House Hundreds of Thousands Of War Workers.

LONDON.—Details of the steps taken in Great Britain to meet the housing emergency brought about by Nazi air raids and nation-wide armament production show that the construction is on a vast scale.

Six permanent model towns, built to plans designed by architects, have already risen on what were green fields and another 94 are nearing completion.

The ministry of supply, faced with the necessity of finding living accommodation for hundreds of thousands of war-factory workers in rural areas where there were only small villages with tiny cottages, made plans to create these new centers.

Unlike the sordid shanty towns of the last war, these, says a description of them in the London Sunday Express, will stand and expand after this war, so that men and women in industry can continue to live in beautiful rural surroundings while within walking distance of their work.

House 100 Workers.

Each town has blocks of homes built to house 100 workers. The blocks are laid out in one-storied U formation around a central green, where communal buildings stand as the center of social life. There are hospitals, chapels, hair-dressing shops, cafes and theaters.

Some of the townships are for single men and women, who have traveled from all corners of the kingdom to work in the factories tucked away from the sinister attacks of the enemy. Others have large blocks of two-storied houses built for married couples.

To make home life easier, the towns are being run on hostel lines. This is purely a war-time measure, and when peace comes and workers settle down to normal ways of life the hostel arrangements may be ended if the workers wish.

Each block has six bathrooms—the baths are shining pale green porcelain. There is a laundry with fitted sinks, ironing boards and electric irons. Drying rooms for airing clothes and a special room for drying wet clothes are included.

Two large dining rooms seating 500 at a time serve three meals a day.

Has Social Center.

In the big social center around which the houses are built are the rest rooms, reading and writing room, and the theater and dance hall. There are dances twice a week and a dramatic performance once a week.

The center has a shop, postoffice and telephones, and soon there will be a cafe open all day.

Central heating pipes running through all the buildings keep the homes at an even, warm temperature in winter.

Today the inhabitants of the new townships pay an all-in rate for living there. Girl workers pay 25s a week for full board and lodgings. Furniture and all equipment are supplied. Men pay 30s a week. A special rate is being worked out for married couples.

There are no chimneys, no ash cans, rubbish being burned in incinerators.

Aside from these rural model towns, one-story flat-roof homes that after the war can be built up to regular size houses of two floors or more are being erected in bomb-ruined sections of cities.

Identity of Cat Poser For Judge to Figure Out

SAN FRANCISCO.—Justice of the Peace Herbert D. Wise may have to outdo Solomon when he establishes the identity of a baby with a sword.

Mrs. J. D. Newton has asked $50 damages from her neighbor, Bert Fletcher, who she alleges is the owner of a black tunneling cat that tunneled out a miniature subway system underneath her front lawn.

Fletcher charges there are five black cats in the neighborhood and that it is a case of mistaken identity.

Band Gadget Invented To Snuff Out Cigarettes

CLEVELAND. Antheny J. Millett, 31-year-old inventor, has devised a gadget he believes will prove a boon to absent-minded smokers—a cigarette "snoffer-outer."

The invention consists of a narrow band of fire-resistant material around the paper of the cigarette.

The band is movable.

Millett said that with every cigarette equipped with a snuffer, there would be no reason to lose a lighted one out a car window.

Greeks Starving Under German Control of Food

ANKARA, TURKEY.—Greeks in Athens are collapsing in the streets from hunger and their suffering is being shared by numbers of British and Australian soldiers who are hiding in small towns and mountain villages.

The situation of allied soldiers left behind in the withdrawal from Greece was said to be especially difficult because they are without credentials for obtaining food.

Soldiers' Novelty Bait Tricks Louisiana Fish

CAMP SHELBY, MISS.—Maybe fish in the Whisky Chitto creek in southern Louisiana are naturally easy to please, or maybe they've got into the swing of maneuver "simulation."

Soldiers of the Thirty-eighth division reported catching on maneuvers:

1. Eleven catfish with paper wads on their hooks.

2. A mess of brim lured by cigarette butts.

3. And both species on bare hooks weighted down with fingernail clippers and empty cartridge hulls.

Desolate Utah Section May Yield Magnesium

SALT LAKE CITY.—Utah, the nation's foremost nonferrous metal producing state, also may become a major source of magnesium.

Extensive tests are being made in Grand county—a desolate section of southern Utah.

The first hints of the presence of magnesium came in 1932, when test oil wells were drilled. The residue revealed a 50 per cent magnesium content.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

It's not a pleasant picture to contemplate, but War calls for "blood and sweat and tears." And the Army Medical Corps, with its efficient nurses and its volunteer Red Cross "Angels of Mercy," needs thousands of surgical beds for field and base hospitals on every front.

These beds cost approximately $22 each. They are the latest thing in modern hospital beds, with elevating springs. In some instances surgical cots are used in temporary field hospitals and there is a folding bed which may be used in ambulances. Your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps can buy many of these beds for the Army. You'll sleep better if you know our boys have every hospital comfort. Buy War Bonds every pay day. Invest ten percent of your income.

U. S. Treasury Department

Essential to the war effort is the nation's health. The men in the service....the men in factory and farm....the very homes of America....must be protected against the by-products of war—pestilence and disease. Deadliest of all the enemies of man, one that strikes without warning, is the dread tuberculosis. And it's already on the march.

Seventeen pounds of kitchen fats saved will provide a pound and a half of glycerine, enough to fire 85 anti-tank shells.

RIPE TOMATOES SIMPLE TO CAN

One of the simplest of preserving jobs is the art of canning tomntoes or of making tomato juice, according to members of the home economics extension service at Michigan State College.

They recommend these standard practices for either of the jobs:

For canning tomatoes, use firm, ripe tomatoes with no decayed spots. Skin the fruit. The easiest way is to put them in a tray or wire basket and immerse for about a minute in boiling water, followed by a quick dip in cold water. Drnin, peel and remove the cores.

Tomntoes cut into quarters should be heated to boiling, held until heated through. Pack boiling into sterile contuiners, adding a teaspoon of salt to each quart. Fill to top with boiling juice, cover and process for five minutes.

In making tomato juice, many steps are similar. Work fast when you can tomato juice—this snves vitamins. To insure speed, work with only enough tomntoes to make 1 to 2 gallons of juice at a time.

First, wash and trim the tomatoes. You do not hnve to remove the skins. To preserve the flavor and color, use stainless steel knives if possible. Avoid copper, brass, or iron utensils. Cut the tomatoes into small pieces. Then put them on the stove nnd simmer them until they nre softened. Do not boil them.

Put the hot tomatoes through n fine sieve—in order to remove the skins nnd seeds. Add from 1-2 to 1 teaspoon of salt to each quart of juice. However, omit the salt if the juice is for infants or invalids on saltless diets. Reheat the juice immediately. If you use glass containers, hent the juice just to boiling, pour it into the sterilized jars or bottles, and seal them. No processing is necessary. Invert the jars while they are cooling.

Do not leave any head space when putting tomato juice in either glass jars or tin cans

Elect ADAMS to CONGRESS

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

Plain talk has become America's war language.

The people asked for it. Price Administrator, Leon Henderson, gave it to them. In a recent speech "Victory or Profits," he said:

"Unless we move abead in our fight against inflation, that battle will be lost. . .The farmar is going to be asked to take less for his product. It is my firm conviction that he must take less, from now on, for many of his products. I do not feel that is too much to ask. I do not feel that it is too much to suggest that no single group be exempt from the demands of war. Nor do I feel that I am being unfair to the farmer—or the wage earner—when I say that this war has so far not demanded from these groups what it will—and must—demand if we are going to win this hattle. Again I say, are we out to win this war or to profit from it?"

Plain Talk

Battle in the far corners of the earth are tied by strong, invisible hands to what happens in our kitchens, our corner store, shoo shop, laundry, lumber mill, motion picture theatre, shop nnd farm. If we bought freely everything we wanted, many of our fighting men—offering their lives for you and me—would lack food, shocs, clothing, mattresses, medical supplies There would be fewer guns, tanks, planes and ships. Our enemies would profit from our "normal standards of living."

Unity, Sacrifice, Action

We are learning that total war touches all of us.

This applies both to the individual and to our great pools of munpower. All sound nnd physically fit men face the possibility of being called into Selective Service. Our military demands must be met first. Their places must be filled by women, older men and those whose military usefulness is slight.

Farms need manpower. Our great munitions factories call for more and more men The production of raw mnterials grows more and more pressing. A basic problem is to keep men at work all the time and to keep them at work which most directly contributes to our fighting punch. Idle hands work for Hitler. A two-day layoff from the job for a fishing trip definitely sahotages our war effort.

Work and Sacrifice

To our mobilizatinn of manpower and womanpower, we are about to add mobllizntion of our youth nnd of our children. The National Institute of Education has enlied upon educatnrs from all parts of the country to consider the most effective way to make use of all the students in the country, from elementary grades through college, in war service.

The boy scouts, girl scouts, future farmers, 4-H clubs and other groups already have shown their mettle in various drives but the new progrnm will go further. Schools mny furnish volunteer battalions for harvesting, rationing progrnms, civilian defense and other activities, while school buildings may he used for classes in radio opernting, war work trainlng and pre-military preparation in specinlized subjects.

We're All at War

All these far-flung and diverse efforts ndd up to just one thing—our common will to defeat our enemies—save America.

There was some brightness in WPB Chairman Donnld Nelson's second war production report, recently issued. Munitions output in July was 3 1-2 times as great ns our output in November, 1941. Aircrnft production was up 11 per cent over June, ordnance 26 per cent, navnl construction 22 per cent, and merchant ship tonnage 6 per cent over the previous month.

The war production drive, with its 1250 labor-management committees, serving plants in which nearly 3 million men and women work for victory, has had n great deal to do with speeding production.

4-H TO FEATURE LIVE-STOCK SALE

Beef, pork and lamb on the hoof will tread the nuction block as one of the features of the combination 4-H State Fair and Farmers' Day program scheduled for Labor Day, September 7, on the Michigan State College campus.

In fact the nnimals will have a sports setting for the event. The auction to he cried by Allen Haskins, of Ionia, will he held in the north end of the foothall stadinm, the same nrea in which earlier in the day the beef calves and dairy animals are to be judged. The sale is scheduled for 4:30 p. m.

Approximately 50 heef calves, severnl pens of fat lambs and more than 40 fat barrows will be offered to bidders. The meat animals will be nmong the top entries from boys and girls numbering more than 600 in 4-H club fat stock projects, nearly 800 in pig clubs nnd nearly 1,000 in sheep clubs.

Other events for the fair and Farmers' Dny are shaping up, according to R. W. Tenny, program chairman, and E. L. Anthony, dean of agriculture and general chairman.

Farmers' Day events will be later than usual but traditionally almilar to those held in previous years. A general program at noon is to be followed by departmental offerings showing current research in crops and livestock and other departments.

For the 4-H club events, A. G. Kettunen, state club leader, indicates the program already promises to he greater than any staged in two-score years at the state fair in Detroit. At the state fair, events were stretched over a 10-day period. Nearly all events at the college will he scheduled Monday, September 7. Exceptions are the judging and demonstration contests, to be conducted Tuesday, September 8.

Remember his 108 children in his will. Few people in Ecuador were shocked by the manner in which Senor Ramirez acquired his big family, and many a storekeeper profited by his lavish generosity to his menage. Read this unusual story in The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with next week's Sunday Chicago Herald-American.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Dairy Sires Again will be Available to County Dairymen

Sires will represent all major dairy breeds, of high production and reasonably priced.

Dairymen will be interested in henring that baby bull calves will be made available this fall. During the last three years over thirty of these splendid young nnimals have been purchased by dairymen who appreciate good type, good production, and well-bred animals. This year the price will be a shade higher as would be expected. For instance a young bull enlf from two to four weeks of age, whose mother made from 400 to 450 pounds of butterfat will cost about $25.00. At an age of from two to three months this same nnimal will cost about $50.00.

These animals will be eligible for registry, ure from cows of good type and inspected by members of our dairy extension department or D. H. I. A. testers. All orders for these young calves must be in the hands of the county ngent not later than September 15th. Our orders will be pooled with those from our neighboring counties. We hope to make delivery of all animals during October. Any dnirynan interested should immediately contact the county agent's office. Further details and information will be gladly given.

LANSING LETTER

times an indepent, former lieutenant governor and attorney general with upstate rural, dry backing.

War Eclipse: Because the war is holding the center of the stage a curious apathy towards politics is said to be prevalent among voters. More than one astute political observer is frankly puzzled.

This general eclipse of the war over state affairs is also accompanied by marked unrest of the public over progress of the war

Military experts insist that the war is at a crucial stage, that opening of a "second front" is a matter of weeks, that such an enterprise will cost many thousands of lives, that our industrinl production is not good enough to win the war—and so on.

Emotional Year: Translate the military situatinn into human emotions, and you have an explosive product.

Thousands of families face the praspect of the husband or father being inducted into military service. Dependents will get only existence federal support. Boys who are 18 and 19 also face active duty by 1943.

Gasoline rationing is inevitable; coupons are already in the hands of school officials. Prices are still mounting.

Mix this generously with portions of military reverses and casualties here and there, and what will you get on Sept. 15?

Democracy: We're fighting a war to save our skins. The president called it "a war of survivial." Dressed up in pretty language, it is a titanic battle for preservation of our freedoms.

Democracy, as we easy-goi Americans understand it, offe the right to vote, the right to w ship, the right to speak, and t right to print as we please, wit certain self-imposed limitations.

And yet, predictions are bei made that the Sept. 15 prima vote will be light. "Why?" y ask. "People are too worri about the war," one candidate to us the other day."

And there you have a parado Are we fighting today for n fre dom which we (this word used in general sense) do not cherish? you fail to vote on Sept. 15 an then complain bitterly about de mocracy falling because bad ca didates are chosen, ask yourse this question: "What am I fightin for?"

Facism breeds in civic indiffer ence.

SHOT AT RANDOM

If the difficulty in obtaining coffee in local stores is to be taken as an indication, this commodity will be on the rationing list within a short time.

This year's Labor Day, coming on the 7th of September and probably the latest it can possibly be, has extended the resort season proportionately longer. It will be school bells before we know it now and another pleasant summer season will soon be a memory.

Charlevoix's independent baseball team slapped down the Dearborn Merchants to conclude their season last Thursday night. The boys have a good record for the summer, winning 12 out of 17 games. What with the softball team winning the class B title at the Petoskey district tournament, local talent has given a good account of itself.

Jack Foster, U. S. Navy pilot, is home for a week of deserved rest from his duties. We assume he's been playing hide-and-seek with the Japs up in the fog-shrouded Aleutian Islands, but as far as Jack is concerned, he isn't talking.

It should be timely now to urge every registered voter to exercise his privilege of political choice at the polls of the primary election September 15. With a world war now raging to retain the freedoms which make these United States of ours the greatest nation in the universe, it should be hardly necessary to remind the public one of the surest ways of losing our privilege of self-government, would be failure to exercise this right. While the war is uppermost in the minds of everyone, it should not be allowed to over-shadow matters of equal importance at home. Every eligible person should vote September 15.

SPIKE RUMORS CLOSING OF DEER SEASON

Conservation Department Says No Changes Are Planned

Persistent rumors that Michigan will forego a deer hunting season this year because of war have no basis of fact. P. J. Hoffmaster, conservation department director, in answering queries concerning the possibilities of a closed season, stated that, except for transportation difficulties, Michigan deer hunters will continue their sport "as usual" this fall.

"The economic value of the venison harvested would in itself justify an open hunting season," Hoffmaster said.

"Inasmuch as we have been hearing considerably of late as to the possibilities or even probabilities of fresh meat rationing, I think it is well to consider the millions of pounds of fresh venison that are harvested during each November's deer hunting season. According to hunters' reports, 75,692 deer were taken during the last season. This represents approximately 10,975,000 pounds of fresh meat. That is a rather startling figure, especially in these times when it is necessary that we release as much fresh meat to our armed forces and our allies as we can spare."

To the criticism that hunters use shells that might better be turned over to the army, Hoffmaster said that most Michigan deer hunters already have their shells and that the shells used in deer rifles cannot be used as army ammunition.

Hoffmaster pointed to the recreational value of hunting and to the need for "controlling" the deer herd from a biological point of view.

"We some day may appreciate more than now and need the training and experience obtained by more than 150,000 men armed with rifles who spend a couple of weeks in our north woods every fall," he said.

Air Raids Mingle with Family Life

Blackouts and air raids mingle with intimate family life and human interest episodes, enlivened by comedy moments, in "Mrs. Miniver," dramatic story of heroism of English families under attack on the home front, which teams Greer Garson and Walter Pigeon, and comes September 0-7 to the Palaco Theatre. The picture, adapted from the famous novel by Jan Struthers, centers about a middle class English family in a small village near London. Its village types, its customs, its social structure, figure in a gripping human story in which the rescue at Dunkirk and other graphic war details form backgrounds.

New Type of Role for Ruth Hussey

Ruth Hussey drew a role at M-G-M unlike any in her career when she played a rough-and-ready woman of the Canadian wilds as Daisy, heroine of "Pierre of the Plains," opposite John Carroll. She rides a horse, and totes a gun as the owner of an inn in the Northwest, in the film which comes to the Palace Theatre on September 12.

DISTRIBUTION MILKWEED BAGS IS BEGUN

Prepare Harvesting for Navy Project at Petoskey

"Distribution of bags, supplied by the Milkweed Floss Corporation of America, started Friday, August 28th, and continues through the harvesting period which from all indications will be about September 8th, but not in any case until seeds in the pods turn brown," announced Dr. Boris Berkman, head of the corporation, now in Petoskey making final arrangements for the harvesting program. "Pods should not be harvested after a rain or when wet," Berkman advised.

Bags will be distributed from the Preston Feather & Sons warehouse in Petoskey and full instructions as to harvesting and curing will be available in printed form at that time.

Due to the fact that the corporation would like to have as many farmers and others as possible become acquainted with the program this year, they are encouraging those who can harvest and store 100 to 200 bags in addition to those who can take the larger quantities.

"Applications to harvest can still be accepted," stated C. T. Luthers, of the Petoskey chamber of commerce, "and we suggest you contact your Triple A office, county agricultural agent or our office at the earliest opportunity. The price to be paid to harvesters has been definitely set at $50 per ton dry weight, delivered in Petoskey.

When the teams lined up for the kick off after that score, those who didn't watch close failed to see Hippety Hopp's 75 yard dash. Speth kicked to Seltzer who, instead of dashing up the field, started for the center of the 25 yard line. There he stooped and all the varsity team gathered around. Just as the freshmen came smashing into the huddle, Hopp wheeled and sprinted for the goal line with the ball under his arm and the varsity was back in the lead. Lio kicked his second point after touchdown, running his streak to 14 of the last 15 tries.

Little Ned Mathews took over the show in the third period and although he could only show three points up there on the score board, gave the frosh some very anxious moments.

He started all the trouble by intercepting a pass and then for the first time tossed one to Bill Fisk that was good for 43 yards. It might have been a touchdown if Fisk hadn't stepped out of bounds. Two more passes passed just off the fingertips of receivers and that threat ended.

After the frosh had tried three unsuccessful passes, the varsity took over and two plays later scored. Mathews tossed to Calihan for 25 yards, Calihan being tackled from behind on the four. With just seconds to play Mathews called for Augie Lio to try a field goal and he booted the ball straight between the uprights, making the score 17 to 7.

A bad kick gave the ball to the varsity on their 45 at the opening of the second half and they drove for their final touchdown. Mathews picked up 13 in two plays and then Jack Smith added a first down on the frosh 20. Three plays lost three and then Mathews passed to Calihan for a touchdown.

Just before the final period ended the freshmen scored again when Colella scampered his 60 yards.

After the game the coaches expressed satisfaction that the team has some nifty breakaway backs. Colella demonstrated that he could run in the open field, as did Hopp. Mathews, although he hasn't been used as a passer, showed unusual talents along those lines.

In the line, rookies Speth and Gooman at the tackles and Mike Balitsaris, end, who blocked an attempted field goal, looked especially good. Sloko Gill who doubled as relief center for both teams, played a brilliant game of defense.

The team will leave here Thursday for Detroit from where they will leave for the opener with the Philadelphia Eagles Friday. After playing the Army game in Detroit, the club will return to Charlevoix for the final two weeks of training before meeting the Cardinals in the first league game.

Northern Michigan high school coaches and players added to their football knowledge by witnessing the game. Guests of the Lions and city of Charlevoix were teams from Traverse City, Petoskey, East Jordan, Boyne City and Harbor Springs. Three bands furnished music during the game with Charlevoix, Petoskey and Boyne City organizations present.

RED CROSS TO MAKE SURGICAL DRESSINGS

Workroom Opened on the Second Floor of City Hall

Materials for making Red Cross surgical dressings has arrived and work will begin next Wednesday in the Red Cross room, former justice court room on the second floor of the city hall. Mrs. F. F. McMillan has charge of the surgical dressings work.

Many volunteers will be needed to complete the quota of dressings. Those who wish to work are asked to report at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the Red Cross room, bringing a clean cotton dress or smock which is to be put on at the workroom. Workers are to wear hair nets and no nail polish. Even a tiny speck of polish on a dressing may cause irritation and infection in a wound.

FOOTBALL SEASON OPENS SEPT. 26TH

INITIAL PRACTICE SESSION HELD WEDNESDAY

Eight Veterans Among Group of Thirty Candidates Reporting to Coach Ray Kipke

Football practice in preparation for the 1942 season began Wednesday afternoon at south side athletic field.

Nearly thirty men reported to Coach Ray Kipke for drills which were started a week prior to school opening in order to provide three weeks of practice before the initial game September 26. Others now working and unable to be out Wednesday are expected to be in uniform after school opens.

Wednesday's turn-out was the largest in recent years. While Don Carey, regular quarterback last fall, was the only veteran backfield man to report, seven linesmen from the 1941 squad were listed among those issued uniforms. They were Bill Rowe, center; Bud Webster and John Bissell, tackles; Joe Bellinger and Jim McMillan, guards; John Swanson and Lester Galingher, ends. Gerold Chambers, who played in several games last fall, is out for a regular berth this season. A large number of promising new-comers were among those reporting.

Graduation last spring took the usual toll of players. Jim Martin, Carl Rowe and Stan Shapton, backfield men, Jack Stewart and Jim Foster, linesmen, completed their high school terms, and Jancha, regular last fall, has recently joined the U. S. Navy.

Charlevoix's opening contest is scheduled Saturday, September 26th, with Mancelona.

GOVERNOR PROCLAIMS CONSERVATION WEEK

Period of October 4 to 10 Set Aside for Observance

Rating conservation of natural resources as "good sense in peacetime and gravu necessity during war," Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner has proclaimed October 4 to 10 "Michigan Conservation Week" and urges general participation in the events calling attention to "basic conservation practices that are paying dividends today."

Schools and service clubs thruout the state are planning special programs for the week. The 135 sportsman's organizations affiliated in Michigan United Conservation Clubs, 100 member clubs of the Michigan Federated Garden Clubs and other public service organizations are cooperating in the sale of sheets of full color Michigan scenic and wildlife stamps, for use on mail to advertise the state.

Revenues from the stamps finance both local and statewide conservation projects. The first Michigan Conservation Week, arranged by the MUCC in 1941, was observed with enthusiasm in all counties.

MICHIGAN VOTERS TO POLLS TUESDAY

REPUBLICAN AND DEMOCRATIC TICKETS IN FIELD

Candidates Two Parties Seeking Nomination to National, State And County Offices

The Michigan fall primary election, bringing before voters Republican and Democratic candidates seeking nomination to national, state and county offices, will be held Tuesday, September 15.

While several parties have qualified, only two have candidates in the field for the primary. Voters will be presented two ballots—Republican and Democratic, stapled together at the upper left hand corner. This method eliminates expressing party preference. The voter is to take the stapled ballots apart, mark one, fold each separately, then hand both to the teller, indicating by word which is the "marked" ballot.

The Republican party has three-way contests for two major offices, while only one contest is on the Democratic ballot.

Floyd A. Supp, of Charlevoix, is seeking Republican nomination for representative in the state legislature from the Charlevoix-Leelanau district, opposing Louis E. Anderson of Northport, incumbent.

Norman D. Anco, prosecuting attorney, is opposed for his office by C. Merodith Bice, whom Anee defeated at the primaries two years ago. Only other contest on the county ballot is that of road commissioner, sought by John H. Parker and Lyle B. Wangeman of Boyne City, and Peter J. Winnick of Charlevoix.

Following is the complete list of candidates in all ballots, the name preceded by (*) being the present office holder:

Republican—National

U. S. Senator—Elton R. Eaton, Homer Ferguson, Gerald L. K. Smith.

COUNTY PICNIC A FINE AFFAIR

ATTENDANCE AND EXHIBITS SET HIGH RECORD

Outstanding Entertainment Program; First Place Contest Winners Are Announced

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

The 20th annual Charlevoix county picnic was held Labor Day with the largest attendance and the greatest number of exhibits ever displayed at Whiting Park.

The entire east end of the grounds was occupied by various 4-H club exhibits, featured by a hundred individual exhibits of Victory garden products by as many club members. The canning and food preparation exhibits were artistically arranged and made a most attractive display. Approximately 30 dairy animals were exhibited in the dairy club competition.

For the first time two departments were developed for adults. The vegetable department attracted 44 exhibits. Practically everything grown in the garden was displayed. The quality of the exhibits has never been excelled. Also worthy of recognition was the flower show that attracted the attendance of many lovers of flowers. They were beautifully arranged and added color to the entire picnic.

The afternoon program started shortly after 1 o'clock with running races for the fun-loving youngsters. Following this a "Victory Garden" program was held with Edwin K. Rueling, of East Jordan, presenting awards to 16 outstanding gardners in the county.

FISH REARING PROGRAM COMPLETED

NEARLY ONE MILLION LAKE TROUT ARE RELEASED

Fishermen, Fish and Wildlife Service and Conservation Dept. Cooperate in Project

Completion of planting operations by Patrol No. 1 of the department of conservation has brought to a successful conclusion another project of raising lake trout to advanced fingerling stage at the Charlevoix federal hatchery.

The eggs, taken by commercial fishermen during the 1941 spawning season last fall, were hatched at Oden state hatchery and early this spring were transferred to the Charlevoix hatchery in the advanced fry stage. Since the transfer a system of feeding was carried out until the fish reached a size of between 2 1-2 and 4 inches.

It is estimated 860,000 fish were planted. Running 3.5 pounds in weight per thousand, this year's fish were somewhat smaller than last year and the plant compares to 990,000 made a year ago. The smaller size, it is believed, resulted from a change in the type of food used during the rearing period.

Plantings at Gull Island, Whiskey and Big reefs, Beaver Island head, Fisherman's Island, North Point, Dehlin Shoals, Big Rock Point, Grand Traverse Bay, Manitou Island, Good Hart, Cathead Point and Four Mile Point, were as nearly as possible on the grounds where the spawn was originally taken. A planting of 50,000 was made in Lake Charlevoix.

The whole program has been made possible by the wholehearted cooperation of the fishermen in taking the spawn, officials of the Fish and Wildlife Service, the state hatchery at Oden and in the final planting by the Department of Conservation patrol boat.

Lige Geer, hatchery superintendent, was highly complimented by Federal Fish and Wild Life Service officials on the success of the program and also on the fine condition of the hatchery property here.

DUCK HUNTERS NEED CONSULT TIME TABLE

Schedules Will Be Mailed by Conservation Department

Waterfowl hunters will have more than twice as many occasions to consult a time-table on the lakes and marshes this fall, since sunset as well as sunrise shooting in the 10-day longer season will be governed by the conservation department's official schedule when weather conditions are such that the sun's rising and setting is not clearly evident. The schedules are now available by mail.

For the eastern edge of Michigan the sunrise hour changes from 7:23 a. m. September 26 to 8:48 a.m. December 4, while the sunset time shifts from 7:24 p. m. on opening day to 5:56 p. m. on the last date.

In the extreme western part of the state the "shooting day" runs from 7:51 a. m. to 7:52 p. m. on opening day, but shrinks until it is 9:26 a. m. to 6:13 p. m. on December 4—nearly three hours and a quarter less.

All times quoted are Eastern War Time.

Throw your scrap into the fight.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

Well, the 1942 trout fishing season is now a pleasant memory. "Cy" Marshall reported 10 the closing day. Dent Nowville went to sleep in his boat over on Hoffman lake, lost his minnow pail and, for lack of bait, had to come home empty-handed. Guy Pearl took several nice browns on the Bear river near Clarion. Talked with numerous other fellows who closed the season without results. As for myself, I let the closing week end get by without wetting a line. Must either be getting slightly balmy or else sensible, because I put in the last two days working in order to fool the wolf next winter. That's the way life goes, though, and, being pretty much of an optimist, am already figuring on making up for lost time next year.

Trout fishing wasn't the greatest attraction over the week end, either. As proof, there's that 5½-pound smallmouth bass that Jasper Lupo, pal of Andy Grillo, caught in Round lake Monday. It sure was a whopper! And then "Cap" Oscar Smith showed the boys there's bass to be caught in Lake Michigan if you know the right spot. He had on display the limit of smallmouth taken off South Point. Bet that'll start something, too.

Labor Day may unofficially mark the close of the summer resort season, but there are still many of our familiar summer residents still with us.

And the holiday week end—final one for the summer season—drew a capacity crowd of vacationists into northern Michigan resort areas. There were few tourists across the straits in comparison with other years, I understand, but lower peninsula communities generally report an overflow. The hotels had fine weekend patronage, rooming places and tourist cabin camps were filled to capacity, restaurants did a bang-up business and trolling camps throughout the region couldn't come anywhere near providing for demands.

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Apathy of Republican voters, abbeted by unusual circumstances, may result in the nomination next Tuesday of a political bogey-man, Gerald L. K. Smith, for United States senate.

It may also assure the re-election of Senator Prentiss M. Brown, Democrat who enjoys considerable popularity, by the biggest vote ever polled by a candidate of the party.

This is not isolated opinion.

It is the belief of competent Detroit newspapermen with whom this writer talked recently. And it has been the theme of editorials in Detroit and upstate newspapers. Let's see how the logic goes.

The circumstances are these:

1. Opposition to Smith is divided between two candidates—Elton R. Eaton of Plymouth and Judge Homer Ferguson of Detroit.

2. War is causing an eclipse of the primary. Many men are in military service. A light vote is indicated.

3. Since the Democratic nominee is uncontested, Democrats may vote in the Republican primary.

4. This is an "emotional" year. Pent-up sentiments may dominate.

The predicament of Michigan Republicans, caused by the entry of the former Huey Long, lieutenant of Louisiana into Michigan politics, is bringing much pleasure to Democrats.

Since the Frank Murphy administration when the legislature amended the state's primary law, voters may cross party lines to support candidates.

Senator Brown is unopposed. The Detroit News makes this deduction: "Smith will get just as many Democratic votes as that party's organization can swing into the Republican primary. His nomination is seen as guaranteeing Senator Brown the biggest election majority a Democrat ever has polled here, not excepting President Roosevelt."

Funny business, politics. That's

The GHOST PLANE by ARTHUR STRINGER

THE STORY SO FAR: Because Norland Airways needs the money Alan Slade agrees to fly a "scientist" named Frayne and his partner, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds Slade's partner, Cruser, buys a Lockheed plane, which is stolen while Slade is away. When he returns he starts out to recover the plane. He is being aided by an Eskimo named Umanak and by two old prospectors, Zeke and Minty. Acting on a hunch Slade goes to Frayne's camp, where he discovers that the missing plane is being used by Frayne to take something out of the country. Slim Tumstead, an outcast pilot, is flying for him. When Slade attempts to examine the plane's cargo he is knocked unconscious by Karnell. He is "rescued" by Tumstead but later abandoned by him on a deserted island. Zeke and Minty find Slade's plane near Frayne's camp and, after a gun battle with Frayne's crowd, return to guard it. Now Slade is making preparations for his escape to the mainland.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XV

It was not long before he had firewood awaiting his lighter. And by the time he had gathered wood and dry moss and feathered his cave floor with spruce branches his joints felt rusty and his movements slowed down. He ate an inch of his chocolate, added wood to the fire, and crawled into his cave, where he nested down in his bed of spruce needles and moss. There quick wave after wave of utter weariness wiped memory from his mind.

The fire was out and the sun was up when he wakened. He emerged from his another of moss and sat up, refreshed by his sleep.

Having breakfasted with studious frugality, he realized that he must widen his margin of safety in the matter of food supplies for the future. His one possibility there, he felt, would be fish from the lake.

But his first tries were fruitless. Then it came home to him that in his haste he had resorted to water too shallow for his purposes. So he wound up his line and rounded the island until he came to a more promising pool.

In five minutes he had hooked a fish heavy enough to threaten his pole. He stood a little drunk when it finally lay on the rock ledge beside him.

For that gasping white body meant more than a meal to him, It meant life; it meant hope; it meant final deliverance from a prison of hunger.

For he had decided to effect his escape to the mainland. It was, he felt, his only hope.

While his first need would be a reserve of food, the one thing essential to his escape was a raft. As Tumstead must have figured out, his prisoner would be without strength for a three-mile swim in cold northern water. Even though he survived that swim, to land sodden and exhausted on an inhospitable shore, without fire and ample food, would be to invite disaster. On his island stood no timber of consequence. But, spindling as they were, he could collect and trim enough spruce boles to make a raft capable of carrying his provisions and keeping his lighter and his clothing dry. It would not be substantial enough to sustain his own weight. But he could strip and push it ahead of him as he swam.

That day and the next day and the day that followed were crowded with toil. The early morning hour of the day he gave to catching fish, which he later dressed and smoked and stowed away on his starchigan. He fished again in the evening, at an hour when his strikes proved most frequent. At mid-afternoon, when the sun had warmed the shallows, he dug and washed his bulrush roots. When that was done he gathered firewood. And when that was done he turned to digging spruce roots, which he patiently knotted and braided into lengths of wattap. From them, with equal patience, he wove a muskamoot, which could hang from his shoulders like a musette-bag and hold secure his possessions and a quantity of food.

The next morning Slade made ready for his trek. He had chosen mid-day as the best hour for pushing off, since the surface water by that time would have lost a little of its chill and plenty of daylight would remain, at the end of his journey, to find a suitable camp site and get settled for the night.

The water was colder than he had expected. This prompted him to throw more vigor into his arm strokes. But half a mile from shore he found an ache of fatigue creeping into his muscles. That frightened him a little. He leaned on the raft end and rested.

He looked about, to place his landmark, knowing that he must keep active, that he must keep blood coursing through his chilled limbs, that he must push on to the end. He was within a mile of his goal. He thought of a hot campfire, with flames bursting through spruce logs piled high.

Then all such thoughts abruptly ended. For out of the blue that arched above him he heard a far-off and familiar drone. It was a drone that grew louder as he listened and became shot through with a throb of power and mounted almost to a roar. High in the sky above the serrated ridge-tops he saw a plane.

Slade waved and shouted.

But the wings neither dipped nor banked.

Slade started swimming again, in a cold fury of defeat. Something out unlike indignation gave strength to his strokes as he fought his desperate way forward. He kept on, refusing to recognize the claws of pain that tore at his entrails or the weariness that made his breath come in quick and shuddering gasps. He kept on until his raft end grounded on a sandspit and he stumbled ashore and threw himself full length along a sun-warmed slope.

"I don't like this," said the Flying Padre, after he had his leathercad daughter had dropped down on Iviuk Inlet to learn that Umanak had not returned from his overland trip to Echo Harbor.

"Umanak knows his way about," said Lynn. "What worries me is that we've had no word from Alan."

"Why should that worry you?" asked the Padre.

"Because he should have been back before this," protested the girl in dungarees. "I hate to think of him in country where he's so out of reach of help."

For that gasping white body meant more than a meal to him, It meant life; it meant hope;

—16—

"Isn't he that way most of the time?"

"But this is different," maintained Lynn. "And we can't even get through to him by radio."

"So you've been worrying about Slade?"

"I'm afraid I have, Dad."

Some unexpected note of humility in that response prompted the Padre to glance over his shoulder and meet her gaze.

"When did you find that out?" he asked.

"Find what out?" parried Lynn.

"That your hush hawk's worth worrying over. Or, to put it more plainly, that he's beginning to loom a little bigger in your mind than Barrett Walden."

"I didn't say that." She was able to laugh a little at the solemnity in his eyes. "But you must remember that I've still got you on my mind."

Lynn's father, turning to her, rested a hand on either slender shoulder.

"You're mighty loyal to me, aren't you?" he said.

"I love you, Dad," she said quite simply.

"What we're going to do now is pick up Umanak. And as soon as that's done we're going to see what's keeping Alan in the Anawotto country."

But that declaration failed to remove the line of worry from Lynn's brow as she stood staring across the low-lying horizon to the south.

"He's so careless and reckless," she complained. "He seems to love taking chances. He won't even carry a radio."

The Flying Padre smiled.

"When did women begin losing their liking for courage?" he demanded.

"They always like courage," answered Lynn, "but when you like the man who has it you rather want to know what's happening to him."

"All right," said the Padre, "let's start. And while the sun's still high we'll see what we can do about picking up old Umanak."

Picking up Umanak, however, proved less simple than it promised. A two-hour combing of the coastline showed no sign of him. Then Lynn, acting as observer, caught sight of what looked like smoke signals from an empty fishing village. The Flying Padre, informed of this, promptly circled back and swung low over the forlorn little huddle of huts. In front of those huts Lynn made out a squat figure, gesticulating to them as they droned over it.

By the time they had nosed out a landing space, behind a saddle-back island that broke the surf, Umanak was waiting for them on the beach. He was footsore and emaciated, but the seamed old face wore a smile of triumph.

"Me found um," he announced.

"Found what?" questioned the Padre.

"What devil-bird take to deep-water cave."

But Lynn at this point intervened. She came running from the plane with her coffee thermos and a generous portion of their emergency rations.

"He's weak from hunger," she contended. "He must take some of this before he talks."

Umanak squatted on the shingle slope and ate like a hungry wolf. Then, grunting with satisfaction, he reached into the pouch of his worn and patched kooletah and produced a fragment of velvet-black mineral with a pitch-like luster.

"That um," he announced.

The Flying Padre took the fragment and turned it over in his hands. He noted its heaviness and compactness, its suggestion of octahedroo cleavage with faint tinges of brown and green.

"Why, this is pitchblende," he said. "It's what we're getting our radium from these days."

"But why should pitchblende be flown to Echo Harbor?" asked Lynn as she studied the lustrous mineral. "Who'd want it for radium there?"

"That's what I don't understand," said the man of medicine. He turned to question Umanak.

"Just where and how did you find this?"

"Me find um in cave," Umanak repeated. "In cave where water make deep harbor behind island. Heap big black stones piled there. Black stones like that," he insisted, pointing to the pitchblende.

"How big heap?" questioned the other.

"More big than two three black whale. Big heap hide there next to sea. Maybe ship come and take black stones away."

"But why?" demanded the puzzled Padre.

Umanak had no answer for that. He was more interested, at the moment, in reaching for another handful of Lynn's dried beef.

The Flying Padre suddenly turned to him.

"Did you see your ghost plane when you were out there?"

"No see," answered Umanak.

Lynn took her turn at once more inspecting the lustrous fragment of mineral.

"Is there any other use for pitchblende?" she inquired.

"Yes," was the meditative answer. "It's our best source of helium gas now. But what good would helium be to anyone in this wilderness?"

"What good is it in other parts of the world?"

The Flying Padre considered that question.

"The American Navy uses it in their dirigibles. And the Germans, when they could get it, used it in their Zepps. But the States refused to release a stock to Hitler's airmen when we couldn't get a guarantee it wasn't going to be used for war purposes. So our Germon friends fell back on hydrogen, you may remember. Helium, you see, isn't inflammable."

"But they're so far away from our pitchblende," Lynn objected. "They would have no way, now, of getting it to their chemical plants."

"Chemical plants," echoed the man of medicine as his brow creased with thought.

"Wait a minute," was the cry that came from the Padre's lips. "We're overlooking something." He took the black stone from Lynn. "You get more than helium from this stuff. You get uranium, uranium that has a flow of atomic energy five million times greater than what you'd get by burning coal. And supposing Alan's right in his claim that this is going to be harnessed and controlled and his U-235 is going to be a new power, a power a billion times stronger than anything known? And supposing Hitler has ordered a blitzkrieg of research in his home laboratories and they're a jump or two ahead of us in splitting the uranium atom? That would give him an explosive three hundred times stronger than TNT and a battleship

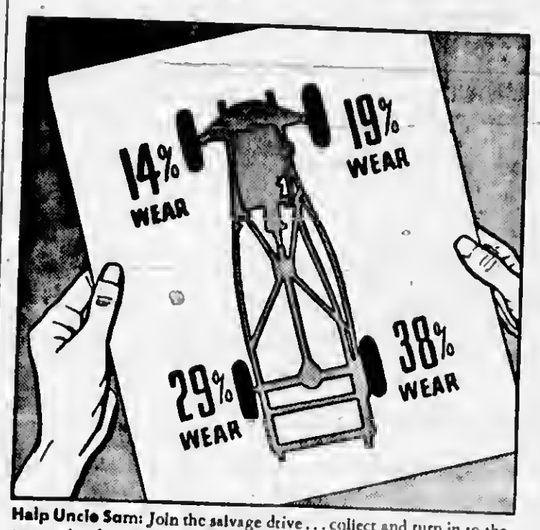
THOUSANDS OF MOTORISTS ADOPT NEW WARTIME METHOD OF TIRE SWITCHING!



Help Uncle Sam: Join the salvage drive... collect and turn in to the proper local organizations all your old scrap metal, rubber, rags, grease, etc. Drive under 40—share your car. Buy United States War Savings Bonds and Stamps. Oil is ammunition—Use it wisely.

Based on the fact that tire wear varies on each wheel

● TIRE SWITCHING is a common sense practice at any time. Now it's vitally important. It's the very basis of longest life for your set of tires. For no two tires will wear at the same rate on your car, and your hope is to keep them all in service. But do you know when to switch tires . . . and to which position?

Have your Standard Oil Dealer supply the right answer with his new wartime method of switching tires. He will "gauge" your tires with a special measuring instrument, Standard Oil Dealers' Tire Mileage Gauge. Then he will place each tire where it will give the most service. Have this repeated every 2500 to 5000 miles (older tires at 2500) to get maximum mileage from the set.

TANKS FOR NOT TELEPHONING

It takes a lot of telephoning to keep war plants humming. And today, that's the big job. War calls must go through. It may take the same amount of Long Distance equipment to make a personal call as it does to rush through an order for tank parts. That's why every telephone call you do not make is a contribution to the war effort. That is especially true of calls to the places listed at the right.

In normal times, we'd get busy and build sufficient additional equipment to keep step with needs. But right now that is not possible. Telephone materials are more urgently needed for tanks, bombers and machines of war.

Here are three simple ways you can help make the most of available equipment and keep vital messages moving:

1. Make only the most essential Long Distance calls, and especially avoid the crowded lines listed at the right.
2. Keep ALL your conversations as brief as you can.
3. When possible, give the number of the distant telephone you are calling.

Remember the war every time you pick up the telephone. Keep your calls as short as possible. Don't ask Information for numbers listed in the directory. You can help save wires for war!

WOODEN TIRES

Another solution for the tire problems turns up in Rochester, N. Y. An ingenious old gentleman named Ernest G. Munck has produced a wooden wheel which, although it rumbles on a brick pavement, is said to "purr like a pneumatic tire on a macadam road," and to take corners smoothly. He produced the tire for use as a "spare" but thinks a full set would work all right, and would probably stand up for 10,000 miles, at a speed of 20 to 25 miles an hour, with a maximum of 40 miles.

Unfortunately, though, this wheel seems pretty hefty for an ordinary car or driver. It weighs 62 pounds. Wheel and tire are one unit, the combination consisting of layers of strong, light wood, cemented together with waterproof glue and forming a plywood equally strong in all directions. Such a tire might come to servo well enough, in the hard days coming, if the weight could be brought down for easier handling.

About 1300 tuberculosis germs, placed end to end, would just about cross the head of a pin. Yet they kill 60,000 persons in the United States each year.

NO SHORTAGE HUNTING FIREARMS SEEN

Only Few Models Have Been "Frozen"; Shells Plentiful

Michigan sportsmen, worried about the availability of hunting arms and ammunition for the 1942 season, are assured by the Michigan Retail Hardware Dealers' Association that only a few models of hunting arms have been "frozen" and that shotgun hunters will have no difficulty securing shells.

Only the following pistols, guns and rifles are now not available to be sold: Harrington and Richardson .22 caliber "Sportsman" revolver; all Colt, Smith and Wesson or High Standard Manufacturing Company pistols; all 12-gauge shotguns; all 16-gauge automatic or pump; Mossberg Model 42-B; Mossberg Repeater 42-MB; Winchester 75 Target; Winchester C-0941-R; Remington Model 513; Remington Model 511; Stevens Model 416-2; Savage Model 33; and Sears Roebuck Ranger-Target Model. Sportsmen are assured that they may secure all other model arms providing that the dealer has them in stock or can secure them.

Most double barrel shotguns are now completely "sold out" although there is said to be still a supply of single barrel guns. Rifles of practically every caliber except those banned still may be obtained at sporting goods counters through the state.

Hunters will have no difficulty obtaining shotgun shells this fall but probably will have trouble obtaining shells for the more popular caliber deer hunting rifles.

MARINE RECRUITING AT TRAVERSE CITY

Want Michigan Unit to Replace Wake Island Defenders

Captain Charles Popp, marine corps recruiting officer for Michigan, announced today that Headquarters, Marine Corps, had authorized the enlistment of a group of Michigan men to replace the world famous defenders of Wake Island.

To be known as Michigan's Wake Island Marines, young men between the ages of 17 to 36 will be drawn from all parts of the state and enlisted immediately. Headquarters, Marine Corps, in granting authority for this mass enlistment, made one stipulation, however. All applicants for this combat unit must make application prior to the 15th of September. Accepted marines will be sworn in for active duty on the stage of the Michigan Theatre, Detroit, on the night of the 17th and transferred immediately by special train from Detroit to San Diego, Calif., where those marines will undergo basic training.

Applications for this combat unit are being accepted at all marine corps recruiting stations throughout the state.

According to the recruiting officer, this is the first time authority has been granted for the enlistment of such a large group of men in the marine corps which may be kept together throughout their military service.

DRAFT BOARD REPORTS TWO MORE DELINQUENTS

Fay C. Davis, clerk of the Charlevoix county draft board, has released for publication the names of Ole Nelson, of Clarion, and Peter Khata, of Charlevoix, as delinquents for failure to report change of address. The two men have been given until September 18 to report and prevent their cases being turned over to the F. B. I.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

As the war progresses it becomes very evident that the United States forces need added man power in every branch of the service. Munitions of war alone, or food alone, cannot win without the men to make effective use of them. It seems very hard for us farmers to understand how we can be asked for extra production and then have our sons drafted away just in the rush of harvest-time. But, whatever happens, we must win the war, or our life will not be worth living anywhere in this world. The farmer has more than done what has been asked of them in added production, despite labor shortages, and more consideration should be shown. At the same time, we should exert our fullest efforts despite our handicaps.

In England on one farm of about 20 acres there were fifty-two bomb craters, some of them big enough to swallow a house, so said Mr. Flood of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, who was in England recently, yet farming is going on with no let-up. Level fields are studded with posts to prevent landing of invasion planes. But farmers are working stubbornly around such obstructions to get production. They are getting it, too, 50 percent more than before. Their labor shortage is more severe than ours. What they are doing, we should be able to do—and will.

Elections for the 1943 AAA committees will be on the 18th and 19th of this month. Meeting places will be announced later.

The next radio broadcast of the Charlevoix AAA county committee will be on September 16th over station WTCM at 1:15 p. m.

EXPECT MILKWEED POD HARVEST THIS WEEK

Pickers May Obtain Bags at Boyne City or Petoskey

From all indications, milkweed pods will be ready to harvest during the coming week, state officials of the Milkweed Floss Corporation, following a check-up of the various sections during the past week.

Pods are still green, and it was found that while seeds in some instances were turning from green to gray and white only a few cases were noted where they had started to turn brown and then only a few seeds in a pod. Seeds must be brown before pods are ready to pick and harvesters are cautioned to check their acreage carefully before picking.

To accommodate harvesters in this area, bags are now available at the county agricultural agent's office in Boyne City, or Preston Feather & Sons warehouse in Petoskey. Instruction sheets as to handling will also be given out when bags are secured.

Pod yield runs about 20 bushels to the acre on good stands and 20 pounds to the bushel. About 10 pounds of pods are placed in each of the special harvesting bags. This fills the sack about three-quarters full and allows for air circulation in drying. Persons who have not filed survey sheets, but still wish to take part in the program, may do so at this time by contacting their Triple A office, county agricultural agent, or bag distribution center at once.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

In the prosecution of our war production effort, we are constantly being reminded that we face shortages of critical materials, shortages of iron and steel, shortages of rubber and various other commodities. Many people are inclined to criticize Congress for past policies which did not look far enough into the future, and have blamed the Congress for failing to adopt preventive measures which would have, perhaps, made these shortages an impossibility.

I have previously discussed in this column the rubber shortage and the reasons therefor. Today I propose to discuss the serious question of the shortage of steel and iron scrap. Much criticism is directed at Congress for permitting huge shipments of scrap to Japan over a period of years prior to Pearl Harbor. Let us see from the record whether the Congress alone is to blame.

Japan began her undeclared war of aggression against China in 1937. There was, of course, no justification for our refusing shipments of scrap to Japan prior to that time. However, the Congress did view with increasing alarm huge shipments of iron and steel scrap to Japan thereafter, especially the huge increase in 1939. These exports are quoted from Department of Commerce figures:

1936 - 1,010,000 tons $11,897,000
1937 - 1,873,000 tons $37,418,000
1938 - 1,366,000 tons $21,685,000
1939 - 2,035,000 tons $32,732,000
1940 - 903,000 tons $17,082,000

Totalling these figures we see that between 1936 and 1940, while Japan was not only fighting her war of aggression in China, but as we now know was building a powerful war machine to wage an aggressive war throughout the entire Western Pacific, seeking to establish a huge Japanese Empire, we were foolish enough to sell her 7,247,000 tons of scrap for a total revenue to our scrap dealers of $120,814,000.

In the 75th Congress, back in 1937 and 1938, ten separate measures were introduced in the House seeking to control, restrict, or forbid the further exports of iron and steel scrap to Japan. These various bills and resolutions were referred to several committees of the House, and in not one single instance were these Administration-controlled committees permitted to take any action. In addition two measures were introduced in the Senate but also here the committees were not permitted to take action.

In the first session of the 76th Congress—between January 3rd and August 5th, 1939, five bills were introduced in the House for the purpose of restricting scrap shipments to Japan. Two bills were introduced in the Senate; one by the late Senator Pittman (D. of Nev.) which authorized the President to forbid the export of specified war materials (specifically including iron and steel scrap) whenever he found that any signatory of the Nine Power Treaty "was endangering the lives of American citizens or depriving them of their lawful rights and privileges." Senator Schwellenbach of Washington also introduced a resolution, somewhat wider in scope than that of Senator Pittman, but according to plan, no action was permitted on either of these bills.

During the period from Japan's invasion of China, public opinion had been rapidly growing in favor of restricting exports of war materials to Japan especially iron and steel scrap. However, when leaders in Congress looked to the White House for the green light to go ahead with restrictive legislation, that green light was not forthcoming. Conditions at home and abroad apparently led the Administration to believe that except for the obrogation of the Commercial Treaty with Japan, a general policy of appeasement would be followed. This Commercial Treaty with Japan, which had been in existence since 1011, was denounced by Secretary Hull on July 26, 1039. It could not expire, however, until January 26, 1940, because six months notice had to be given. The abrogation of this Treaty, however, on January 26, 1940, then left us free to lay embargoes on iron and steel scrap or anything else.

Late in February 1940, limited action was taken on the Pittman and Schwellenbach resolutions. In the meantime, two new measures designed to control exports of iron and steel scrap had been introduced in the third session of the 76th Congress. One by Representative Smith (D. of Conn.) was amended and reported out by the House Military Affairs committee, but upon which the House itself did not act prior to the end of that Congress. Another bill, offered in the Senate, was pigeonholed in the Senate Military Affairs committee.

Finally, however, the chairman of the House Military Affairs committee, Mr. May, introduced a bill which originally had for its general purposes the strengthening of our national defense and contained no mention of export control. As such, it was reported out of committee, passed the House on May 24th, was completely rewritten in the Senate and signed by the President on July 2, 1940. It left the entire restriction of exports of war materials in the hands of the President and so on July 20, 1940, the President through proclamation put No. 1 iron and steel scrap under export control and, incidentally, such other commodities of considerable interest to Japan, such as petroleum products.

The fact remains, however, that iron and steel scrap, as well as petroleum products, were still being shipped to Japan under easily secured export permits, in fact some were on the high seas on the very morning of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

In conclusion, it appears a definite fact that the criticism levelled at the Congress by some apparently misinformed individuals, charging that it is the Congress which is responsible for our present shortage of iron and steel scrap due to permitting shipments to Japan, are entirely unfounded and unjust.

The indisputable fact remains, that we are faced with a huge shortage of iron and steel scrap at this time and it is the patriotic duty of everyone to turn in to his local scrap collector every possible pound of iron and steel scrap which he can find.

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

Meat will appear less frequently on our tables during the coming year, though the amount we'll get —2 1-2 pounds per person per week—is about the average consumption for the past 10 years. This is well above the one pound a week the Englishman gets, the 12 ounces per week allowed Germans or the 5 ounces available for half-starved Belgians.

Our total meat supply is the largest on record, the output for the present marketing year adding up to more than 24 billion pounds. But because of the needs of our fighting forces and our allies, this will be 3 billion pounds short of the estimated needs.

It will take at least four months to set up the machinery for meat rationing. Meantime, Americans are urged to conserve meat.

Share and Share Alike

The war Production Board plan under which bicycles are being made is interesting because it is the first example of 'concentrated' production which will be applied to other articles.

Last year's bicycle production averaged about 150,000 a month. This has been steadily reduced until it now is 10,000 monthly—with the Army, Navy, Maritime commission, War shipping administration and Lend-Lease having first call on these.

Only the Victory model will be manufactured, a light machine that uses a scant amount of critical materials. Only 2 of the 12 bicycle factories will make bicycles, the other 10 already have been converted to war work.

Streamlining for Victory

War needs are like ten-pins. A "strike" from one direction sets in motion a whole series of effects in like, or even unlike, fields. The drain on our oil fuel supply, for instance, has affected the demand for artificial gas to such an extent as to require restriction of gas supplied to new industrial and domestic users.

Yet, despite the increasing demand for gas, drilling of wells in the natural gas fields has been halted to save materials.

Unity, Sacrifice, Victory

The Bureau of Mines will build the first pilot plant for making sponge iron, a substitute for scrap iron in the manufacture of steel. In spite of the millions of pounds of scrap turned in through salvage campaigns, the supply is below the pressing needs of the steel industry.

Government control of the size and cut of women's clothes will save about 100 million yards of cloth a year but housewives can save still more by choosing practical wartime styles—and by taking care of the clothes they have.

There are too few carpenters in the U. S. A. to handle war construction. This has led to an apprentice training program under the joint auspices of the National Building Contractors and the Carpenters International Union—

Farm labor, too, is insufficient and will be increased by importation of Mexican farm workers by special arrangements between the U. S. and Mexico.

Nations Working Together

Four war agency heads joined in urging miners of copper and other metals to stay on their jobs, produce more raw materials. . . Government geologists and engineers have blocked out more than 500,000 tons of valuable bauxite in Georgia. . . Other experts are exploring the "black" sands of the Oregon coast for metals. . . Yankee ingenuity is coming to the front.

Ceiling prices for dry cleaning, shoe repairing, laundering and other common services must be posted. . . More sugar has been allotted for workers in areas where the population has jumped because of war industries.

The third anniversary of the German invasion of Poland found that tortured country still defiant and unconquered, with more than 150,000 of its fighting men in action on United Nations fronts.

APPLES NAMES A VICTORY FOOD

Selection by the federal agriculturol marketing administration of apples as the Victory food special for the period of Sept. 17 to 26 gives Michigan housewives an opportunity to put health and economy into special dishes during that period, according to claims of the home economics extension service at Michigan State College.

Fresh apples are to be featured by retailers. Many households will get their supply from backyard trees, small farm orchards or other nearby sources.

Apple pies, apple dumplings, apple upside down cake, apples in salad and apples eaten "out of the hand" will get recognition during the special period.

Here's a recipe for apple turnovers:

. Any cook who can turn out a good pastry dough can prepare a batch of apple turnovers. Dough rounds about the size of a large saucer are rolled out. On half of the dough the cook arranges layers of thinly sliced apples, sprinkled with a mixture of sugar, cinnamon and a little salt and a few dots of butter. Then the other half of the dough is laid over the top, the edges are pressed together. The crust ought to be pricked to let out steam. Baking takes about 20 minutes in a moderately hot oven of 375 to 400 degrees.

CULL TREES MAKE WOOD FOR WINTER

Michigan's woodlots contain enough cull trees for a two-year fuel supply for farm and small town homes, reports P. A. Herbert, head of the Michigan State College forestry department.

He suggests use of such wood for heating and cooking as a war measure to lower the amount of transportation needed in carrying coal from the mines.

Cutting of this fuel should be of the improvement type of cutting, says Professor Herbert. In fact, fuel wood can be obtained in immense quantity without damaging stands of affecting their productive ability. Decayed, defective or otherwise undesirable trees should go into the fuel pile.

Winter needs can be estimated now and a start made toward laying up a supply. Trees cut now will begin drying out to make better kindling and chunks for the winter heating period.

Wood offers advantages over coal. When properly burned, wood produces little smoke or soot and is relatively free from dust. A cord of hardwood leaves only about 60 pounds of ashes, suitable for use as fertilizer. A ton of hard coal can be counted on to make 200 to 300 pounds of ashes.

THIN OUT HERDS TO CUSHION DROP

Suggest Meat Producers Insure Future.

By PAUL L. MALONEY
(Extension Service, University of Nevada Agriculture Service.)

Culling herds of all undesirable cattle and sheep is excellent insurance against the time when there may be less demand for meat products.

By selling off the undesirable animals now, the livestock producer can realize good prices, and, when more cattle are needed, they should be bred through the introduction of high quality sires.

The U. S. bureau of agricultural economics reports that there is an increase of more than 2,000,000 head of cattle and that the index price of beef is 125 per cent.

The question naturally arises, How can the livestock man protect himself from these extremes in the cycle of low and high prices and large and small numbers of stock? How can he prevent the calamity which has followed the rise in price and subsequent increase in numbers?

By vigorously culling the herds at this time producers will be enabled to put their financial houses in order, to get rid of their mortgages and find themselves with surplus funds.

All thinking stockmen who have gone through extremes in numbers of livestock and price cycles will advocate a straightening out of the cycle by knocking a little off the peaks and hoosting up the bottom of the curve. This will prevent, to a great extent, the confusion which exists after every break in prices when there is a surplus of stock on hand.

While it is natural for stockmen to desire to keep every heifer and every cow which will produce him a calf to sell at the high prices, yet in the operation of any successful business enterprise it often requires the careful analysis of the past experience in order to make the best use of the present and future of the business.

During the first World war livestock prices skyrocketed to a very high figure; these prices encouraged the producer to expand his operations and at the same time encouraged the consumers to substitute many other cheaper, yet less desirable, foods for meat.

Bomb the Japs with junk!

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

It's real puzzlin' when you stop to think about it . . .

I mean the way the human race has worked out a whole set of cut-an'-dried alibis for its misdeeds and shortcomings.

• • •

Some of them's harmless alibis—like the office boy's grandmother who always passes away just before the big baseball game.

Here's some others. "My alarm clock didn't go off." "I left my money in my other suit"—"I was settin' up with a sick friend."

• • •

And then the one about the two beers. Now that one is downright exasperatin'.

Because there's not a shred of truth in it.

Every once in a while I read in the papers about some ornery cuss, who never did know the meanin' of moderation, gettin' himself into trouble——and then protestin' that all he had to drink was "a couple of beers."

He knows it isn't true. He's just sayin' that because he knows that "a couple of beers" sounds moderate and sensible-like—and it is.

Personally, I don't ever remember seein' a couple of glasses of good beer, enjoyed among friends, hurt any normal, sensible person.

If you won't get in trouble without beer, you aren't going to get in trouble with it.

Matter of fact, it's been my observation right along that a friendly glass of beer in pleasant sociability leads to just the opposite of trouble.

It goes along, seems to me, with good companionship, and moderation, and tolerance for the other fellow.

• • •

Yes, sir, from where I sit, it looks like the fellow that goes and gets himself in trouble, and then blames it all on a "couple of beers" isn't really foolin' anybody.

But he is bein' mighty mean and unfair to the people that enjoy the right to a sensible moderate drink like beer—yes, laciudin' "a couple of beers."

Norman Ance was the hero of a sailboat accident on Lake Charlevoix, Monday, when a sudden squall struck his boat in which Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Rockwell and their four children, of the Belvedere Club, were passengers. The mast was wrenched loose and dropped through the bottom, the boat filled with water. Norman rescued Mr. Rockwell and one of his sons, who were swept overboard, then swam a mile to Sequanota for help. A passing craft picked up occupants of the boat.

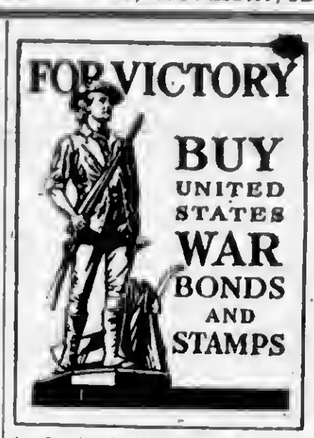
URGES BONDS—NOW!

New Bond Poster.—Now being displayed throughout the country is this impelling poster pointing out the urgency of buying War Bonds now before it is too late. This is part of the general War Bond Campaign in which everyone is asked to invest at least 10 percent of his income in War Bonds. Illustration is by Laurence Beale Smith.



MICHIGAN COUNCIL OF DEFENSE
Michigan War Week

Under Secretary of War to Spend Two Busy Days in State

Lansing,—Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, will spend two event-packed days in Michigan, Sept. 12 and 13, when he will inspect industrial and transportation facilities in the heart of the arsenal of democracy.

He is coming to Michigan at the invitation of Gov. Van Wagoner, and during his two-day stay he will visit both the upper and lower peninsulas. County and local councils are cooperating in planning a full program under direction of the Michigan Council of Defense.

Judge Patterson will arrive in Detroit early Sept. 12 and will immediately inspect the defense highway system serving the Ford bomber plant at Willow Run. He will dedicate the access road system at the tri-level highway grade separation adjacent to the bomber plant and will make a tour of the plant, where he will address a mass meeting of the workers. At luncheon, he will be the guest of the Ford Motor Co.

He will fly to Muskegon in the afternoon to participate in the western Michigan War Production Day events arranged by the Muskegon County Council with the help of other western Michigan councils. The under secretary, with Governor Van Wagoner and other officials, will review a big civic parade and will speak at a meeting of munition manufacturers and a mass meeting of workers.

Sunday morning, Judge Patterson and his party will inspect the Soo locks and ship canal and the ore docks at Escanaba. He will then fly to Marquette en route to Negaunee. At Negaunee, he will participate in the Upper Peninsula Production Day program, sponsored by the Negaunee Council of Defense. The program includes a civic parade in which troops from Fort Brady will participate and a mass meeting of miners at which the Under Secretary will speak.

Make First Distribution

The Michigan Council of Defense has completed distribution to every county in the state of the first consignment of "What Can I Do", the new handbook for citizens, issued by the U. S. office of Civilian Defense. The original consignment of 123,000 copies, plus 55,000 sent directly to Detroit, 0,000 to Grand Rapids and 5,000 to Flint is enough to insure that one family in seven will receive a "first edition".

Eventually approximately 1,000,000 copies will be allocated to Michigan, presenting the Council with the greatest distribution task in its history. The full consignment will make a copy available to approximately 75 per cent of the families of Michigan. Local and county councils of defense have completed organizations for the next step in the distribution of the manual, already in great demand. In some counties, local councils have arranged for booths at county fairs to assist in distribution among rural families.

The value of the pocket-size handbook is indicated by the nation-wide demand for it by millions of Americans, who are eager to volunteer for civilian war service. Special articles in national magazines and metropolitan newspapers will stimulate the demand for it.

LANSING LETTER

why Democrats may vote for a Republican candidate next Tuesday in order to assure the re-election of their own nominee!

"Colorful rabble rouser" is the title given to the Huey Long apostle by the editor of the Free Press, John S. Knight. His recent comment: "Many regular Republicans in Michigan are worried about the large attendance at the rallies being staged by that colorful rabble rouser, Gerald L. K. Smith. His nomination for United States senator in September would just about finish off the Republican party nationally."

The Lansing State Journal takes the view that Smith may be nominated in a three-way fight whereby his opponents will split the opposition and between them will get a majority of the votes cast.

"Fresh in from Louisiana and the Huey Long school, Smith could never sell himself to a majority of Michigan Republicans, but through an unwieldy device of the nomination system, he may make himself a first-class nuisance," this newspaper reports.

The Marquette Mining Journal is of the opinion that Smith's nomination "would be repugnant to a large number of its (Republican) members, and one they would not vote for. They would either not vote at all on the office for senator, or they would vote for Brown."

You can write "ditto" after this sentiment in dozens of other newspaper offices where trained editors try to appraise public opinion and to give the results impartially.

W. A. Markland, Lansing correspondent, sums it up this way: "There probably is no regular Republican who does not believe that the nomination of Smith would be a catastrophe for the party." He says that Smith's nomination and desertion of many Republicans would hinder Kelly and help Van Wagoner.

Hub M. George, another capitol correspondent, sees apathy of voters as the "election's biggest question mark."

How could a comparative stranger to Michigan, a man who has never voted in a Michigan primary election, a man whose home until a short time ago was a swank suite of rooms in one of Detroit's largest and most expensive hotels, rise from obscurity to national prominence almost over night?

First, he has built a radio following which is intensely loyal and knows no party line.

Second, he astutely promises benefits to everyone: $100 a month to servicemen, support to the Townsend Plan, tires by Christmas, friendly sympathy for Father Charles E. Coughlin, Christian Nationalism to the Protestants, equality for the farmers, and so on.

Results of next Tuesday's primary will be awaited with interest. It looks like the Republicans are in a bad fix.

AT THE MOVIES

Veronica Stars Again

Appearing in her third starring role since her start in films, Veronica Lake is seen opposite Robert Preston in Paramount's new thriller drama, "This Gun for Hire," which arrives September 12 at the Palace theatre. Laird Cregar and Alan Ladd are featured. Veronica previously starred in "I Wanted Wings" and "Sullivan's Travels."

Kay Francis Starred

Kay Francis returned to the Warner Bros. lot, scene of her greatest triumphs, after a three-year absence to play the starring role opposite Walter Huston in "Always In My Heart," musical film which shows September 17-18 at the Palace theatre.

Kay, who used to be known as the "best dressed woman in Hollywood," and "the first siren of the screen," makes her return as the mother of a fifteen-year-old lass in "Always In My Heart."

Film Has Top Musical Score

"Stardust On the Sage," Republic's latest Gene Autry starrer coming September 19 to the Palace theatre, is nothing if not melodious! Ten popular melodies are featured.

Louise Currie has the feminine lead in "Stardust On the Sage," with Smiley Burnette, Edith Fellows, Bill Henry, George Ernest and Emmett Vogan in the supporting cast.

You can rid your mind of this second worry by using your bank. A checking account will provide safety for your money, a safe deposit box will supply many safeguards for your valuable personal property.

Both services are very economical. Why don't you use them?

DICTATORSHIP

(An Editorial)

Dictatorship roots in the apathy of citizens over possible loss of their liberty. We Americans are fighting a war to save our freedoms—the FREEDOM TO VOTE, to worship, to speak and to print as WE think, not as some dictator says we should think.

Good government depends upon selection of good party nominees. If you want to practice what you preach, to save democracy at the polls as well as on the seas and battlefields, then cherish your FREEDOM OF FRANCHISE as free Americans and

I've heard a lot of people express the opinion lately that any workman employed on a defense project who would strike should be put into the front line trenches forthwith. I agree with them. Statistics reveal that from January 1 through August 31, 295,734 workers ignored the pledge of labor and industry leaders not to strike. On a basis of time lost, this meant eight out of every 10,000 workers were idle. This represents a tremendous loss in vital war implements—a needless loss and inexcusable in view of the need for peak production. There should be no dilly-dallying at critical times like these. If a man does not want to work, then let him fight.

The drop in gasoline consumption in Michigan during July in a positive indication that motorists are either voluntarily restricting their driving or that car and tire rationing is automatically causing a curtailment. Michigan motorists used 22,000,000 gallons less gasoline than during the same month in 1941 and drove 326,000,000 less miles. Taking 30,000 miles as the average mileage for a tire, this decrease in travel indicates a completo saving of 10,650 new tires during July or 127,800 new tires on an annual basis.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Gas masks which came into use in warfare for the first time when the Germans used poison and mustard gas in World War I, are much improved today over those used then. The Chemical Warfare Branch of the War Department issues these gas masks to every man in the service. We are taking no chances.

The type pictured here is the "can" and "elephant nose" mask and costs about $9.25 each. The headgear is transparent, made of material resembling cellophane and does not cloud with the breath. You can buy two of these gas masks with the purchase of an $18.75 War Bond. We need thousands of them. Don't fail to give at least ten percent of your income every pay day for War Bonds. Buy them at your bank or postoffice, regularly.

TIRE DEALERS FILE INVENTORY REPORT

Only 2,640 of 6,800 in State Have Made Reports

All tire dealers in the Charlevoix county area who have not yet filed their quarterly inventory reports covering the period ending June 30, 1942, were urged to make their returns immediately by Fenton R. Bulow, chairman of War Price and Rationing Board No. 151.

Although extensions for return of the reports ran to August 31, Mr. Bulow said, only 2,640 of Michigan's 6,800 tire dealers had their raports returned to the state OPA office by the deadline.

All tire dealers, automobile supply companies, motor vehicle dealers and finance companies that sell or hold new or used tires and tubes for sale must file the inventory report under provisions of a recent amendment to the revised tire rationing regulation.

The amendment calls for not only an inventory statement of all unmountad tires as of June 30, but also for similar reports quarterly thereafter. These reports are to show the inventory position as of the final day of the quarter and are to be filed in duplicate on or before the 15th day of the succeeding month with the local board to be forwarded to OPA's inventory unit in New York City.

OPA form R-17, on which the raport must be filed, can be obtained at local war price and rationing boards.

ty. All of these gardens had been visited by the various committees in charge. The recipients of this award are to be congratulated on their efforts.

Following this a band concert was given by the Boyne City high school and city band. The boxing matches, six in number, offered the public everything that could be expected in boxing bouts. It might be said that it is very difficult to arrange the bouts as the majority of the local boys are already in the service. The last event of the day was the soft ball game between East Jordan Foundry and a team from Charlevoix.

We realize the public would like to know who the winners were at the county picnic. Due to the fact that space does not permit giving all the awards, we will announce the first place winners in the adult competition and the blue group winners in the 4-H club.

Garden Exhibits

LYLE WANGEMAN WINS FOR ROAD COMMISSIONER

Ferguson for U. S. Senator; Keyes for Lieut.-Governor; Anderson Wins Over Supp

Norman D. Ance, seeking renomination for prosecuting attorney, was defeated by C. Meredith Bice, former prosecutor; Lyle B. Wangeman, of Boyne City, won in a three-way race for acmination as county road commissioner, and Floyd A. Supp, local attorney, was defeated for represenative in the state legislature from the Charlevoix-Leelanau district by the incumbent, Louis E. Anderson, of Northport, in Tuesday's primary election.

Charlevoix county voters followed an apperent state-wide trend of political disinterested as evidenced by an extremely light vote.

With returns unofficial, but complete with exception of Peaine township, Bice had a majority of 121 votes over Norman D. Ance for prosecutor. In the three-way road commissioner race, Wangeman had a majority of 183 votes over a fellow-townsman, John H. Parker. While Floyd A. Supp carried Charlevoix county by a margin of 469 votes over Louis E. Anderson in the race for legislative representative, Anderson's unfficial majority of 511 votes in Leelanau county gave him victory, which Supp has conceded to his opponent.

Down-state reports furnished by United Press through courtesy of the Petoskey Evening News, giving a boiled-down but incomplete resume of Tuesday's vote, show a substantial majority for Judge Homer Ferguson, of Detroit, in the three-way Republican contest for U. S. Senator. Tabulation of 3,285 of the state's 3,751 precincts gave Ferguson 177,871, Gorsld L.

ACTION IN CHARLEVOIX SUIT DELAYED

Litigation Over Argo Milling Co. Indefinitely Postponed

A suit brought in federal court at Grand Rapids to dissolve the Argo Milling Company, local concern, on grounds of mismanagement, was postponed indefinitely last Thursday because Professor Roy S. Swinton, former president and principal stockholder in the company, is a Japanese prisonar in the Philippines.

The action was instituted on the behalf of Gerald W. Richardson, and his wife, of LaCrosse, Wis., minority stockholders who sought the firm's dissolution.

Professor Swinton was on the staff of the University of Manila and was taken prisoner when the Japs took over the city last December.

Fred Elmer Frazier, 81, a former resident of Charlevoix, died last Thursday at his home in St. Petersburg, Fla.

TUESDAY STORM CAUSED DAMAGE

CITY ELECTRIC SERVICE WAS INTERRUPTED

Numerous Transformers Burned Out, Pumping Station Damaged; Storm Was General

Extensive property damage resulted in Charlevoix and throughout northern Michigan from Tuesday afternoon's brief but severe electric, rain and wind storm.

Electric service to portions of the city was interrupted for varying periods by burning out of an estimated 25 transformer fuses. Most of the damage was caused by falling trees and limbs.

Damage to a primary line in the Chicago Club grounds cut off the north side district. Water coming through windows left open by careless watchmen at the water pumping station on Lake Michigan beach caused a short circuit in the instrument panel, which resulted in fire causing some damage. A gasoline auxiliary engine is being used to pump water until damage can be repaired.

Only partial street lighting service was maintained Tuesday night and complete service is not expected to be restored for some time.

Wind blew down a chimney at the federal fish hatchery, numerous basements were flooded as streets filled curb high from the down-pour, trees were up-rooted in many places.

The entire northern Michigan region felt the brunt of the storm. It is reported railroad box cars were derailed by the wind and high property damage occurred north of Petoskey, and in the Traverse City district hail stones broke window panes and fallen trees blocked numerous highways.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE HAS BEGUN

THIRTY - TWO CANDIDATES ARE SEEKING POSITIONS

Charlevoix High School Opens a Six-Game Schedule September 26 at Mancelona

With the opening game of Charlevoix high school's football schedule ten days away, Coach Ray Kipke has started putting his men through strenuous drills aimed to condition them for the initial contest.

As the second week of practice opened Monday afternoon, thirty-two candidates were in uniform. Many of them, however, are new comers to gridiron competition and, with all but one backfield man taken by graduation last spring, the hardest job facing Coach Kipke is that of getting a combination of ball-toters into shape. Don Carey, who called the signals last season, is the only veteran backfield man available. Linesmen who earned letters last year are fairly numerous, though. Bill Rowe, center; Joe Bellinger and Jim McMillan, guards; John Swanson and Lester Gallagher, ends, and Bud Webster, tackle, are out for positions. John Bissell, who held a tackle position last year, is nursing a leg injury, but is expected to be in uniform soon.

Jack Lamphear, a sub last season, is among the numerous new candidates. Others are Bill Poole, Don North, Ed. Novotny, Bernard Zoitler, Bernie Ward, Bill Steffens, Hubert Olach, Gene and Charles Bergmann, Bob Belfy, Billy Graves, Versil Shearer, Don Brown, Eugene Barber, Don Bellinger, Gordon Clement, Marvin Cross, L. G. Fisher, Ken Hardy, Russell Lewis, Howard Mancley, Jack Mol, Vernard Hamlin and Vincent Olach. Many of the newcomers are freshmen.

Charlevoix has a six-game schedule, opening at Mancelona on September 26. Other contests scheduled are: October 3, Boyne City, there; Oct. 10, Onaway, here; Oct. 17, East Jordan, there; Oct. 24, Harbor Springs, here; Oct. 31, Grayling, here.

American Legion Auxiliary

The American Legion Auxiliary meets Monday, September 21, at the Legion hall. All members are requested to be present.

Throw your scrap into the fight.

EDITORIAL

COLLECT THAT SCRAP!

In response to the War Production Board's request to the newspapers of the country for help, the Courier pledges its full co-operation in the WPB's forthcoming drive for scrap metal.

Donald M. Nelson, Gen. Somervell and Admiral Robinson, in their appeals to the representatives of the press assembled in Washington, left not the slightest doubt that the scrap situation today is one of the most pressing—if not THE most vital—problems facing the country in its war effort.

Especially significant was the plea that scrap of all kinds be collected and started on its way to the mills BEFORE SNOW FLIES.

Thousands of tons of scrap lie out in the open. Snow will hide it! If it is covered by snow in the early winter it will stay hidden until the spring thaws! And the mills will need it desperately long before that time!

Gather YOUR scrap NOW in convenient piles for collection, and the newspapers will give you the details.

But gather it NOW, so that when the collecting time is arranged you will be ready to cooperate AT ONCE!

ANY metal is needed—steel, iron, copper, brass, lead, zinc, tin, aluminum and rubber.

Collect it in your basement or garage so it can be taken to the curb the day collections are made.

If you are on a farm, pile the scrap near the highway whence it can be moved readily to the truck which collects it later.

Scour the house! Scour the garage! Scour the basement! Scour the farm! Anything made of steel, iron, copper, rubber, brass, lead, zinc, tin or aluminum is NEEDED FOR THE WAR EFFORT, which means that it is needed FOR YOUR PROTECTION.

BLOCK'S AG MARKET IS NOW SELF-SERVE

Cash-and-Carry Plan Was Inaugurated Wednesday Morning

After closing Monday and Tuesday for remodeling and alterations, Martin Block's AG store opened Wednesday morning on a self-serve, cash-and-carry basis.

Alterations in the store centered mainly around installation of new merchandise "islands" designed for self-serve operation, together with a self-calculating cash register system needed for this plan.

Change to the self-serve, cash-and-carry plan was motivated, according to Mr. Block, by federal price-ceiling regulations and car and tire restrictions forcing elimination of delivery service provided during the 34 years the store has served Charlevoix patrons.

LIONS, WAYNE U. LEAVE SATURDAY

HOPE TO RETURN FOR 1943 TRAINING SEASON

Lions Play Chicago Cardinals Sunday for Third Game; Wayne Opens Schedule Oct. 2

Closing their summer training period in Charlevoix, the Detroit Lions and Wayne University football teams will break camp Saturday.

The Lions have been in Charlevoix for seven weeks, with quarters at the Bartlett Hotel and training grounds at the south side athletic field. They will go from here to Chicago to play the Cardinals on Sunday, September 20, their third game of the season. Defeating the Philadelphia Eagles 42-7 in Philadelphia on September 5, they lost to the Western Army All-Stars at Detroit on September 9, 12-0.

Wayne University began training September 8 on a practice field at the sixth hole of the municipal golf course, located adjacent to their quarters at the Bancroft cabins on US-31. They will meet the University of Detroit for their season opener on October 2.

Managers, coaches and players of both teams expressed the hope that conditions would permit them to return to Charlevoix for the 1943 training period. A hearty invitation has been extended them by city officials to return if it is possible to do so.

LEGION ARMY TANK GOES TO WAR AGAIN

Souvenir of World War I Has Been Sold for Scrap Iron

An army tank from World War I, for four years the property of Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226, American Legion, has gone to take part in the present war.

Sold to Barney Milstein, of East Jordan, scrap dealer, the tank was broken up on the Legion grounds Friday with acetylene torches.

The tank was brought here in 1938 from the Rock Island, Ill., arsenal. The Legionnaires have cheerfully sacrificed their trophy, with the promise of replacing it in the near future with some choice relics of the present conflict.

WILL MOVE RATIONING BOARD OFFICE

CHANGE TO CITY HALL PLANNED ABOUT SEPT. 21

Deadline for Issuance of Canning Sugar Ration Certificates Is Set for September 30

Expansion of the national rationing program and subsequent added duties imposed upon county War Price and Rationing boards has resulted in necessity to move the Charlevoix county office from inadequate quarters in the court house, according to Fenton R. Bulow, chairman.

The Charlevoix city council has authorized location of the county office in the community room of the city hall for duration of the war. Mr. Bulow stated authorization for the change in location on September 21st had been received, but that moving will depend upon arrival of office equipment. It is expected the change will be made, however, on or about the 21st of this month.

Along with this announcement, Mr. Bulow stated that a deadline for issuance of canning sugar rationing certificates has been set for September 30th. All persons who can show eligibility for additional allotment of canning sugar should make their application by mail at once, for no certificates will be issued after the September 30th deadline.

Plans and preparations are now under way, Mr. Bulow stated, to handle other commodities expected to come under rationing regulations. It is expected that in the near future county boards will be called upon to handle rationing of gasoline, coffee and clothing. No definite instructions on these items have yet been received, however.

TWENTY-TWO LEAVE THURSDAY FOR ARMY

Send-Off Program at 3 P. M. In Charge of Boyne City

Twenty-two Charlevoix county men will leave Thursday afternoon on the 4:08 train for induction into the army at Fort Custer.

Sounding of the fire siren at 3 o'clock will announce opening of the send-off program at the city hall, which will be in charge of Boyne City. It is understood that Dr. Guy C. Conkle, mayor of that city, will speak. Everyone who possibly can is urged to be present for the send-off.

September 25 is the date set for examination at Kalamazoo of the month's second quota of draftees.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS OPENED MONDAY

REGULAR SCHEDULE CLASSES NOW UNDER WAY

Enrollment Figures Close to Those of Second Day of School Last Year Are Reported

Charlevoix public schools opened Monday for the 1942-43 term.

Enrollment figures reported by Supt. O. P. North, now only temporary and expected to fluctuate as the term advances, showed a decrease of two pupils in comparison with last year.

The total school enrollment on Tuesday was 571, compared to 573 on the same day a year ago. The present senior high enrollment is 142, compared to 157 last year, the junior high 131, compared to 123, elementary department 298, compared to 293. While the senior high grade enrollment took an appreciable drop, increases were noted in the junior high and grades.

Following is the enrollment by grades:

Grade	1941	1942
High School
12th grade	40	49
11th grade	57	46
10th grade	60	47
	157	142
Junior High
9th grade	52	48
8th grade	39	43
7th grade	60	40
	123	131
Elementary Department
6th grade	41	40
5th grade	34	35
4th grade	39	47
3rd grade	51	42
2nd grade	36	41
1st grade	49	46
Kindergarten	43	47
	293	298

The decrease in high school enrollment is traceable to some students being employed in defense industry, families having moved to metropolitan areas, and in one instance where a high school youth has joined the armed forces.

Supt. North reported that approximately 94 rural students were being transported to Charlevoix by bus. The new bus to the Phelps district is bringing 26, the Norwood bus, serving Norwood, Hilton, McGeugh and Barnard district is carrying 32, the Ironton bus, serving Ironton, Grand View and Loeb districts is transporting 36. This influx of rural school students has added in holding up the school enrollment.

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

Street-corner strategists have never won a campaign in all the world's history, but they have, occasionally, destroyed civilian morale.

In other columns of this issue are articles calling attention to the nation's urgent need for scrap metal. Simmered down to bare facts, the success or failure of our war effort depends upon metal. Industry cannot operate without it, our fighting men cannot do their part without the weapons produced from it. It is up to our citizens to produce every bit of scrap they can dig up—not anytime—but right now. If you have not already searched every corner of your property, get at it.

There is this to say for Mahatma Gandhi: He doesn't wear cuffs on his trousers.

The average woman can tell at a glance within a few dollars how much another woman paid for any item of clothing in her wardrobe; whereas the average man—unless he's a specialist—has no idea whether another man paid $20 or $200 for the clothes he's wearing.

At the end of a day, a man who works for a living frequently finds that a large slice of his time has been absorbed in doing things that he wasn't paid to do. He may have talked to a young man who was worried about his future, attended the funeral of an old friend put in an hour with a committee of some civic organization or other or carried out a task given him to do by that organization. The minutes and hours thus lifted from his working day may have taken something out of his income. These extra duties add cares to what might otherwise be a smoother and freer life. What we amount to in our job or business, however, is not so much from doing what we are paid to do, but in doing what we aren't paid to do. The rule applies equally in what we may call our whole life. If we come to the point where we do only the things we are paid to do,

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Uncle Sam has scraped the bottom of the barrel for steel metal.

Unless plain Americans everywhere, in thousands of villages and towns and cities, and on thousands of farms everywhere, dig down into their own scrap barrel Amarican boys will go without vitally needed tanks and airplanes and other arms of war and our Allies may be deprived of weapons with which to fight our battles before we can open our Second Front.

That's a pretty long sentence, but it may be a longer one—as a dictator would impose it—if we Americans fail to deliver. But it's the plain truth.

Four Michigan newspapermen were invited to attend a conference in Washington a few days ago. They came from Detroit, Ironwood, Grand Rapids and Lansing. We happened to be one of them.

Traveling to Washington these days is no picnic, we assure you.

We couldn't get sleeping accomodations out of Washington at all, although we made our reservations one week in advance. Finally, at the last minute while in Washington, we managed to get accommodations on another railroad. We arrived at the capital at 8:20 a. m. and left at 5:20 p. m.—just long enough to hear this unusual story.

Government officials, headed by Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, reiterated the urgent need for more scrap iron. They were all "big shots."

Lieut. General Brehon Somervell, the commanding general for services of supply, and Vice Admiral S. M. Robinson, chief of bureau of procurement and material, both stressed the imperative importance of getting more metal to the steel mills in the next 60 days.

Elmer Davis, director of the office of War Information, said

Four Delegates Attended 4-H Conservation Camp at Higgins Lake

The sixth annual 4-H conservation camp is taking place at the Higgins lake training school this week, Monday to Saturday, inclusive. One hundred delegates have been selected from all counties to enjoy this week of instruction. Charlevoix county is represented at the camp by Gale DeNise and Henry Salisz, of Boyne Falls, and Bruce Woodcock and Ray Sloop, of East Jordan. These boys have been in 4-H conservation projects for several years and are deeply interested in Michigan conservation activities.

The delegates will be housed in new dormitories and will have modern facilities throughout. The schedule has been prepared for each day and includes field trips and studies of all activities carried on by the department of conservation. It is expected that the delegates will return home around noon on Saturday, September 10.

Beaver Island 4-H Clubs Planning Achievement Day

For the first time it is being planned to hold a Harvest Festival on Beaver Island, which should attract the attention of all residents. This year the young folks are participating in 4-H canning, victory gardens and poultry. Tentatively the event is scheduled for Tuesday the 22nd. Ribbons and suitable awards will be made available to the winners.

A program will be developed that will be of interest to all folks. It is highly possible that departments will be planned so that adults may bring in some of their displays of crops and agricultural products. Complete plans are being developed this week.

Bags for Picking Milkweed Pods Now Available for Distribution

Farmers and others interested in picking milkweed pods for the newly organized Petoskey Milkweed Floss Corporation may get their bags at the county agent's office, Boyne City. These bags will be given out free of charge and in sufficient quantities to harvest the crop. While no definite time has been set for harvesting, it is thought that around September 20 will be about the right time. Of course, this varies with certain locations, but they should be picked when the seed is turning brown and when the pods begin to crack open. It is recommended that the bags be filled about two-thirds full and then hung up to dry. From recent studies it appears that they should shrink about 30 percent so that 1,000 pounds green weight of pods will weigh out around 700 pounds dry weight.

This might be a good project for organizations to cooperate in. It would seem that good daily wages could be made in gathering the pods. Several folks have indicated that they can pick 3 to 5 bushels per hour. This being the case, it looks to be profitable for all parties concerned. Full particulars will be gladly given when you come to pick up the bags.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

Farmers who are patrons of the East Jordan creamery should be interested in the recent order from the office of defense transportation that the mileage of trucks hauling cream from the farms must be cut 25 per cent. If these trucks are to continue to serve through the war, we must all co-operate in securing the reduction requested. A good part of the reduction may be secured if every farmer placed his can at the road side. Much gas, mileage and tire wear caused by running into drives, backing and turning would be saved. Think this over. If you do this, you may be able to get the truck service throughout the war.

The first lot, 86 Triple A soil checks for 1942 have been distributed in Charlevoix county. They total $1144.00 which averages a smaller payment in comparison to other years. This is accounted for by the fact that most farmers took the greater part of their payment in conservation material, fertilizer, lime and marl.

It has been quite popular to make light of the British efforts in the present war. Do you know that last year for every plane that was imported into Britian, they exported to other fighting United Nations fronts 4 1-2 planes of their own manufacture, a total of 9,781. For every tank that was imported into Britian they exported 15 tanks to other United Nations' battle fronts. In 1941 Britian sent 3,000 tanks of her own manufacture to various United Nations fighting fronts—in addition to equipping their own home tank divisions. (During that time they imported 200 tanks).

We're Busy Helping Uncle Sam

...—V...—

LAST YEAR America's railroads moved 475 billion ton-miles of freight, history's greatest traffic job. (We'd like to tell you how many millions of soldiers and sailors we carried, but . . . . .)

This year the railroads may haul 50 million carloads of freight—10% to 15% more than in 1941.

We did the 1941 job pretty easily because freight shippers and receivers and the public cooperated. We can do this year's bigger job if we again get that cooperation.

This all-out war requires all-out transportation. Uncle Sam is depending on the railroads for that. We're handling 70% of his military freight. To let him down would be tragic.

So "the tall man in the high hat" comes first.

At any time now there may be one, even two or three fewer cars in your passenger train. You'll excuse it, won't you? Uncle Sam will be using them.

Or your freight may move out, or come to you, a little later than you had hoped. We're certain you'll overlook that, too. We'll be moving important things for Uncle Sam.

We knew you would. And you'll be helping him, too.

The GHOST PLANE by ARTHUR STRINGER

THE STORY SO FAR: To help save Norland Airways Alan Slade agrees to fly a supposed scientist named Frayne and his assistant, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds Slade's partner, Cruger, buys a new Lockheed, which is stolen. When Slade returns from the Anawotto he starts out to find the plane, aided by an eskimo named Umanak and by his old prospector friends, Zeke and Minty. Slade goes to Frayne's camp, where he learns that the missing plane is being used by Frayne to take something out of the country. Slim Tumstead, a no-good flyer who has lost his license, is Frayne's pilot. When Slade attempts to investigate the plane's cargo he is knocked unconscious by Karnell. He is "rescued" by Tumstead, only to be abandoned by him on a deserted island. Zeke and Minty find Slade's plane and stay to guard it. Slade escapes to the mainland. Umanak is found, exhausted, by Dr. Morlock and his daughter, Lynn, and he tells them he has found the missing plane. He has also brought a sample of the plane's cargo, which turns out to be pitchblende, source of a new kind of power. They decide to take Umanak home and then look for Slade.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XVI

But taking Umanak home had its difficulties.

—16—

"It's you who musn't take chances," she reminded him.

"No like devil-bird," was his stubborn protest.

But the Flying Padre was insistent. And Lynn, after much talk and argument, finally persuaded the old Innuit to climb into the cabin. There he crouched down in a corner, with his hands covering his face. He moaned aloud as the plane took off. He continued to sweat and shiver on the trip back to Iviuk Inlet. Once once there, disdaining Lynn's help, he disemberked with unexpected celerity, to be surrounded by an admiring group of natives whose exclamations of envy did much to restore the old man's shattered morale.

But Lynn's father was no longer interested in Umanak.

"Our next job," he said, "is to get in touch with Corporal McGarry at Great Bear. This begins to look like a case where the territorial authorities ought to get busy."

Lynn showed no active interest in that suggestion.

"Our first job," she maintained, "is to find Alan."

Some unlooked-for timbre of determination in her voice brought the Flying Padre's glance about to her face.

"But I feel we ought to swing over to Echo Harbor first. Umanak's an Eskimo, and you can, of course, discount his story a little. But if he's found what he says there it ought to be confirmed."

"That can wait," said Lynn.

Lynn studied the country over which the faded blue wings of the Flying Padre's plane drifted like a shadow. It was country that was new to her, yet in its general aspects it was oddly familiar.

She sighed as the Flying Padre banked and turned and settled down on a blue-watered lake where the wild fowl scuttled away at their approach. She remained silent as the pontoons moved slowly in toward a pebbled shore fringed by a scattering of driftwood.

"That's all for today," said the man at the controls. He sat for a moment in silence. His face looked tired and dispirited. But when he glanced at Lynn's equally dispirited face he roused himself.

"This is exactly what we're looking for," he said with a forced smile. "Firewood waiting for us and a clean shoreline without mosquitoes."

"But we haven't found Alan," said the still motionless girl.

"We'll find him," was the other's quietly assured response to that. After getting out his mooring line he rummaged through his cabin equipment for a jointed rod which he kept there. He ignored Lynn's clouded eyes as she sat watching him make ready his rod and tackle. "There's fish in these waters," he announced. "And if you'll get things ready we'll have a beauty or two for supper."

"But we haven't found Alan," she repeated to herself as she mechanically set about her work.

The question of Alan's whereabouts was still in her mind as they took off, the next morning, and headed deeper into the land of stunted spruce holes and empty ridges. A sense of timelessness crept through her as they flew on. Then she saw how the plane was veering eastward and her father was leaning forward to study the course of a river that wound sullenly in and out between the shadowy hills.

"That must be the Anawotto," he called out.

She took her turn at studying the terrain over which they were droning. The Anawotto, to her, looked malignant, like a snake. She found so little that was consoling in its aspects that she was glad when they temporarily swerved away from its ever-changing course and headed for a district of bolder ridges interspersed with lakes that lay like pools of silver in the morning sun. Some of them were small and some of them were large. But the heavier tree-growth along their shores told her they had left the Land of Little Sticks behind them. Some of them, she also saw, were studded with conical small islands. One larger lake held the ghost of an islet in its very center, like a tiny pupil at the center of a wider iris of azure.

Lynn's eyes were on that island as they bore down on it. It lost its vagueness, as they drew nearer, and took on a new irregularity of outline. Then she saw it was not a dot of land. It was a gray-winged plane floating there in its bath of blue.

Her heart seemed to come up in her throat.

"The ghost plane," she cried aloud.

But the Flying Padre, apparently, had also sighted the gray wings against the blue of unruffled northern water. He turned and circled the lake, dropping lower as he looked.

"It's Alan's plane," he shouted as his pontoons took the water. "That's the Snow-Ball Baby."

Lynn could feel her heart pound as they drifted nearer. But no sign of life came from the plane as lazily dragging at its mooring line.

"That's queer," he observed. "I'll edge closer and climb aboard."

But an abrupt interruption came to that movement.

A rifle barked from the lake bank and a bullet went whining over his head. As he looked up, arrested, a second detonation echoed out over the lake water and a second bullet whined perilously close to his ear. Then a voice, husky but authoritative, called across the water.

"Keep off that plane," it commanded, "or I'll drop you where you stand."

The Flying Padre's eye, searching the shore, made out an unkempt and ragged old figure with a leveled rifle. On a rock point behind him, a moment later, he detected a second bewhiskered old figure, also with a leveled rifle.

"Keep down," was the Padre's warning cry to the girl in the cabin. "These fools are firing at us." Then he turned to the threatening figures on the shore. "Stop it, you idiots."

"Not on your life," was the huskily shouted response. "You back away from that plane and taxi in here or we'll blow you out o' the water."

The indignant man of medicine considered that threat. But it failed to stir him into action.

"Where's Alan Slade?" he demanded.

"What's that to you?" was the shouted response.

"We're friends," called back the Padre, "who want to find him."

He could see the rifle-barrels, at that, waver and lower.

"Then you'd best swing in here and prove it," was the call came back to him.

"It's all right," Lynn was saying from the cabin hatch. "They must be Alan's old miners from the Kasakana."

She dropped into the pilot's seat and started the motor, her still indignant father balanced on one of the floats as she veered about and taxied in to the shore line.

There, as he waded ashore, the old man with the rifle regarded him with a skeptical eye.

"Now, who're you?" was that old man's prompt challenge.

"That's not important," announced the Flying Padre. "I'd rather know who you are."

"We're a couple o' peace-lovin' lone-panners who've been prospectin' back on the Kasekana. I answer to the name o' Zeke Pratt. And this is my bunkie, Minty Buckmen."

"Then you know Alan Slade," cried Lynn.

"Sure, we know Alan," conceded the embattled Zeke. "And that boy's a bit of all right. But what's worryin' us is why he ain't back here with his plane. She's been sittin' there empty, day after day, and I don't like the looks o' things."

"That's why we're guardin' her," concurred Minty.

"From whom?" questioned the Padre.

"From them damned swan-hunters who're up to some devilment round here we can't figger out. They've got a landin' dock and a plane o' their own hidden under a pile o' brush over the hills there. And when we tried to sleuth 'em out they started slingin' lead like a bunch of Sioux."

The Flying Padre's face remained thoughtful a moment.

"Could you take me to the camp of these people with the plane?"

"Sure," said Zeke, "if you're ready to dodge bullets on the way."

"And you have no idea why those people are in this territory?" pursued the Padre.

"From the way they've been trippin' and dikin' and pittin' along the ridges I figgered out they was after gold. But they ain't workin' in the right rock for color."

"Supposing," said the Padre, "they were after pitchblende?"

That failed to impress the two old lone-fire prospectors.

"There's pitchblende in this neck o' the woods all right," conceded Zeke, "but what in heck would they be doin' with it out here?"

The Flying Padre had his own ideas about that. A plane ferrying a ton a trip could carry a ponderable amount of uraninite from that uninhabited interior to tidewater.

"But what good would that do Germany," asked Lynn, "or any other country on the other side of the world?"

From an unmolested port like Echo Harbor, the Padre pointed out, a disguised Japanese whaler or even a furtive Russian freighter could pick up the cargo and quietly carry it on to Yokohama or to Vladivostok, where it could be transshipped and hurried on to the reducing plants north of the Rhine.

"This thing goes a trifle wider than you think," proclaimed the Padre as his gaze went from the two empty-eyed old sourdoughs to the disappointingly unresponsive face of his daughter.

"But this isn't helping us to find Alan," she objected.

The Padre studied the deepened hollow in her cheek and the sharpened line of the valorously poised chin.

"I know it," he agreed, "but one seems to weave in with the other. And I'm wondering which approach will bring the best results."

"If you take the one we took," interposed Minty, "you'll git results all right. You'll git 'em in the shape o' four-ounce slugs o' lead."

"Then we'll look 'em over from the air first," said the Flying Padre. He turned to the two ragged figures beside him. "Have you old-timers ever flown?"

"Sure," was the prompt response.

But again Lynn interrupted.

"That's what we should both be doing," she insisted. "While you take Alan's ship I could take ours and be looking for him."

"Where will you look?" asked her father.

"I can't be sure yet," was her none too satisfactory answer. "But he wouldn't be away from his ship without some good reason." She stared out over the lonely spruce ridges. "And he'd come back to it if he could. That means he's somewhere out there waiting for us."

The Padre stood silent a moment. She had, as a rule, been singularly dependable. And the best antidote for anxiety, he had learned, was activity.

"All right," he acceded, "you can't stand around idle at a time like this, any more than I could. But keep some system in your scouting." He smiled at her prompt nod of understanding. "And no overnight stuff, remember."

"Not if I can help it."

"You've got to help it," said Lynn's father. "We can't afford a second searching party in these wilds. Mark this as your base and keep a close check on your course. And if the weather gets bad, head back here. One of these men will be keeping a signal-fire going. But the important thing, remember, is to spot your landmarks and know your lakes."

He found something reassuring in the girl's quiet smile.

"It's you who mustn't take chances," she reminded him.

For just a moment the firm young jaw quivered with some darker emotion. "You're all I have left, if anything's happened to Alan."

The Flying Padre forced a laugh.

"I'm still betting on that bush hawk," he stoutly maintained. "He comes out of too hard a school not to know how to take care of himself. And today, remember, is the tomorrow we worried about yesterday."

The lines to Washington are the most congested.

OUR Army and Navy have issued orders to their personnel to restrict the use of Long Distance telephone lines — to call only if absolutely necessary — to be brief — and to stay close to the telephone on calls not immediately completed.

Officers and men are doing their part. They know the necessity of keeping the lines and central office apparatus clear for vital military and war production calls.

Today, many lines — especially those to the places listed at the left — are crowded with war calls. Adding enough new equipment to handle all the increased load is impossible because of material shortages. So it's up to all of us to make the most efficient use of what we have. Here are some of the ways you and every other civilian can help:

1. Make only the most essential Long Distance calls, and avoid especially the crowded lines to the points listed at the left.
2. Keep all your conversations as brief as you can.
3. When possible, give number of distant telephone you are calling.

The same kind of cooperation will help improve local service, too. Your own telephone line may never carry a war message, but every call you make passes through a busy central office where it may tie up a war call. Try to keep your calls short. Help save wires for war!

Examination by Health Unit Is Scheduled September 23

Cerrying on the tuberculosis fight in this county, the X-ray unit of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association will be at the Boyne City gym on September 23, according to Dr. Jomes Chopmen, director of Health District No. 3, who is cooperating in this clinic.

Even with the mogic eye of the X-ray to seorch out early tuberculosis, only nhout 20 per cent of the patients are found when the disease is in an early stage. Peoplo who feel well do not believe that the tiny germs could have gotten in their lungs, and so they do not have chest X-rays in time.

Dr. Chopmon praised the work of the volnnteers in this county who help in the Christmas seal sale each year, ond so finonce the work of searching for eorly tuberculosis.

LETTERS from the ARMY CAMPS

Camp Blanding, Fla.

Dear Ken:

Thought I would drop you a few lines and ask you if you will send me a poper for tha next month or two.

They made me a first class prlvate last month, and they say I have an eagle eye. I'm a gunner for thesa anti-tank guns, and I can shoot a pretty good score with a 37 mm. cannon.

We were looking at some tanks the other dey just to get an idea of what we had to stop. Boy, they certainly looked as though you couldn't stop those bobies. But they teach us the vulnerable spots to hit so I'm pretty confident I'll get my share of tanks.

We were transferred here from Camp Pickett, Va., and we're really getting down to training.

Well, I'll have to sign off now, und thanks a lot.

Prepare Now for V-I-C-T-O-R-Y AFTER VICTORY

The problem of changing from war work, after World War 1, to pesoetime production, plunged us into a long and grim depression.

Rural America felt this depression five years ahead of industry ond business. We tried to warn labor and copital but they would not believe the warning and insisted the rainbow ond the pot of gold at the end would last forever.

Finally, the bubble broke and the storm come. We had 12 million unemployed, the domeslic market for farm production was gone, ond even the smaller export market survived only when we loaned Europe the money to buy our products. Farm income was reduced, mortgages increased and many farmers lost their farms while industry, big and little, wos at its wits' end to survive.

To Prevent a Worse Depression.

Our problem is to prevent even a worse depression at the end of this war. Every industry, big ond little, has been retooled to produce airplanes, tanks, cannon and weapons of war. Millions ond millions of dollors have been spent for this purpose.

When this war is ended it will take the same millions of dollors to turn these industries back to peace-time production.

Lessnns of World War I.

We learned after World War I thot our country cannot prosper unless agriculture prospers. We know now that our country cannot prosper unless agriculture, business and industry, and labor are all prosperous. Whatever our personal feeling may be, the foct remains that all of these groups taken together make up our domestic market which consumes over 90 per cent of our total production.

Labor can purchase its maximum of farm products if each worker has a permanent job at good wages. The employer can pay good wages if he has something useful to manufacture ond some one has the desire and the money to buy it. Jobs ot good wages depend upon an employer who is making the money necessary to poy the wages.

Farm Prices Reflect Good Business.

This makes it plain that with employers ond business busy in useful undertakings, with all workers employed at good wages, farm prices will be good aod consumption at its maximum.

The key to the situation is that employers shall have the cash money at hand to change from war manufacture to peace-time activity with the least possible delay when this war ends.

Our United States Senate is searching for o plon that will produce moximum revenue to the government to insure victory; provida a fund at the end of the war big enough ond quickly enough to convert business ond industry from war work to peacetime necessity, but without the government having to borrow ond lend the money for this purpose after the war is over.

Here Is a Simple, Practical Plan.

For the solution of all these problams there is one simple plon of outstanding practical value, based on the ideo that war profits from all compsnies, big and little, should be used for this purpose.

The tax rate on wor profits is figured at about 90 per cent. Business and industry, big and little, would be permitted, however, to deduct from their taxable war profits 20 per cent of such profits, provided tha deduction is used to purchase United States Recovery boods.

Recovery bonds would be a special kind of bond for this purpose only. Recovery bonds could not ba sold or borrowed upon during tha war, and neither would they pay any interest. They must be held by the purchaser until the end of the war.

The doy the war is over these bonds would automotically start to bear interest, could be bought and sold, and become the same os any other government bond. The purchaser could sell them or borrow upon them to obtain the money to change his business and plant from war production to peace-time production when and os be needed money to do this job.

Profits for Peace-Time Recovery.

In other words, business, big nr little, would be required to contribute 20 per cent of its own war profits to provide the money to change its own plants back to peacetime production.

The fairness and equity of such a plan is perfectly plain. Each company, by using 20 per cent of its own war profits to buy Recovery bnads, builds its own backlog to bridge from war production to normal peace-time activities. Big companies ond small companies will buy in proportion to their size and needs until the war is over. In the meantime, our government receives the maximum in revenue to produce for victory, and we, the people, have established security against the worst depressions of all time.

With such o plan adopted and in operation, we can all give our maximum to the war effort, secure in the fact that when tha war is over we can quickly ond safely go back to the paths of peace. The necessity for such a plan is so apparent, the evils of depression so grim and widespread that we, the people, can well afford to take time out to support our senators and congressmen in this effort to bypass another depression.

Keep 'em firing—with junk!

WAR FAILS TO REDUCE NUMBER OF FISHERMEN

Drop of Only Four Per Cent From Last Year Recorded

Even in wartime, fishing continues one of Michigan's most popular forms of recreation, according to the state conservation department which reports the sale of 645,967 sport fishing licenses up to the first of this month, only four per cent less than were sold in the same period a year ago.

The drop in resident license sales was only two per cent—513,866 this season compared with 526,165 a year ago, a decrease of 12,299. Non-resident license sales declined more sharply, as was expected, from 149,718 to 132,101, a negative difference of 17,617 or 12 per cent in the eight months.

Increasing complications in travel may prevent further matching of the pace that in all of 1941 sold more than 840,000 sport fishing licenses, department officials say.

WAGNER-CRISTANELLI WEDDING EVENT OF SUNDAY AT DEARBORN

The marriage of Miss Rita Cristanelli, daughter of Anton Cristanelli, of Dearborn, to Ned D. Wagner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wagner of Charlevoix, was solemnized Saturday morning at 8 o'clock at St. Clement's Catholic church in Dearborn. Rev. Cyril J. Rancourt officiated at the ceremony, in the presence of relatives and close friends.

Attendants to the couple were Miss Dorise Mae Tait and John Paul Ouciette, of Dearborn.

The bride's street-length gown of copenhagen blue was fashioned with a velvet bodice, and skirt of lace over taffeta. Her necessories were wine, and she wore a corsage of yellow roses. Her attendant wore royal blue, with yellow roses.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's father. A reception for forty guests was held there in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Wagner came Sunday for a short visit with his parents in this city, and returned to make their home in Dearborn, where he is employed by the Western Electric Co. The groom is a graduate of Charlevoix high school, class of 1939, and the bride attended Northwestern high school in Detroit.

SPECIAL FARM POSTER

Promotes War Bonds.—Urging farmers to purchase War Bonds every market day, this striking War Bond poster will serve as a constant reminder of the farmer's stake in the War, for it will be displayed generally in the rural areas during the next few months. Illustration is by John Stewart Curry.

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

"We are not doing enough," said the President, and he added, "In this war, it is kill or get killed."

In this "toughest war of all times" we are going to have to get down to brass tacks—and turn the brass tacks into bombs and bullets.

To an extent, we have been doing this, but now the need is terribly urgent and materials scarce. Now we must have war goods in greater volume than ever—and in shorter time. Our enemies don't wait.

Steel mills, eating up almost five million tons of scrap metal a month, are running on almost day-to-day basis. We are dangerously short of copper, tin and other nonferrous metals.

That's why our school children—30 million of them—are being enlisted to comb our homes, backyards and farmyards for scrap to feed the steel giants. That's why the aid of newspapers throughout the land has been sought to impress upon their millions of readers the seriousness of the situation. That's why our kitchens must shower down old tin cans by the millions so that we can reach our goal of 3,000 tons of household tin recovered a year in 17 new de-tinning plants. That's why we must save waste fats and grenses, turn in half billion pounds we have been asked to salvage. These fats would help make enough bombs to cripple the German war machine or enough explosives to fire 1,250,000 anti-aireraft shells.

Last year our production of all-wire coat-hangers, if made into military barbed-wire, would have girdled the earth 6 1-2 times. We shall not be making wire hangers this year.

To do all that we must do to stop the Axis hordes, merely to get enough skilled workers and fighting men for this gigantic job, is going to be a tough business for all of us.

In 116 or 160 critical war production areas, there are serious labor shortages and in all of these areas there are shortages of some kinds of skilled workers. Employment in the automotive industry, now making war goods, has passed the 800,000 mark. But not until it absorbs another 600,000 workers will the industry have reached peak production. There'll be almost 5,000,000 women in war industries by the end of this year. More millions of them will be needed by 1943, not only in war plants but in the fields.

Small towns and larger cities, lacking war industries, are losing their young men to the armed forces; their boys, women and older men to war work in nearby or distant industrial areas.

All of this means more work—harder work—for everyone.

On the whole, farmers haven't found the going tough yet—except for the shortage of labor. They're buying more goods and making more property improvements than at any time since the unlucky boom days of the last war. Yet that very fact should give them pause.

Inflated war prices not only handicap the whole war program, but endanger post-war security. With tobbacco, wool and all meats bringing prices far above parity, producers might well recall the tragic slump which followed the last war-created "prosperity."

In its unending battle against the fifth column threat of inflation—high living costs—the government is cracking down on sabotage of price control, illegal trading, "black markets," rent gougers in war-boom towns, dishonest grading of meats and other wartime trickery. Some manufacturers would hide price increases by cheapening products and skimping on measurements, claiming their diluted goods are the same as they sold before. Penalties and retraining orders are the government's answer to such slipery practices, but the most effective answer comes from consumers who refuse to deal with backsliding merchants or with gasoline and tire bootleggers.

As Price Administrator Leon Henderson said, "The time of our tolerance is past."

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Barbed wire used by Uncle Sam's fighting forces is vastly different from that used on American farms. Army and Marine barbed wire is much heavier and the barbs, about three inches in length, are more vicious than ordinary barbed wire.

The Marine Corps pays fifty cents for each twelve yards, or 36 feet of this specially manufactured barbed wire. The Army and Marine Corps needs thousands upon thousands of feet for defensive warfare. Your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps will insure sufficient quantity for their needs. Invest at least ten percent of your wages in War Bonds every pay day.

AGRICULTURE IN INDUSTRY

By Florence C. Weed

(This is one of a series of articles showing how farm products are finding an important market in industry.)

Cellulose for Plastics

Hairbrush bristles from wood, buttons from milk, fountain pens from soybeans. These are commonplace articles in everyday use, chosen from the 1,000 or more articles being made from plastics.

The word "plastic" describes a new chemical process whereby certain farm products are ground to a powder, mixed with chemicals and color, then hardened in molds into the shape of articles in everyday use. In this material, the color penetrates each molecula and does not have to be surface finished.

You have seen these objects many times—pencils, ash trays, toy animals, buckles and inexpensive jewelry. Soybean plastics make standard parts of Ford automobiles such as door and window frames, horn buttons, light switch levers. From wood and cotton plastics come colorful handles for tools, radio cases, lamp bases and telephone receiver sets.

Wood, cotton, soybean and casein plastics are being commercially produced, and a pilot plant in Louisiana is making cheap plastics from sugar cane on a small scale. Still in the experimental stage are plastics made from corn, known as zein. In Maine, experiments are under way to develop potato plastics which resemble clear glass. Other good possibilities which have not been developed are corn stalks and grain straws, pig and cow hair and poultry feathers.

While plastics are still in the gadget stage, research has started to adapt them to automobile and airplane bodies and housing materials. Sheets of proper strength and color have been perfected and are waiting for someone to find a practical schema for fastening the sections together.

VICTORY GARDENS

Michigan Council of Defense

Victory gardens for food are important in the civilian war effort, but flower gardens for public health and morale have an important place as well and the National Victory Garden committee has strongly urged that flower gardens be continued.

In line with this policy, George Tomlinson, director of Victory Gardens for Michigan council of defense, has compiled information for storage of summer bulbs and tubers, that there may be as little difficulty as possible for flower growers next season. Storage of bulbs and tubers, such as dahlias, canna and gladioli, which must be lifted from the ground, is a problem for gardeners whose homes have heated basements.

An unheated cellar with a dirt floor, which will keep apples and potatoes in good condition during the winter, will serve for bulbs and tubers as well. Lack of humidity, excessive temperature and lack of air must be guarded against in winter storage. A temperature of 50 degrees is ideal.

It is possible, however, to store bulbs and tubers in a heated basement, he points out, if they are protected by a covering of earth or peat moss, which should be moistened occasionally.

Dahlia tubers may be placed in bushel baskets or boxes filled with peat moss and stored in the coolest corner of the basement. If a little water is sprinkled on the moss once a week they should come through the winter very well. Canna tubers do well under the same treatment.

Gladioli bulbs are even easier to keep in good condition. The principal causes of trouble with them are extreme humidity and poor ventilation. They should not be piled into a basket or box nor enclosed in airtight bags. Gladioli bulbs should be clean and the tops pulled off for storage, but the husks should not be removed. If it is desired that varieties be kept separate they may be placed in kraft paper bags and stored with the mouths of the bags left open to the air, without piling up. Bulblets adhering to the bulbs should not be separated until time to plant in the spring.

Victory Gardens displays are scheduled for the week of Sept. 21 to 26 at fairs and garden meetings at Centerville, Allegan and Adrian.

TO HELP "WIN THE PEACE"

There is under consideration in Washington this week an important piece of legislation, designed to keep 20 million American automobiles rolling for the duration of the war, to which, be believe, entirely too little attention has been paid by the public.

This bill—it is called the Ellender-Patman Tire Conservation Bill—offers definite, sensible solutions to the problem of how to keep the nation's vital motor transport moving in the face of a rubber shortage. This would be accomplished by retreading 30 million tires every year with all-reclaim-rubber capping stock; and to those who point to the shortage of rubber and say it cannot be done, the Rubber Manufacturers' Association has said that it can be done. The bill would stabilize tire prices and release for immediate sale those odd-sized and lower-level tires which are obviously of no value to the war effort.

There is a further provision in this bill, which seems to us, is even more important than its other sections, from the standpoint of "winning the peace" when must follow the winning of the war. Designed to contribute to the maintenance of free enterprise, this measure provides that, for the duration of the war, all tire sales and service be turned over to independent tire and gasoline dealers, so that these "little businesses," by getting all the business that is left, may be sustained until victory brings a lifting of tire sale restrictions.

This would mean that the rubber company-owned factory outlets and the big oil-company-owned super service stations would turn retail tire business over to these "little fellows," during the war, retaining for themselves only the wholesaling function.

But it is important to point out that this measure would hurt nobody. In the first place, these big companies are prospering through war contract work, and don't need the comparatively small amount of business represented by tire sales.

But beyond that, it is a fact that both the oil companies and the rubber companies do most of their business through independent dealers—so it would mean, for them, simply concentrating on wholesaling, so their own independent dealers could exist. Doesn't that seem fair?

The Courier urges you to support these Tire Conservation Bills. There is entirely too little attention paid by Washington to the maintenance of free enterprize. We must make every effort to see that it does not disappear.

OFFICIAL U. S. TREASURY WAR BOND QUOTAS FOR SEPTEMBER

Washington, D. C., Sept. 8.—September War Bond Quotas for the 3,070 counties in the nation were announced today by Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, to make up the national September total of $775,000,000.

The September quota for the State of Michigan is $35,000,000.

In fixing the county quotas, the Treasury has continued its announced policy of setting the monthly quotas in line with the seasonal distribution of income with the billion-dollar monthly national average as the annual goal.

The national quota for May, when the nation went on the billion-a-month annual basis, was $600,000,000. For June the quota was $800,000,000 and for July it jumped to $1,000,000,000. The August quota was $815,000,000, so to maintain the billion-dollar annual monthly average, the quotas for the Fall and Winter months must necessarily be stepped up considerably to reach the objective set.

WILL FROST dropped over last evening and we had a glass of beer on the back porch. I could see Will was bustin' to say something . . .

"Well," he finally remarks, holding up his glass to the light of the settin' sun, "I paid my income tax today—third installment."

There was a note of pride in Will's voice that some folks might have found amusing—if they didn't know Will . . .

• • •

Wasn't amusing to me though. I happen to know this is the first year Will's filed an income tax return, and I suspect the payment wasn't very big . . . probably in the general neighborhood of $3.26. But I know how it made him feel . . .

Made him feel good . . . because he was doing his part as an American citizen . . . holding up his end.

Made him feel proud? . . . to mail that money direct to Uncle Sam—for things that's needed to win this war with.

That's the way Will would feel about bein' able to pay income taxes . . . kind of citizen he is.

And speakin' of taxes . . . I read the other day that during the nine years since beer came back, beer taxes have brought in more than two and a half billion dollars to the government.

• • •

Then it went on to say that the beer industry provides more than a million dollars a day in taxes. Some of that's federal, some's state, and some's local. But any way you describe it, it's a lot of money.

Right here in Michigan, for instance, the taxes from beer last year were enough to pay for sixty-one 4-engine bombers, two hundred and fifteen fighter airplanes, or 321 medium tanks.

(And it wasn't so long ago a lot of that money was going into pockets of bootleggers and gangsters.)

• • •

"There," I thought to myself when I saw Will holding his glass up to the light, "there are two Americans that pay their way . . . Will Frost and beer."

School Army Is Enlisted In Drive For Needed Scrap

Lansing—Led by their 35,000 teachers, Michigan's army of school children are being mobilized for an intensified war effort. Organization of a Junior Salvage corps composed of every grade school and high school pupil in the state is being completed to push the national scrap collection program, according to a joint announcement of Kenneth M. Burns, chairman of the salvage committee of the Michigan council of defense, and Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, superintendent of public instruction.

Thousands of junior salvage corps members will start a two-weeks scrap drive on Oct. 5. The Michigan pupils will participate in a national program which will recruit 30,000,000 boys and girls in public, private and parochial schools for the intensified salvage effort.

Dr. Elliott will be the commanding general of the Michigan corps, with city and rural superintendents serving as colonels. Principals will be majors and teachers captains. Manuals describing the organization and program of the Junior Salvage Corps are being distributed to teachers.

Train for Bomb Spotting

Schools of instruction for Bomb Reconnaisance Agents, under direction of U. S. Army Sixth Service Command, have been announced by Capt. Donald S. Leonard, State Commander, U. S. Citizens Defense Corps of Michigan. The first school was held at the police headquarters armory in Detroit on Sept. 11 and 12 and the second Detroit school is scheduled for Oct. 5 and 6. Schools will be held at State Police headquarters, East Lansing, Oct. 8 and 9 and at Marquette, Oct. 12 and 13. Students are selected by local commanders. Policemen and firemen, citizens of good judgement with some technical or engineering training are likely to be best qualified for the important job of spotting unexploded bombs.

Rushing Books to Citizens

Increasing demand for "What Can I do" is proof that the OCD manual is answering the questions of thousands of civilians, eager to volunteer for the war effort. To meet this demand the Michigan Council of Defense is speeding distribution of the books to county and local chairmen, with the request that it be placed in as many homes as possible. By Sept. 17 approximately 500,000 copies will have been mailed out from the MCD headquarters in Lansing to every county in the state. County quotas have been based on population and it is estimated that about one person in ten may be supplied from the present shipment. Shipments are made to chairmen of county councils of defense, with the request that books be allotted to local chairmen for final distribution to the public.

FARM TOPICS

FARMERS LOSING RICH TOP SOIL

Valuable Land Nutrients 'Going With the Wind.'

By LINDLEY G. COOK
(Extension Soil Conservationist, New Jersey College of Agriculture, Rutgers University.)

Suppose someone drove into your farm and asked you to give him 10 tons of top soil from each of your best acres of land? You'd give him a cool reception, wouldn't you? Of course, every farmer would, yet many good farmers are giving away their top soil at this rate or faster every year and not even worrying about it.

Take the losses caused by one severe storm in August, 1939, as an example. The run-off plots at the Marlboro Soil Conservation Research station were all in tomatoes and the vines were luxurious, spreading over at least 50 to 75 per cent of the ground. There had been no cultivation during the previous four weeks. There were four sets of plots, all of which received substantial treatments of commercial fertilizer every year, in addition to which one set of plots also got a winter cover crop. A second set received 20 tons of manure per acre each year and the third set received 20 tons of manure and a winter cover crop annually.

In this particular August storm, the plots having fertilizer alone lost nearly one-half ton of soil to the acre, the ones having had an annual winter cover crop lost less than a quarter of a ton to the acre, and those which each year got manure and cover crop lost only one-eighth of a ton to the acre. This was for one storm only, and the loss for a season naturally ran into many tons.

Not only do storms carry away more valuable top soil than most farmers realize, but they also carry away a lot of valuable fertilizing elements. Carefully kept records of losses of nitrogen, phosphorus, and potash on these same tomato plots during 1939 showed that the plots which annually received commercial fertilizer alone lost these three elements at the rate of $12.91 worth per acre, while the corresponding losses on the plots which also received annual treatments of manure and winter cover crop amounted to only $0.81 per acre.

These losses of valuable top soil and plant nutrients can be greatly reduced by simple conservation measures. Your county agent or the supervisors of your local conservation district will be able to give you more detailed information about ways and means of establishing adequate conservation measures on your farm.

AGRICULTURE IN INDUSTRY
By Florence C. Weed

(This is one of a series of articles showing how farm products are finding an important market in industry.)

FUR ANIMALS

People in almost every state make money trapping and selling furs. So wide spread was the trapping that several species of wild animals are now nearly exterminated. To replace them, fur pelts raised under controlled conditions have increased from 6,000 pelts in 1923 to more than 300,000 in 1940 with a market value of $60,000,000. The United States is the largest fur-consuming market in the world and the supply produced here does not meet one-third of the demand.

The new industry is now a permanent part of our agriculture which has developed within the last 20 years. Most important is fox farming, which thrives throughout the northern half of the United States from New England west to Washington. More than 50 per cent of the annual crop of silver foxes is produced in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan. Other centers are in the Rocky mountain region, New England, Illinois, Ohio, New York and Pennsylvania.

Studies have been made in the raising of Karakul sheep for their fur, and this may open a profitable market. So far many of the practices used in growing fur animals are hit or miss methods which are costly to the farmer. Research is needed in breeding, feeding and preparation of pelts. It may also be found practical to use the carcass either for animal food or as a source of animal fats and glandular products.

Agricultural News

Prices and income received by farmers in early summer were about one-fourth higher than a year earlier, according to department of agriculture economists.

• • •

In a decade, the farm population of the United States has increased only one-tenth of 1 per cent. The population of the country as a whole increased 7.2 per cent.

LANSING LETTER

the war could be won quicker if "a great part of the effort comes from the grass roots"—the people themselves—in getting every ounce of scrap out of their homes and their farms. And that means old shovels, rakes, washing machines, irons, machinery—anything that contains iron.

A hard-hitting industrialist, whose language consisted of short, blunt words and whose broad jaw reminded us of a bull dog almost "stole the show".

"We have at last struck the bottom of the barrel," said R. W. Wolcott, president of the Lukens Steel company and chairman of the American Industries Salvage committee." The steel mills of the United States have only a two weeks' supply of scrap. The scrap is in the hands of the people. It is gold to the steel mills. Only a miracle can prevent reduced steel operations within the next few months."

Here was a realistic picture of America's plight.

Two weeks! And our war effort is just getting under way.

America's tremendous problem in arming itself while it supplies lend-lease arms to Russia, Australia, England, China and others was outlined by Donald Nelson.

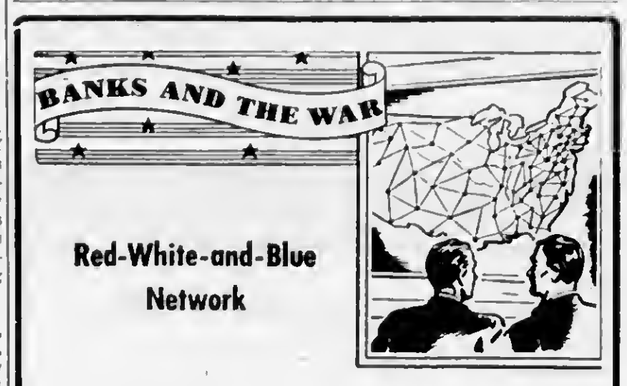
Here was a man whose soft pleading voice did not do justice to the vast economic powers which he wields. A dictator would have been ashamed to plead with newspaper editors as he did humbly and modestly at this conference in Washington.

"We're not doing a good job yet at winning the war," he said. Our enemies have accumulated tremendous reserves—Japan in eleven years, Germany in eight or nine years. With our left hand we have to help arm our allies, and with our right hand we have to produce and equip for our own American army and navy, and at the same time maintain our own economy and sustain it all."

Here was a good epigram: "Instead of too little and too late, we are trying to do too much in too little time, and I think we will do it."

Why the shortage of scrap iron? Well, here is one answer, and it may surprise you. American industry and American labor are doing the job in fewer operations than even the engineers foresaw.

Capacity production has not been reached. More scrap iron is needed. If the scrap can be found in homes and farms, and there are literally millions of tons of it available there today, American factories can produce MORE tanks, MORE airplanes, MORE cannons and other essential armament for our Yanks and Allies overseas and our army at home. That's the story, folks. Newspapers have been invited to tell it to you to see that this metal is turned over to Uncle Sam. Do your part.



Red-White-and-Blue Network

STRETCHING out over the United States is a great network that is helping win this war. It is the American Banking System. Here is a vast array of specialized experience and ability, housed in some 16,000 banks, peopled by a trained staff numbering over 250,000 men and women, working endlessly to hasten Victory. As separate units and as a system, banks serve by keeping the economic machine running, financing war production and providing a host of financial services to the government and nation. (Continued from page 1) we are likely to find the world will leave us alone and that eventually we will be lonesome and without the friendship and sympathy of anyone.

Next important event on the calendar of many sportsmen is the duck hunting season which opens September 26. The season is ten days longer this year, apening five days earlier and closing as many days later. Shooting restrictions are somewhat less stringent this year, too. It's just an even 60 days before we can hunt the buck and let's hope impending gas rationing isn't so severe we can't get out of our own county to do it.

I can figure out now what the word "victory" meant in the name "Victory Garden". Bushels of tomatoes and spuds, good old garden sweet corn, lots of cucumbers and vegetables of all kinds. I took an awful licking from the quack grass at the start, but will admit the reward is worth the effort.

The height of editorial laxity was displayed by one of our own county newspapers last week. Aside from an editorial calling attention to the duty of electors to vote, this publication failed to make mention of the impending election, by at least printing for public information, a list of candidates for office. It is difficult to figure out such policy other than that the editor is absent minded or too lazy to write the required article.

HOLIDAY TRAFFIC AT STRAITS LIGHT

Reduced Schedule Is Announced for Fall Season

Traffic across the Straits of Mackinac on the state ferries has dropped a third since January compared with last year and as a result only two boats instead of three are now being used. The fall schedule became effective last Thursday.

The sharpest drop occurred Labor day weekend when a 42.9 per cent decrease compared with Labor Day, 1941, was noted. This year 9,786 cars were carried compared with 17,135 last Labor Day weekend.

The fall schedule calls for departures from either side every 90 minutes instead of every hour. Starting at 4:30 a. m. boats will leave Mackinaw City every 90 minutes until 10:30 p. m. Departures from St. Ignace will begin at 6 a. m. and continue every 90 minutes until midnight. An "early bird" trip will be made from Mackinaw City at 1:30 a. m. and from St. Ignace at 3 a. m.

FREDERICK W. SASS SUCCUMBED SUNDAY

Services Wednesday for Retired Congregational Minister

Frederick William Sass, 73, died suddenly Sunday afternoon at his home on Michigan avenue. He had been in good health, and his death was due to a heart attack.

Born January 8, 1869, at Michigan City, Ind., Mr. Sass received his education at Moody Bible Institute in Chicago. As a Congregational minister, he held pastorates at Conklin, Mich., in Muskegon at McGraff Memorial church and the Jackson Street church, and in Comstock Park, Mich. He was Congregational state Sunday school missionary from 1913 to 1920, following which he retired from the ministry. A member of the local Congregational church, he occupied the pulpit on many occasions. He was a member of the state Congregational conference.

Mr. Sass married Mary Margaret Stamm in 1894 at Michigan City. She died in 1927. Three children were born to this union, two of whom survive.

In October, 1929, he married Eva E. Adams at Charlevoix, by whom he is survived. He had made his home in this city since that time.

Surviving are the wife, a son, Harvey M. Sass, of Syracuse, N. Y., and a daughter, Mrs. Edgar Osborne, of Park Ridge, Ill. A daughter, Marion Elizabeth, is deceased.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the See Funeral Home, with Rev. G. Russell Parker of Northport, and Rev. Donald R. Evans officiating. Interment was at Brookside cemetery.

AT THE MOVIES

"Juke Girl"

A lusty action drama that combines breezy diagogue and torrid romance, makes its local debut at the Palace Theater, Sunday, September 20, where Warner Bros.' "Juke Girl" starts its run. In the top roles are Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan and Richard Whorf—Sheridan and Reagan as a couple who struggle along trying to make a living wherever they can find it; and Whorf as the fellow who is going to go places by throwing his scruples to the wind. Also featured are George Tobias, Alan Hale, Gene Lockhart, Betty Brewer and many others.

"Sleepy Time Gal"

A gay and refreshing stimulant for war-shattered nerves, Republic's "Sleepytime Gal," starring Judy Canova, opens at the Palace Theatre September 22.

Miss Canovu's comedy is irresistable; she could extract laughs from the sourest of misanthropes or the gloomiest of neurotics. And as for the average, normal and intelligent movie-goers— she slays 'em!

It is a part of the Canova formula—used successfully in such pictures as "Scatterbrain", "Sis Hopkins", and "Puddin' head,"—to place Judy in a position in which she is pathetic as well as ludicrous. Thus, she has the same wistful appeal which made Charlie Chaplin one of the most famous comedians of all time.

Judy, in "Sleepytime Gal," is a kitchen mechanic in a large Florida hotel. The ambitious bell hop (played engagingly by Tom Brown) has large ambitions due to his love for the news-stand girl (Mildred Coles). He cannot marry because of his low financial status, but by making Judy a spectacular radio star, he will be in position to achieve his heart's desire.

So Judy, the unpretentious, unambitious cook's assistant, is heartlessly glamorized and finagled into the position of radio contest winner, with the glaring publicity spotlight focused directly on her winsome but ungainly self.

The film was most capably directed by Al Rogeli under Associate Producer Albert J. Cohen. Art Arthur is responsible for the excellent screenplay from an original story by Mauri Grashin and Robert T. Shannon.

INDUSTRY AND BUSINESS AFTER THE WAR

Every American knows that the manufacture of automobiles has ceased for the duration of the war.

The great automobile industry which in 1940 produced and sold more than 3½ million cars, has been re-tooled to produce airplanes, guns, tanks and munitions of war. Where will these companies get the money necessary to resume the manufacture of automobiles when the war is ended?

The automobile industry happens to be important, and there are thousands of smaller industries which will also face the same problem.

What will the millions of workers do when the demand for war machines stops?

What will happen to the domestic market for farm products when those millions of war workers no longer have jobs?

The stage seems set for an even worse depression after World War II than we suffered after World War I unless right now we start to plan about these surpluses.

It is comforting to learn that Congress is now considering some plan to prevent, or at least to ease, any after-the-war depression.

War Profits for Peace-Time Recovery.

The best plan seems to contemplate the dedication of a portion of war profits for the purpose of providing industry with the ready cash on hand to quickly change to peacetime activity and thus lessen the shock to manufacturing and agricultural surpluses when the war is ended.

A Recovery Band program has been suggested whereby each industry, big and little, will be required to invest at least 20 per cent of its war profits in Recovery Bonds which do not bear interest until the war is ended and which cannot be sold by the purchaser until peace is declared.

Such a plan would build, at the rate of almost a billion dollars a year, a huge recovery reserve to convert war industries to peace production, launch new products and maintain employment. It would place this reserve immediately and automatically in the hands of those businesses and industries with the greatest after-the-war needs.

The moment peace is declared the "time lock" automatically releases this recovery reserve, the bonds become negotiable and begin to draw interest. Purchasers holding them will then treat them like any other Government bonds, to be sold or used to borrow money. There would be no waiting for a post-war Congressional appropriation, no red tape, and no delay in launching the business and industry offensive that may turn threatened depression into unrivaled prosperity.

The plan is simple, practical and fair.

During late years science and research have discovered many new uses for present major farm crops and many new crops which can be used in industry. A plan of this character places immediately in the hands of industry the resources which can be used to finance further research and to plan for the conversion of surplus crops, surplus factory buildings and the employment of war workers in new and useful enterprises whenever this war shall cease and normal peacetime industry, business and agriculture shall be resumed.

This problem deserves the thoughtful consideration of every American. If we can have the assurance of reasonable security in the after-the-war recovery period we can throw ourselves into an all-out effort to win the war and feel that by so doing we have secured "the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

TOOL USERS AND TOOL OWNERS

In a recent advertisement signed by a well-known business concern, this statement appeared: "My boss has 14 Grand tied up in me."

What that slangy use of words meant was that the average employee in industry represents a capital investment—in property, plant, machinery and equipment—of $14,000. In other words, labor has jobs only when some business man, or group of investors, puts up the money necessary for the creation of jobs.

It was well said recently, by a student of economics, that men in governmental authority too often forget that while the rights of workers are being considered, the owner of the tools used by workers must also have some consideration.

After this war is over, the plants now devoted to military needs must be re-converted to peace-time activity; must be re-tooled for the kind of production they were engaged in when it became necessary to tool up for war. Labor will expect peacetime jobs then, but somebody must provide the money for re-converting and re-tooling. That money cannot be forthcoming unless enough profits or capital can be stored up to meet such requirements.

The First Job

Americans are impatient people, says the Farm Journal. Impatience never won a war. Soundly planned action, backed by enough power, wins victories. The job now is not to remake America, but to save it.

PLEDGES ALL STATE AID TO WIN THE WAR

Harry F. Kelly as Governor Will Unite People for Victory

Promising that "every act of mine as governor will be put to the acid test 'will it help win the war', Harry F. Kelly, Republican candidate for Governor stirred a crowd of more than 800 Calhoun county citizens in an address Thursday night.

"This is and must be a war of all the People," said Kelly. "This is not a Republican, Democrat, New Dealer, Labor, small business, large business, farmer, miner, professional group, or any other group or class war. When I say this is a war of all the People I am deeply conscious of the fact that no other war fought by man in the ages past, has that been so true.

"From the so-called darkened and uncivilized ages of the past down through the years to the last World War, nations selected the cream of their youth and sent them forth to engage in mortal combat with the youth of their adversaries.

"Now war has advanced or degenerated to that point where all the people are called upon to meet the test of suffering, hunger and death. Now Nations load their planes with dynamite to drop upon the young, the old, the weak, the sick, the helpless. The casualty list of this war is already carrying the names of countless numbers of babes not old enough to walk or talk.

"Our lads are scattered today on a battle line that stretches around the world. Their deeds of valor inspire us all and yet their cry comes back to us that they have not yet begun to fight. The men and women on the supporting lines—industrial, agricultural and all others—have done marvelous work and yet I have talked to countless numbers on those lines who match the words from the battle front with the words "we haven't begun to produce as yet".

"They want—yes the People of our entire state want our lads to have more guns, tanks, planes, ammunition, food and clothing—placing them on an equal if not better footing to meet the dictator hordes of the world. It is your duty and my duty as citizens and my double duty as an elected state official to direct this great power of Michigan towards this objective.

"Every act of mine during the last four years as a state official has been motivated and directed by the thought that government must be government for all the People with special favors for none.

"If I am elected Governor, I shall continue onward with that thought and shall endeavor to see to it that Michigan's war effort shall be a war effort by all the People with special favors for none".

FOOTBALL SEASON OPENS SEPT. 26TH

INITIAL PRACTICE SESSION HELD WEDNESDAY

Football practice in preparation for the 1942 season began Wednesday afternoon at south side athletic field.

Nearly thirty men reported to Coach Ray Kipke for drills which were started a week prior to school opening in order to provide three weeks of practice before the initial game September 26. Others now working and unable to be out Wednesday are expected to be in uniform after school opens.

Wednesday's turn-out was the largest in recent years. While Don Carey, regular quarterback last fall, was the only veteran backfield man to report, seven linesmen from the 1941 squad were listed among those issued uniforms. They were Bill Rowe, center; Bud Webster and John Bissell, tackles; Joe Bellinger and Jim McMillan, guards; John Swanson and Lester Gallagher, ends. Gerald Chambers, who played in several games last fall, is out for a regular berth this season. A large number of promising new-comers were among those reporting.

Graduation last spring took the usual toll of players. Jim Martin, Carl Rowe and Stan Shapton, backfield men, Jack Stewart and Jim Foster, linesmen, completed their high school terms, and Jancha, regular last fall, has recently joined the U. S. Navy.

Charlevoix's opening contest is scheduled Saturday, September 26th, with Mancelona.

GOVERNOR PROCLAIMS CONSERVATION WEEK

Period of October 4 to 10 Set Aside for Observance

Rating conservation of natural resources as "good sense in peacetime and grave necessity during war," Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner has proclaimed October 4 to 10 "Michigan Conservation Week" and urges general participation in the events calling attention to "basic conservation practices that are paying dividends today."

Schools and service clubs throughout the state are planning special programs for the week. The 135 sportsman's organizations affiliated in Michigan United Conservation Clubs, 100 member clubs of the Michigan Federated Garden Clubs and other public service organizations are cooperating in the sale of sheets of full color Michigan scenic and wildlife stamps, for use on mail to advertise the state.

Revenues from the stamps finance both local and statewide conservation projects. The first Michigan Conservation Week, arranged by the MUCC in 1941, was observed with enthusiasm in all counties.

MICHIGAN VOTERS TO POLLS TUESDAY

REPUBLICAN AND DEMOCRATIC TICKETS IN FIELD

Candidates Two Parties Seeking Nomination to National, State And County Offices

The Michigan fall primary election, bringing before voters Republican and Democratic candidates seeking nomination to national, state and county offices, will be held Tuesday, September 15.

While several parties have qualified, only two have candidates in the field for the primary. Voters will be presented two ballots—Republican and Democratic, stapled together at the upper left hand corner. This method eliminates expressing party preference. The voter is to take the stapled ballots apart, mark one, fold each separately, then hand both to the teller, indicating by word which is the "marked" ballot.

The Republican party has threeway contests for two major offices, while only one contest is on the Democratic ballot.

Floyd A. Supp, of Charlevoix, is seeking Republican nomination for representative in the state legislature from the Charlevoix-Leelanau district, opposing Louis E. Anderson of Northport, incumbent.

Norman D. Ance, prosecuting attorney, is opposed for his office by C. Meredith Bice, whom Ance defeated at the primaries two years ago. Only other contest on the county ballot is that of road commissioner, sought by John H. Parker and Lyle B. Wangeman of Boyne City, and Peter J. Winnick of Charlevoix.

Following is the complete list of candidates in all ballots, the name preceded by (*) being the present office holder:

COUNTY PICNIC A FINE AFFAIR

ATTENDANCE AND EXHIBITS SET HIGH RECORD

Outstanding Entertainment Program; First Place Contest Winners Are Announced

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

The 20th annual Charlevoix county picnic was held Labor Day with the largest attendance and the greatest number of exhibits ever displayed at Whiting Park.

The entire east end of the grounds was occupied by various 4-H club exhibits, featured by a hundred individual exhibits of Victory garden products by as many club members. The canning and food preparation exhibits were artistically arranged and made a most attractive display. Approximately 30 dairy animals were exhibited in the dairy club competition.

For the first time two departments were developed for adults. The vegetable department attracted 44 exhibits. Practically everything grown in the garden was displayed. The quality of the exhibits has never been excelled. Also worthy of recognition was the flower show that attracted the attendance of many lovers of flowers. They were beautifully arranged and added color to the entire picnic.

The afternoon program started shortly after 1 o'clock with running races for the fun-loving youngsters. Following this a "Victory Garden" program was held with Edwin K. Rueling, of East Jordan, presenting awards to 16 outstanding gardners in the coun-

FISH REARING PROGRAM COMPLETED

NEARLY ONE MILLION LAKE TROUT ARE RELEASED

Fishermen, Fish and Wildlife Service and Conservation Dept. Cooperate in Project

Completion of planting operations by Patrol No. 1 of the department of conservation has brought to a successful conclusion another project of raising lake trout to advanced fingerling stage at the Charlevoix federal hatchery.

The eggs, taken by commercial fishermen during the 1941 spawning season last fall, were hatched at Oden state hatchery and early this spring were transferred to the Charlevoix hatchery in the advanced fry stage. Since the transfer a system of feeding was carried out until the fish reached a size of between 2 1-2 and 4 inches.

It is estimated 860,000 fish were planted. Running 3.9 pounds in weight per thousand, this year's fish were somewhat smaller than last year and the plant compares to 990,000 made a year ago. The smaller size, it is believed, resulted from a change in the type of food used during the rearing period.

Plantings at Gull Island, Whiskey and Big reefs, Beaver Island head, Fisherman's Island, North Point, Dahlin Shoals, Big Rock Point, Grand Traverse Bay, Manitou Island, Good Hart, Cathead Point and Four Mile Point, were as nearly as possible on the grounds where the spawn was originally taken. A planting of 50,000 was made in Lake Charlevoix.

The whole program has been made possible by the wholehearted cooperation of the fishermen in taking the spawn, officials of the Fish and Wildlife Service, the state hatchery at Oden and in the final planting by the Department of Conservation patrol boat.

Lige Geer, hatchery superintendent, was highly complimented by Federal Fish and Wild Life Service officials on the success of the program and also on the fine condition of the hatchery property here.

DUCK HUNTERS NEED CONSULT TIME TABLE

Schedules Will Be Mailed by Conservation Department

Waterfowl hunters will have more than twice as many occasions to consult a time-table on the lakes and marshes this fall, since sunset as well as sunrise shooting in the 10-day longer season will be governed by the conservation department's official schedule when weather conditions are such that the sun's rising and setting is not clearly evident. The schedules are now available by mail.

For the eastern edge of Michigan the sunrise hour changes from 7:23 a. m. September 26 to 8:48 a.m. December 4, while the sunset time shifts from 7:24 p. m. on opening day to 5:56 p. m. on the last date.

In the extreme western part of the state the "shooting day" runs from 7:51 a. m. to 7:52 p. m. on opening day, but shrinks until it is 9:26 a. m. to 6:13 p. m. on December 4—nearly three hours and a quarter less.

Well, the 1942 trout fishing season is now a pleasant memory. "Cy" Marshall reported 10 the closing day. Dent Newville went to sleep in his boat over on Hoffman lake, lost his minnow pail and, for lack of bait, had to come home empty-handed. Guy Pearl took several nice browns on the Bear river near Clarion. Talked with numerous other fellows who closed the season without results. As for myself, I let the closing week end get by without wetting a line. Must either be getting slightly balmy or else sensible, because I put in the last two days working in order to fool the wolf next winter. That's the way life goes, though, and, being pretty much of an optimist, am already figuring on making up for lost time next year.

Trout fishing wasn't the greatest attraction over the week end, either. As proof, there's that 5½-pound smallmouth bass that Jasper Lupo, pal of Andy Grillo, caught in Round lake Monday. It sure was a whopper! And then "Cap" Oscar Smith showed the boys there's bass to be caught in Lake Michigan if you know the right spot. He had on display the limit of smallmouth taken off South Point. Bet that'll start something, too.

Labor Day may unofficially mark the close of the summer resort season, but there are still many of our familiar summer residents still with us.

And the holiday week end—final one for the summer season—drew a capacity crowd of vacationists into Northern Michigan resort areas. There were few tourists across the straits in comparison with other years, I understand, but lower peninsula communities generally report an overflow. The hotels had fine weekend patronage, rooming places and tourist cabin camps were filled to capacity, restaurants did a bang-up business and trolling camps throughout the region couldn't come anywhere near providing for demands.

LANSING LETTER

Apathy of Republican voters, abetted by unusual circumstances, may result in the nomination next Tuesday of a political bogey-man, Gerald L. K. Smith, for United States senate.

It may also assure the re-election of Senator Prentiss M. Brown, Democrat who enjoys considerable popularity, by the biggest vote ever polled by a candidate of the party.

This is not isolated opinion.

It is the belief of competent Detroit newspapermen with whom this writer talked recently. And it has been the theme of editorials in Detroit and upstate newspapers. Let's see how the logic goes.

The circumstances are these:

1. Opposition to Smith is divided between two candidates—Elton R. Enton of Plymouth and Judge Homer Ferguson of Detroit.

2. War is causing an eclipse of the primary. Many men are in military service. A light vote is indicated.

3. Since the Democratic nomi-nee is uncontested, Democrats may vote in the Republican primary.

4. This is an "emotional" year. Pent-up sentiments may dominate.

The predicament of Michigan Republicans, caused by the entry of the former Huey Long, lieutenant of Louisiana into Michigan politics, is bringing much pleasure to Democrats.

Since the Frank Murphy administration when the legislature amended the state's primary law, voters may cross party lines to support candidates.

Senator Brown is unopposed. The Detroit News makes this deduction: "Smith will get just as many Democratic votes as that party's organization can swing into the Republican primary. His nomination is seen as guaranteeing Senator Brown the biggest election majority a Democrat ever has polled here, not excepting President Roosevelt."

Funny business, politics. That's

The GHOST PLANE by ARTHUR STRINGER

THE STORY SO FAR: Because Norland Airways needs the money Alan Slade agrees to fly a "scientist" named Frayne and his partner, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds Slade's partner, Cruger, buys a Lockheed plane, which is stolen while Slade is away. When he returns he starts out to recover the plane. He is being aided by an eskimo named Umanak and by two old prospectors, Zeke and Minty. Acting on a hunch Slade goes to Frayne's camp, where he discovers that the missing plane is being used by Frayne to take something out of the country. Slim Tumstead, an outcast pilot, is flying for him. When Slade attempts to examine the plane's cargo he is knocked unconscious by Karnell. He is "rescued" by Tumstead but later abandoned by him on a deserted island. Zeke and Minty find Slade's plane near Frayne's camp and, after a gun battle with Frayne's crowd, return to guard it. Now Slade is making preparations for his escape to the mainland.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XV

It was not long before he had firewood awaiting his lighter. And by the time he had gathered wood and dry moss and feathered his cave floor with spruce branches his joints felt rusty and his movements slowed down. He ate an inch of his chocolate, added wood to the fire, and crawled into his cave, where he nested down in his bed of spruce needles and moss. There quick wave after wave of utter weariness wiped memory from his mind.

The fire was out and the sun was up when he wakened. He emerged from his smother of moss and sat up, refreshed by his sleep.

Having breakfasted with studious frugality, he realized that he must widen his margin of safety in the matter of food supplies for the future. His one possibility there, he felt, would be fish from the lake.

But his first tries were fruitless. Then it came home to him that in his haste he had resorted to water too shallow for his purposes. So he wound up his line and rounded the island until he came to a more promising pool.

In five minutes he had hooked a fish heavy enough to threaten his pole. He stood a little drunk when it finally lay on the rock ledge beside him.

For that gasping white body meant more than a meal to him. It meant life; it meant hope; it meant final deliverance from a prison of hunger.

For he had decided to effect his escape to the mainland. It was, he felt, his only hope.

While his first need would be a reserve of food, the one thing essential to his escape was a raft. As Tumstead must have figured out, his prisoner would be without strength for a three-mile swim in cold northern water. Even though he survived that swim, to land sodden and exhausted on an inhospitable shore, without fire and ample food, would be to invite disaster. On his island stood no timber of consequence. But, spindling as they were, he could collect and trim enough spruce poles to make a raft capable of carrying his provisions and keeping his lighter and his clothing dry. It would not be substantial enough to sustain his own weight. But he could strip and push it ahead of him as he swam.

That day and the next day and the day that followed were crowded with toil. The early morning hour of the day he gave to catching fish, which he later dressed and smoked and stowed away on his starchigan. He fished again in the evening, at an hour when his strikes proved most frequent. At mid-afternoon, when the sun had warmed the shallows, he dug and washed his bulrush roots. When that was done he gathered firewood. And when that was done he turned to digging spruce roots, which he patiently knotted and braided into lengths of wattap. From them, with equal patience, he wove a muskamoot, which could hang from his shoulders like a musette-bag and hold secure his possessions and a quantity of food.

The next morning Slade made ready for his trek. He had chosen mid-day as the best hour for pushing off, since the surface water by that time would have lost a little of its chill and plenty of daylight would remain, at the end of his journey, to find a suitable campsite and get settled for the night.

The water was colder than he had expected. This prompted him to throw more vigor into his arm strokes. But half a mile from shore he found an ache of fatigue creeping into his muscles. That frightened him a little. He leaned on the raft end and rested.

He looked about, to place his landmark, knowing that he must keep active, that he must keep blood coursing through his chilled limbs, that he must push on to the end. He was within a mile of his goal. He thought of a hot campfire, with flames bursting through spruce logs piled high.

Then all such thoughts abruptly ended. For out of the blue that arched above him he heard a far-off and familiar drone. It was a drone that grew louder as he listened and became shot through with a throb of power and mounted almost to a roar. High in the sky above the serrated ridge-tops he saw a plane.

Slade waved and shouted.

But the wings neither dipped nor banked.

Slade started swimming again, in a cold fury of defeat. Something not unlike indignation gave strength to his strokes as he fought his desperate way forward. He kept on refusing to recognize the claws of pain that tore at his entrails or the weariness that made his breath come in quick and shuddering gasps. He kept on until his raft end grounded on a sandspit and he stumbled ashore and threw himself full length along a sun-warmed slope.

"I don't like this," said the Flying Padre, after he and his feather-clad daughter had dropped down on Iviuk Inlet to learn that Umanak had not returned from his overland trip to Echo Harbor.

"Umanak knows his way about," said Lynn. "What worries me is that we've had no word from Alan."

"Why should that worry you?" asked the Padre.

"Because he should have been back before this," protested the girl in dungarees. . "I hate to think of him in country where he's so out of reach of help."

"What devil-bird take to deep-water cave."

But Lynn at this point intervened. She came running from the plane with her coffee thermos and a generous portion of their emergency rations.

"He's weak from hunger," she contended. "He must take some of this before he talks."

Umanak squatted on the shingle slope and ate like a hungry wolf. Then, grunting with satisfaction, he reached into the pouch of his worn and patched kooletah and produced a fragment of velvet-black mineral with a pitch-like luster.

"That um," he announced.

The Flying Padre took the fragment and turned it over in his hands. He noted its heaviness and compactness, its suggestion of octahedron cleavage with faint tinges of brown and green.

"Why, this is pitchblende," he said. "It's what we're getting our radium from these days."

"But why should pitchblende be flown to Echo Harbor?" asked Lynn as she studied the lustrous mineral. "Who'd want it for radium there?"

"That's what I don't understand," said the man of medicine. He turned to question Umanak.

"Just where and how did you find this?"

"Me find um in cave," Umanak repeated. "In cave where water make deep harbor behind island. Heap big black stones piled there. Black stones like that," he insisted, pointing to the pitchblende.

"How big heap?" questioned the other.

"More big than two, three black whale. Big heap hide there next to sea. Maybe ship come and take black stones away."

"But why?" demanded the puzzled Padre.

Umanak had no answer for that. He was more interested, at the moment, in reaching for another handful of Lynn's dried beef.

The Flying Padre suddenly turned to him.

"Did you see your ghost plane when you were out there?"

"No see," answered Umanak.

Lynn took her turn at once more inspecting the lustrous fragment of mineral.

"Is there any other use for pitchblende?" she inquired.

"Yes," was the meditative answer. "It's our best source of helium gas now. But what good would helium be to anyone in this wilderness?"

"What good is it in other parts of the world?"

The Flying Padre considered that question.

"The American Navy uses it in their dirigibles. And the Germans, when they could get it, used it in their Zepps. But the States refused to release a stock to Hitler's airmen when we couldn't get a guarantee it wasn't going to be used for war purposes. So our German friends fell back on hydrogen, you may remember. Helium, you see, isn't inflammable."

"But they're so far away from our pitchblende," Lynn objected. "They would have no way, now, of getting it to their chemical plants."

"Chemical plants," echoed the man of medicine as his brow creased with thought.

"Wait a minute," was the cry that came from the Padre's lips. "We're overlooking something." He took the black stone from Lynn. "You get more than helium from this stuff. You get more than radium. You get uranium, uranium that has a flow of atomic energy five million times greater than what you'd get by burning coal. And supposing Alan's right in his claim that this is going to be harnessed and controlled and his U-235 is going to be a new power, a power a billion times stronger than anything known? And supposing Hitler has ordered a blitzkrieg of research in his home laboratories and they're a jump or two ahead of us in splitting the uranium atom? That would give him an explosive three hundred times stronger than TNT and a battleship

● TIRE SWITCHING is a common sense practice at any time. Now it's vitally important. It's the very basis of longest life for your set of tires. For no two tires will wear at the same rate on your car, and your hope is to keep them all in service. But do you know when to switch tires . . . and to which position?

Have your Standard Oil Dealer supply the right answer with his new wartime method of switching tires. He will "gauge" your tires with a special measuring instrument, Standard Oil Dealers' Tire Mileage Gauge. Then he will place each tire where it will give the most service. Have this repeated every 2500 to 5000 miles (older tires at 2500) to get maximum mileage from the set.

TANKS FOR NOT TELEPHONING

It takes a lot of telephoning to keep war plants humming. And today, that's the big job. War calls must go through. It may take the same amount of Long Distance equipment to make a personal call as it does to rush through an order for tank parts. That's why every telephone call you do not make is a contribution to the war effort. That is especially true of calls to the places listed at the right.

In normal times, we'd get busy and build sufficient additional equipment to keep step with needs. But right now that is not possible. Telephone materials are more urgently needed for tanks, bombers and machines of war.

Here are three simple ways you can help make the most of available equipment and keep vital messages moving:

1. Make only the most essential Long Distance calls, and especially avoid the crowded lines listed at the right.
2. Keep ALL your conversations as brief as you can.
3. When possible, give the number of the distant telephone you are calling.

Remember the war every time you pick up the telephone. Keep your calls as short as possible. Don't ask Information for numbers listed in the directory. You can help save wires for war!

WOODEN TIRES

Another solution for the tire problems turns up in Rochester, N. Y. An ingenious old gentleman named Ernest G. Munck has produced a wooden wheel which, although it rumbles on a brick pavement, is said to "purr like a pneumatic tire on a macadam road," and to take corners smoothly. He produced the tire for use as a "spare" but thinks a full set would work all right, and would probably stand up for 10,000 miles, at a speed of 20 to 25 miles an hour, with a maximum of 40 miles.

Unfortunately, though, this wheel seems pretty hefty for an ordinary car or driver. It weighs 62 pounds. Wheel and tire are one unit, the combination consisting of layers of strong, light wood, cemented together with waterproof glue and forming a plywood equally strong in all directions. Such a tire might come to serve well enough, in the hard days coming, if the weight could be brought down for easier handling.

About 1300 tuberculosis germs, placed end to end, would just about cross the head of a pin. Yet they kill 60,000 persons in the United States each year.

NO SHORTAGE HUNTING FIREARMS SEEN

Only Few Models Have Been "Frozen"; Shells Plentiful

Michigan sportsmen, worried about the availability of hunting arms and ammunition for the 1942 season, are assured by the Michigan Retail Hardware Dealers' Association that only a few models of hunting arms have been "frozen" and that shotgun hunters will have no difficulty securing shells.

Only the following pistols, guns and rifles are now not available to be sold: Harrington and Richardson .22 caliber "Sportsman" revolver; all Colt, Smith and Wesson or High Standard Manufacturing Company pistols; all 12-gauge shotguns; all 16-gauge automatic or pump; Mossberg Model 42-B; Mossberg Repeater 42-MB; Winchester 75 Target; Winchester G-6941-R; Remington Model 513; Remington Model 511; Stevens Model 416-2; Savage Model 33; and Sears Roebuck Ranger-Target Model. Sportsmen are assured that they may secure all other model arms providing that the dealer has them in stock or can secure them.

Most double barrel shotguns are now completely "sold out" although there is said to be still a supply of single barrel guns. Rifles of practically every caliber except those banned still may be obtained at sporting goods counters through the state.

Hunters will have no difficulty obtaining shotgun shells this fall but probably will have trouble obtaining shells for the more popular caliber deer hunting rifles.

MARINE RECRUITING AT TRAVERSE CITY

Want Michigan Unit to Replace Wake Island Defenders

Captain Charles Popp, marine corps recruiting officer for Michigan, announced today that Headquarters, Marine Corps, had authorized the enlistment of a group of Michigan men to replace the world famous defenders of Wake Island.

To be known as Michigan's Wake Island Marines, young men between the ages of 17 to 36 will be drawn from all parts of the state and enlisted immediately. Headquarters, Marine Corps, in granting authority for this mass enlistment, made one stipulation, however. All applicants for this combat unit must make application prior to the 15th of September. Accepted marines will be sworn in for active duty on the stage of the Michigan Theatre, Detroit, on the night of the 17th and transferred immediately by special train from Detroit to San Diego, Calif., where those marines will undergo basic training.

Applications for this combat unit are being accepted at all marine corps recruiting stations throughout the state.

According to the recruiting officer, this is the first time authority has been granted for the enlistment of such a large group of men in the marine corps which may be kept together throughout their military service.

DRAFT BOARD REPORTS TWO MORE DELINQUENTS

Fay C. Davis, clerk of the Charlevoix county draft board, has released for publication the names of Ole Nelson, of Clarion, and Peter Khata, of Charlevoix, as delinquents for failure to report change of address. The two men have been given until September 18 to report and prevent their cases being turned over to the F. B. I.

AAA PROGRAM IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

As the war progresses it becomes very evident that the United States forces need added man power in every branch of the service. Munitions of war alone, or food alone, cannot win without the men to make effective use of them. It seems very hard for us farmers to understand how we can be asked for extra production and then have our sons drafted away just in the rush of harvest time. But, whatever happens, we must win the war, or our life will not be worth living anywhere in this world. The farmer has more than done what has been asked of them in added production, despite labor shortages, and more consideration should be shown. At the same time, we should exert our fullest efforts despite our handicaps.

In England on one farm of about 20 acres there were fifty-two bomb craters, some of them big enough to swallow a house, so said Mr. Flood of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, who was in England recently, yet farming is going on with no let-up. Level fields are studded with posts to prevent landing of invasion planes. But farmers are working stubbornly around such obstructions to get production. They are getting it, too, 50 percent more than before. Their labor shortage is more severe than ours. What they are doing, we should be able to do—and will.

Elections for the 1943 AAA committees will be on the 18th and 19th of this month. Meeting places will be announced later.

The next radio broadcast of the Charlevoix AAA county committee will be on September 16th over station WTCM at 1:15 p. m.

EXPECT MILKWEED POD HARVEST THIS WEEK

Pickers May Obtain Bags at Boyne City or Petoskey

From all indications, milkweed pods will be ready to harvest during the coming week, state officials of the Milkweed Floss Corporation, following a check-up of the various sections during the past week.

Pods are still green, and it was found that while seeds in some instances were turning from green to gray and white only a few cases were noted where they had started to turn brown and then only a few seeds in a pod. Seeds must be brown before pods are ready to pick and harvesters are cautioned to check their acreage carefully before picking.

To accommodate harvesters in this area, bags are now available at the county agricultural agent's office in Boyne City, or Preston Feather & Sons warehouse in Petoskey. Instruction sheets as to handling will also be given out when bags are secured.

Pod yield runs about 20 bushels to the acre on good stands and 20 pounds to the bushel. About 10 pounds of pods are placed in each of the special harvesting bags. This fills the sack about three-quarters full and allows for air circulation in drying. Persons who have not filed survey sheets, but still wish to take part in the program, may do so at this time by contacting their Triple A office, county agricultural agent, or bag distribution center at once.

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

From Your Congressman
Fred Bradley
11th District, Michigan

In the prosecution of our war production effort, we are constantly being reminded that we face shortages of critical materials, shortages of iron and steel, shortages of rubber and various other commodities. Many people are inclined to criticize Congress for past policies which did not look far enough into the future, and have blamed the Congress for failing to adopt preventive measures which would have, perhaps, made these shortages an impossibility.

I have previously discussed in this column the rubber shortage and the reasons therefor. Today I propose to discuss the serious question of the shortage of steel and iron scrap. Much criticism is directed at Congress for permitting huge shipments of scrap to Japan over a period of years prior to Pearl Harbor. Let us see from the record whether the Congress alone is to blame.

Japan begnn her undeclared war of aggression against China in 1937. There was, of course, no justification for our refusing shipments of scrap to Japan prior to that time. However, the Congress did view with increasing alarm huge shipments of iron and steel scrap to Japan thereafter, especially the huge increase in 1939. These exports are quoted from Department of Commerce figures:

1937 -1,873,000 tons $37,418,000
1938 -1,366,000 tons $21,685,000
1939 -2,035,000 tons $32,732,000
1940 - 963,000 tons $17,082,000

Totalling these figures we see that between 1936 and 1940, while Japan was not only fighting her war of aggression in China, but as we now know was building a powerful war machine to wage an aggressive war throughout the entire Western Pacific, seeking to establish a huge Japanese Empire, we were foolish enough to sell her 7,247,000 tons of scrap for a total revenue to our scrap dealers of $120,814,006.

In the 75th Congress, back in 1937 and 1938, ten separate measures were introduced in the House seeking to control, restrict, or forbid the further exports of iron and steel scrap to Japan. These various bills and resolutions were referred to several committees of the House, and in not one single instance were these Administration-controlled committees permitted to take any action. In addition two measures were introduced in the Senate but also here the committees were not permitted to take action.

In the first session of the 76th Congress—between January 3rd and August 5th, 1939, five bills were introduced in the House for the purpose of restricting scrap shipments to Japan. Two bills were introduced in the Senate; one by the late Senator Pittman (D. of Nev.) which authorized the President to forbid the export of specified war materials (specifically including iron and steel scrap) whenever he found that any signatory of the Nine Power Treaty "was endangering the lives of American citizens or depriving them of their lawful rights and privileges." Senator Schwellenbach of Washington also introduced a resolution, somewhat wider in scope than that of Senator Pittman, but according to plan, no action was permitted on either of these bills.

During the period from Japan's invasion of China, public opinion had been rapidly growing in favor of restricting exports of war materials to Japan especially iron and steel scrap. However, when leaders in Congress looked to the White House for the green light to go ahead with restrictive legislation, that green light was not forthcoming. Conditions at home and abroad apparently led the Administration to believe that except for the abrogation of the Commercial Treaty with Japan, a general policy of appeasement would be followed. This Commercial Treaty with Japan, which had been in existence since 1911, was denounced by Secretary Hull on July 26, 1939. It could not expire, however, until January 26, 1940, because six months notice had to be given. The abrogation of this Treaty, however, on January 26, 1940, then left us free to lay embargoes on iron and steel scrap or anything else.

Late in February 1940, limited action was taken on the Pittman and Schwellenbach resolutions. In the meantime, two new measures designed to control exports of iron and steel scrap had been introduced in the third session of the 76th Congress. One by Representative Smith (D. of Conn.) was amended and reported out by the House Military Affairs committee, but upon which the House itself did not act prior to the end of that Congress. Another bill, offered in the Senate, was pigeonholed in the Senate Military Affairs committee.

Finally, however, the chairman of the House Military Affairs committee, Mr. May, introduced a bill which originally had for its general purposes the strengthening of our national defense and contained no mention of export control. As such, it was reported out of committee, passed the House on May 24th, was completely rewritten in the Senate and signed by the President on July 2, 1940. It left the entire restriction of exports of war materials in the hands of the President and so on July 20, 1940, the President through proclamation put No. 1 iron and steel scrap under export control and, incidentally, such other commodities of considerable interest to Japan, such as petroleum products.

The fact remains, however, that iron and steel scrap, as well as petroleum products, were still being shipped to Japan under easily secured export permits, in fact some were on the high seas on the very morning of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

In conclusion, it appears a definite fact that the criticism levelled at the Congress by some apparently misinformed individuals, charging that it is the Congress which is responsible for our present shortage of iron and steel scrap due to permitting shipments to Japan, are entirely unfounded and unjust.

The indisputable fact remains, that we are faced with a huge shortage of iron and steel scrap at this time and it is the patriotic duty of everyone to turn in to his local scrap collector every possible pound of iron and steel scrap which he can find.

Sportsmen should observe the hours listed by weeks for the meridian line directly to the east of their shooting ground.

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

Meat will appear less frequently on our tables during the coming year, though the amount we'll get—2 1-2 pounds per person per week—is about the average consumption for the past 10 years. This is well above the one pound a week the Englishmen gets, the 12 ounces per week allowed Germans or the 5 ounces available for half-starved Belgians.

Our total meat supply is the largest on record, the output for the present marketing year adding up to more than 24 billion pounds. But because of the needs of our fighting forces and our allies, this will be 3 billion pounds short of the estimated needs.

It will take at least four months to set up the machinery for meat rationing. Meantime, Americans are urged to conserve meat.

Share and Share Alike

The war Production Board plan under which bicycles are being made is interesting because it is the first example of 'concentrated' production which will be applied to other articles.

Last year's bicycle production averaged about 150,000 a month. This has been steadily reduced until it now is 10,000 monthly—with the Army, Navy, Maritime commission, War shipping administration and Lend-Lense having first call on these.

Only the Victory model will be manufactured, a light machine that uses a scant amount of critical materials. Only 2 of the 12 bicycle factories will make bicycles, the other 10 already have been converted to war work.

Streamlining for Victory

War needs are like ten-pins. A "strike" from one direction sets in motion a whole series of effects in like, or even unlike, fields. The drain on our oil fuel supply, for instance, has affected the demand for artificial gas to such an extent as to require restriction of gas supplied to new industrial and domestic users.

Yet, despite the increasing demand for gas, drilling of wells in the natural gas fields has been halted to save materials.

Unity, Sacrifice, Victory

The Bureau of Mines will build the first pilot plant for making sponge iron, a substitute for scrap iron in the manufacture of steel. In spite of the millions of pounds of scrap turned in through salvage campaigns, the supply is below the pressing needs of the steel industry.

Government control of the size and cut of women's clothes will save about 100 million yards of cloth a year but housewives can save still more by choosing practical wartime styles—and by taking care of the clothes they have.

There are too few carpenters in the U. S. A. to handle war construction. This has led to an apprentice training program under the joint auspices of the National Building Contractors and the Carpenters International Union—

CULL TREES MAKE WOOD FOR WINTER

Michigan's woodlots contain enough cull trees for a two-year fuel supply for farm and small town homes, reports P. A. Herbert, head of the Michigan State College forestry department.

He suggests use of such wood for heating and cooking as a war measure to lower the amount of transportation needed in carrying coal from the mines.

Cutting of this fuel should be of the improvement type of cutting, says Professor Herbert. In fact, fuel wood can be obtained in immense quantity without damaging stands of affecting their productive ability. Decayed, defective or otherwise undesirable trees should go into the fuel pile.

Winter needs can be estimated now and a start made toward laying up a supply. Trees cut now will begin drying out to make better kindling and chunks for the winter heating period.

Wood offers advantages over coal. When properly burned, wood produces little smoke or soot and is relatively free from dust. A cord of hardwood leaves only about 60 pounds of ashes, suitable for use as fertilizer. A ten of hard coal can be counted on to make 200 to 300 pounds of ashes.

APPLES NAMES A VICTORY FOOD

Selection by the federal agricultural marketing administration of apples as the Victory food special for the period of Sept. 17 to 26 gives Michigan housewives an opportunity to put health and economy into special dishes during that period, according to claims of the home economics extension service at Michigan State College.

Fresh apples are to be featured by retailers. Many households will get their supply from backyard trees, small farm orchards or other nearby sources.

Apple pies, apple dumplings, apple upside down cake, apples in salad and apples eaten "out of the hand" will get recognition during the special period.

Here's a recipe for apple turnovers:

Any cook who can turn out a good pastry dough can prepare a batch of apple turnovers. Dough rounds about the size of a large saucer are rolled out. On half of the dough the cook arranges layers of thinly sliced apples, sprinkled with a mixture of sugar, cinnamon and a little salt and a few dots of butter. Then the other half of the dough is laid over the top, the edges are pressed together. The crust ought to be pricked to let out steam. Baking takes about 20 minutes in a moderately hot oven of 375 to 400 degrees.

THIN OUT HERDS TO CUSHION DROP

Suggest Meat Producers Insure Future.

By PAUL L. MALONEY
(Extension Service, University of Nevada Agriculture Service.)

Culling herds of all undesirable cattle and sheep is excellent insurance against the time when there may be less demand for meat products.

By selling off the undesirable animals now, the livestock producer can realize good prices, and, when more cattle are needed, they should be bred through the introduction of high-quality sires.

The U. S. bureau of agricultural economics reports that there is an increase of more than 2,000,000 head of cattle and that the index price of beef is 125 per cent.

The question naturally arises, How can the livestock man protect himself from these extremes in the cycle of low and high prices and large and small numbers of stock? How can he prevent the calamity which has followed the rise in price and subsequent increase in numbers?

By vigorously culling the herds at this time producers will be enabled to put their financial houses in order, to get rid of their mortgages and find themselves with surplus funds.

All thinking stockmen who have gone through extremes in numbers of livestock and price cycles will advocate a straightening out of the cycle by knocking a little off the peaks and boosting up the bottom of the curve. This will prevent, to a great extent, the confusion which exists after every break in prices when there is a surplus of stock on hand.

While it is natural for stockmen to desire to keep every heifer and every cow which will produce him a calf to sell at the high prices, yet in the operation of any successful business enterprise it often requires the careful analysis of the past experience in order to make the best use of the present and future of the business.

During the first World war livestock prices skyrocketed to a very high figure; these prices encouraged the producer to expand his operations and at the same time encouraged the consumers to substitute many other cheaper, yet less desirable, foods for meat.

Lost and found columns of Tokio newspapers are crowded these days. Every time an American buys a War Bond, the Japs lose face. Buy your 10% every pay day.

From where I sit ....

by Joe Marsh

It's real puzzlin' when you stop to think about it ...

I mean the way the human race has worked out a whole set of cut-an'-dried alibis for its misdeeds and shortcomings.

• • •

Here's some others. "My alarm clock didn't go off." "I left my money in my other suit"—"I was settin' up with a sick friend."

• • •

And then the one about the two beers. Now that one is downright exasperatin'.

Because there's not a shred of truth in it.

Every once in a while I read in the papers about some ornery cuss, who never did know the meanin' of moderation, gettin' himself into trouble—

—and then protestin' that all he had to drink was "a couple of beers."

He knows it isn't true. He's just sayin' that because he knows it's "a couple of beers" sounds moderate and sensible-like—and it is.

Personally, I don't ever remember seein' a couple of glasses of good beer, enjoyed among friends, hurt any normal, sensible person.

If you won't get in trouble without beer, you aren't going to get in trouble with it.

Matter of fact, it's been my observation right along that a friendly glass of beer in pleasant societibility leads to just the opposite of trouble.

It goes along, seems to me, with good companionship, and moderation, and tolerance for the other fellow.

• • •

Yes, sir, from where I sit, it looks like the fellow that goes and gets himself in trouble, and then blames it all on a "couple of beers" isn't really foolin' anybody.

But he is bein' mighty mean and unfair to the people that enjoy the right to a sensible moderate drink like beer—yes, includin' "a couple of beers."

Norman Ance was the hero of a sailboat accident on Lake Charlevoix, Monday, when a sudden squall struck his boat in which Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Rockwell and their four children, of the Belvedere Club, were passengers. The mast was wrenched loose and dropped through the bottom, the boat filled with water. Norman rescued Mr. Rockwell and one of his sons, who were swept overboard, then swam a mile to Sequanota for help. A passing craft picked up occupants of the boat.

MICHIGAN COUNCIL OF DEFENSE
Michigan War Week

Under Secretary of War to Spend Two Busy Days in State

Lansing,—Robert P. Pattorson, Under Secretary of War, will spend two event-packed days in Michigan, Sept. 12 and 13, when he will inspect industrial and transportation facilities in the heart of the arsenal of democracy.

He is coming to Michigan at the invitation of Gov. Van Wagoner, and during his two-day stay he will visit both the upper and lower peninsulas. County and local councils are cooperating in planning a full program under direction of the Michigan Council of Defense.

Judge Patterson will arrive in Detroit early Sept. 12 and will immediately inspect the defense highway system serving the Ford bomber plant at Willow Run. He will dedicate the access road system at the tri-level highway grade separation adjacent to the bomber plant and will make a tour of the plant, where he will address a mass meeting of the workers. At luncheon, he will be the guest of the Ford Motor Co.

He will fly to Muskegon in the afternoon to participate in the western Michigan War Production Day events arranged by the Muskegon County Council with the help of other western Michigan councils. The under secretary, with Governor Van Wagoner and other officials, will review a big civic parade and will speak at a meeting of munition manufacturers and a mass meeting of workers.

Sunday morning, Judge Patterson and his party will inspect the Soo locks and ship canal and the ore docks at Escanaba. He will then fly to Marquette en route to Negaunee. At Negaunee, he will participate in the Upper Peninsula Production Day program, sponsored by the Negaunee Council of Defense. The program includes a civic parade in which troops from Fort Brady will participate and a mass meeting of miners at which the Under Secretary will speak.

Make First Distribution

The Michigan Council of Defense has completed distribution to every county in the state of the first consignment of "What Can I Do", the new handbook for citizens, issued by the U. S. office of Civilian Defense. The original consignment of 123,000 copies, plus 55,000 sent directly to Detroit, 6,000 to Grand Rapids and 5,000 to Flint is enough to insure that one family in seven will receive a "first edition".

Eventually approximately 1,000,000 copies will be allocated to Michigan, presenting the Council with the greatest distribution task in its history. The full consignment will make a copy available to approximately 75 per cent of the families of Michigan. Local and county councils of defense have completed organizations for the next step in the distribution of the manual, already in great demand. In some counties, local councils have arranged for booths at county fairs to assist in distribution among rural families.

The value of the pocket-size handbook is indicated by the nation-wide demand for it by millions of Americans, who are eager to volunteer for civilian war service. Special articles in national magazines and metropolitan newspapers will stimulate the demand for it.

LANSING LETTER

why Democrats may vote for a Republican candidate next Tuesday in order to assure the re-election of their own nominee!

"Colorful rabble rouser" is the title given to the Huey Long apostle by the editor of the Free Press, John S. Knight. His recent comment: "Many regular Republicans in Michigan are worried about the large attendance at the rallies being staged by that colorful rabble rouser, Gerald L. K. Smith. His nomination for United States senator in September would just about finish off the Republican party nationally."

The Lansing State Journal takes the view that Smith may be nominated in a three-way fight whereby his opponents will split the opposition and between them will get a majority of the votes cast.

"Fresh in from Louisiana and the Huey Long school, Smith could never sell himself to a majority of Michigan Republicans, but through an unwieldy device of the nomination system, he may make himself a first-class nuisance," this newspaper reports.

The Marquette Mining Journal is of the opinion that Smith's nomination "would be repugnant to a large number of its (Republican) members, and one they would not vote for. They would either not vote at all on the office for senator, or they would vote for Brown."

You can write "ditto" after this sentiment in dozens of other newspaper offices where trained editors try to appraise public opinion and to give the results impartially.

W. A. Markland, Lansing correspondent, sums it up this way: "There probably is no regular Republican who does not believe that the nomination of Smith would be a catastrophe for the party." He says that Smith's nomination and desertion of many Republicans would hinder Kelly and help Van Wagoner.

Hub M. George, another capitol correspondent, sees apathy of voters as the "election's biggest question mark."

How could a comparative stranger to Michigan, a man who has never voted in a Michigan primary election, a man whose home until a short time ago was a swank suite of rooms in one of Detroit's largest and most expensive hotels, rise from obscurity to national prominence almost over night?

First, he has built a radio following which is intensely loyal and knows no party line.

Second, he astutely promises benefits to everyone: $100 a month to servicemen, support to the Townsend Plan, tires by Christmas, friendly sympathy for Father Charles E. Coughlin, Christian Nationalism to the Protestants, equality for the farmers, and so on.

Results of next Tuesday's primary will be awaited with interest. It looks like the Republicans are in a bad fix.

AT THE MOVIES

Veronica Stars Again

Appearing in her third starring role since her start in films, Veronica Lake is seen opposite Robert Preston in Paramount's new thriller drama, "This Gun for Hire," which arrives September 12 at the Palace theatre. Laird Cregar and Alan Ladd are featured. Veronica previously starred in "I Wanted Wings" and "Sullivan's Travels."

Kay Francis Starred

Kay Francis returned to the Warner Bros. lot, scene of her greatest triumphs, after a three-year absence to play the starring role opposite Walter Huston in "Always In My Heart," musical film which shows September 17-18 at the Palace theatre.

Kay, who used to be known as the "best dressed woman in Hollywood," and "the first siren of the screen," makes her return as the mother of a fifteen-year-old lass in "Always In My Heart."

Film Has Top Musical Score

"Stardust On the Sage," Republic's latest Gene Autry starrer coming September 19 to the Palace theatre, is nothing if not melodious! Ten popular melodies are featured.

Louise Currie has the feminine lead in "Stardust On the Sage," with Smiley Burnette, Edith Fellows, Bill Henry, George Ernest and Emmett Vogan in the supporting cast.

You can rid your mind of this second worry by using your bank. A checking account will provide safety for your money, a safe deposit box will supply many safeguards for your valuable personal property.

I've heard a lot of people express the opinion lately that any workman employed on a defense project who would strike should be put into the front line trenches forthwith. I agree with them. Statistics reveal that from January 1 through August 31, 295,734 workers ignored the pledge of labor and industry leaders not to strike. On a basis of time lost, this meant eight out of every 10,000 workers were idle. This represents a tremendous loss in vital war implements—a needless loss and inexcusable in view of the need for peak production. There should be no dilly-dallying at critical times like these. If a man does not want to work, then let him fight.

The drop in gasoline consumption in Michigan during July in a positive indication that motorists are either voluntarily restricting their driving or that car and tire rationing is automatically causing a curtailment. Michigan motorists used 22,000,000 gallons less gasoline than during the same month in 1941 and drove 326,000 000 less miles. Taking 30,000 miles as the average mileage for a tire, this decrease in travel indicates a complete saving of 10,650 new tires during July or 127,800 new tires on an annual basis.

Gas masks which came into use in warfare for the first time when the Germans used poison and mustard gas in World War I, are much improved today over those used then. The Chemical Warfare Branch of the War Department issues these gas masks to every man in the service. We are taking no chances.

The type pictured here is the "ear" and "elephant nose" mask and costs about $9.25 each. The headgear is transparent, made of material resembling cellophane and does not cloud with the breath. You can buy two of these gas masks with the purchase of an $18.75 War Bond. We need thousands of them. Don't fail to give at least ten percent of your income every pay day for War Bonds. TIRE DEALERS FILE INVENTORY REPORT

Only 2,640 of 6,800 in State Have Made Reports

All tire dealers in the Charlevoix county area who have not yet filed their quarterly inventory reports covering the period ending June 30, 1942, were urged to make their returns immediately by Fenton R. Bulow, chairman of War Price and Rationing Board No. 151.

Although extensions for return of the reports ran to August 31, Mr. Bulow said, only 2,640 of Michigan's 6,800 tire dealers had their reports returned to the state OPA office by the deadline.

All tire dealers, automobile supply companies, motor vehicle dealers and finance companies that sell or hold new or used tires and tubes for sale must file the inventory report under provisions of a recent amendment to the revised tire rationing regulation.

The amendment calls for not only an inventory statement of all unmounted tires as of June 30, but also for similar reports quarterly thereafter. These reports are to show the inventory position as of the final day of the quarter and are to be filed in duplicate on or before the 15th day of the succeeding month with the local board to be forwarded to OPA's inventory unit in New York City.

OPA form R-17, on which the report must be filed, can be obtained at local war price and rationing boards.

Following this a band concert was given by the Boyne City high school and city band. The boxing matches, six in number, offered the public everything that could be expected in boxing bouts. It might be said that it is very difficult to arrange the bouts as the majority of the local boys are already in the service. The last event of the day was the soft ball game between East Jordan Foundry and a team from Charlevoix.

We realize the public would like to know who the winners were at the county picnic. Due to the fact that space does not permit giving all the awards, we will announce the first place winners in the adult competition and the blue group winners in the 4-H club.

Garden Exhibits

PREPARE FOR AUGMENTED COMMODITY CONTROL

Offices to Be Set Up on Permanent Basis in the City Hall for Duration of War

Preparing the ground work for an augmented rationing program expected to be announced within a short time, three additional members have been named on the county War Price and Rationing board.

Fenton R. Bulow, county chairman, announces that the board has appointed and submitted to state headquarters for approval, the names of Charles Hamlin, of Charlevoix, B. C. Mellencamp, of Boyne City, and William A. Shepard, of East Jordan, as a new panel to assist in ration control. Expected to come under restriction within the next few weeks will be many items of food, wearing apparel, gasoline and fuel in addition to automobiles, tires, sugar, typewriters, bicycles and other commodities, the release of which is now governed by the rationing board.

It is anticipated that another state-wide registration will be held in the near future as a means of obtaining information required for rationing commodities above outlined.

Offices of the rationing board will be set up on a permanent basis in quarters adequate to handle all rationing for duration of the war by change in location from the court house to the community room in the Charlevoix city hall. When the change is made, now pending arrival of required office equipment, the community room will be used solely for rationing headquarters through consent of the city council.

Drastic restriction of many commodities is inevitable as the nation's war effort narrows down, Mr. Bulow warned. Likewise, machinery for handling this rationing must and is being put on a permanent, adequate basis.

Is your soldier's picture in the Central Drug store window?

The display now numbers 91, but it is estimated that at least 30 or 40 more pictures are needed to complete the roll. Bring photographs to the store and they will be placed in the window. Glass framed pictures are preferable, as the glass protects the picture from any discoloration.

Name plates attached to the pictures last week have greatly enhanced the appearance of the display. Lettering on the cardboard strips was done by Don Campbell.

'42 DUCK SEASON OPENS SATURDAY

SEVENTY DAYS SUNRISE TO SUNSET SHOOTING

One Wood Duck May be Included in Day's Bag; Limit All But Blue Geese is Reduced

First event on the sportsman's fall calendar—opening of the duck season—is scheduled at sunrise Saturday, September 26.

The shooting period this year is 70 days—10 more than last year, and every one a full day, from sunrise to sunset, under new federal fish and wildlife and state conservation department regulations. Following the extended duck season, hunting of rabbits and upland game becomes legal in the upper peninsula next Thursday, October 1st, preceding by 15 days the legal lower peninsula season opening October 15.

One wood duck will be permitted in the aggregate bag of 10, as for the first time since adoption of the migratory bird act, the open season applies to all ducks. Not more than three redheads or bufflehead, singly or in the aggregate, may be taken in any one day, the same as last year. The three-shell limit on repeating shotguns also remains in force.

The bag of geese has been reduced from three a day to two, except for the abundant blue geese, of which the hunter may take six in a day. The woodcock season remains the same as last year, October 1-15 in the upper peninsula and October 15-29 in lower Michigan.

While last year an estimated 80,000 hunters were licensed for the opening day this year's participation remains an unknown quantity in view of car and tire rationing and pending gasoline restrictions.

FOOTBALL SEASON TO OPEN SATURDAY

RAYDERS GO TO MANCELONA FOR INITIAL TILT

Light Squad to Take Field in Opener of Six-Game Schedule; Line-Up Is Announced

The opening contest of a six-game football schedule will pit Coach Ray Kipke's Charlevoix Red Rayders against Mancelona at Mancelona next Saturday afternoon.

With nearly three weeks of practice behind them, there is little to indicate the strength of the 1942 squad. The team will be extremely light with only one veteran in the backfield and seasoned players none too generously distributed in the line.

The quartette of ball-toters playing regular positions in practice are Don Carey, who last year was quarterback and is the only veteran, at one half, Gerald Chambers at the other half, Bill Rowe calling signals, and John Swanson at fullback. Swanson was a regular end last year and Chambers saw action in a few games.

In the line are Bob Beity and Lester Gallagher at ends, Bod Webster and Joe Bellinger at the tackles, Don Brown and Versil Shearer at guards, Charles Bergmann at center. Gallagher, Webster and Bellinger were regulars last fall. Reserve positions will be held, temporarily at least, by Ed. Novotny, halfback; Marvin Cross, guard; L. G. Fischer, tackle; Ken Hardy and Don Bellinger, ends.

Charlevoix's six-game schedule is confined to class C schools, with three games on the home gridiron and as many away. The five contests following the Mancelona tilt are: October 3, Boyne City there; October 10, Onaway here; October 17, East Jordan there; October 24, Harbor Springs here; October 31, Grayling here.

Mancelona will have the advantage Saturday of experience gained in one game played this season. The Antrim county team was defeated 32 to 0 by Petoskey's class B team at Petoskey last week.

FALL, WINTER PROGRAM AT ARGONNE

Parties With Band Scheduled on Thursday, Saturday Nights

W. J. Kerns, operator of The Argonne, popular local night club, has announced a curtailed program for the fall and winter months.

Wayne Belding and his All-Star band will be featured every Thursday and Saturday nights. Thursday night's program will be a big "jam" session, and a big party is scheduled for Saturday evenings.

The Argonne dining room, listed in Duncan Hine's book, "Adventures in Good Eating," and famous for steak, fish and chicken dinners, will be open at 5 p. m. and close at 11 p. m. for the winter. While Mr. Kerns stated that every effort will be made to care for regular patrons, difficulty in obtaining help has made it necessary that dinners at other hours must be by reservation.

Bomb the Japs with junk!

SHOT AT RANDOM

By KEN USHER

I hope that the inventors and scientists have in mind something that will produce wealth tomorrow as fast as war is destroying it today.

You may have noticed the lack of cars parked along Mason street beside the school this year. Tire restrictions no doubt have furnished an automatic ban on students driving to and from school.

It takes a long time to get acquainted but only a minute to fall in love, and the tragedy of many is that they fell in love before they got acquainted.

Sunday was one day out of a solid week, I believe, that it didn't rain, and Tuesday's northwester was no doubt a very good sample of the weather we can expect a few weeks hence. If you were careful to observe, snow flurries occurred several times during the day. I think we're better off than a year ago, though, for if my memory is correct, we started stoking the furnace with quite regularity after the last week in August.

Another column in this issue chronicles the death at Everett, Wash., of Mrs. Ben Nowland, a beloved resident of this community many years. In my possession is her last handwriting—a note written to me personally—but also a message to all her friends. Her daughter, Mrs. Clara Holmes, offered to write the note, but Mrs. Nowland, who had been very ill for a week and unable to write to anyone, said: "I will write to Ken myself. We are always kidding and I want him to know that I'm down—but not out." Her note follows:

"Dear Ken:

Been having a good time, but am now in Providence Hospital for a week. Awful sick. Say hello to everyone. Having the best of care. Been here a week, don't know how much longer.

Mrs. Ben Nowland."

Thus it is that this column is privileged to convey the last message of this fine woman to her friends, to whom she had endeared herself by unselfishness, neigh-

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Scrap will be king for 14 days, starting October 4.

It's the Michigan newspapers' scrap drive, a state-wide campaign endorsed by the War Production Board, the office of War Information, the State Salvage director and the Michigan Council of Defense.

Before snow flies, every available piece of scrap metal in Michigan must be collected and sent on its way. That's the "must" assignment from Uncle Sam, and Michigan newspapers intend to make good on their 1942 slogan: "All Out for Victory."

Local salvage committees, who have been on the job for many months, will be given front page support. Michigan school children are going to canvass homes—Junior Rangers with a "command" order to solicit scrap from every householder and to arrange for its placing at the curb or at a central Victory Scrap Bank.

For communities where scrap campaigns have already been held, the newspapers' drive will be a "clean-up" effort to get the last bit of metal from out of cover before winter sets in.

Millions of pounds of valuable metal, urgently needed for production of MORE tanks, MORE airplanes, and MORE shells, are going to be made available to war plants this winter.

Read your home newspaper for details!

"Don't let George do it," stated W. S. Gilmore, editor, Detroit News, who is state chairman for the scrap push. "This is the most important job Michigan can do in the next few weeks. Michigan war plants are not running at capacity, and one reason is that the steel mills cannot get enough scrap metal to make the steel that is necessary.

"Why can't the mills get the scrap metal?

"Because the farms and attics and basements and back yards in this country have millions of tons

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Jensen, Mrs. Julia Cihak and daughter, Elaine, of East Jordan, spent Saturday evening with their brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Jensen.

Pvt. Earl Hyatt, of Detroit, who is in the Canadian army in London, England, was heard in a broadcast from the American Eagle Club in London, Saturday night at 11:50. BARNARD

Silo filling has begun in our community.

Word from Carlton Smith tells us that he is recovering after his recent operation for appendicitis.

Mrs. Robert Matchett returned from Lansing last week, after spending several weeks with her daughters there.

We neglected to mention last week that Lyle and Harold Beattie of Traverse City visited relatives in this community on Sunday.

Miss Lorrita Matchett, who is nursing in Little Traverse Hospital, spent the week end at home. She was accompanied by two friends, also nurses from the same hospital.

Some of our citizens attended the farewell service at the Church of God on Sunday evening. Rev. and Mrs. Pulsipher will be greatly missed by their friends in this community.

The Ladies' Fellowship group of the Reformed Church had a very pleasant and instructive meeting at the Frank Smith home last Wednesday. Mrs. Meengs of Atwood Reformed church was guest speaker of the day. Her topic was "The Importance of Simple Things," and proved a very timely and appropriate one for all.

KILL SPUD VINES BEFORE DIGGING

Heavy prevalence of late blight threatens the marketable and storage qualities of much of Michigan's potato crop. As a war measure for adding to food stocks and as an economy measure for potato growers, the science of research and experience in fighting the blight is offered by H. C. Moore, potato specialist at Michigan State College.

Fields infected with late blight should be sprayed with a salt or copper sulphate solution a week or more before digging. Thirty pounds of copper sulphate to 100 gallons of water or 75 pounds of a cheap grade salt in 100 gallons of water makes a killing spray. The salt should be dissolved before putting in the sprayer tank. The sprayer should be cleaned thoroughly after use.

Dig after vines are dead, says Moore, to reduce chance of blight spread on tubers.

Dig on clear days. Avoid injury to tubers by driving slowly with the plow deep.

Leave potatoes on the ground one to two hours before picking up, to harden skin and reduce injury.

Pick up carefully to avoid bruising. Pick up only sound stock, leave culls and rotted tubers.

A few days before storage, spray bins with one pound copper sulphate in 10 gallons of water.

Equip bins with false ventilating walls to permit air circulation. In large piles ventilating flues should extend well above potatoes.

Keep all doors and windows open until cold weather arrives and then try to maintain temperature of 38 to 40 degrees. Pit storage should have shallow coverage until cold weather begins. Covering with potato vines is exceedingly poor practice. Clean straw is recommended, instead. Finally, says Moore, close ventilators before freezing weather.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

2nd Annual Girls Conservation Camp October 2-4

Plans are being completed to hold the second annual Girls Conservation Camp at Higgins lake on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, October 2-3-4. It is planned to have approximately fifty 4-H club girls from the four counties of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Cheboygan in attendance. Members of the State Department of Conservation and Michigan State College Extension will act as leaders and instructors.

The girls will have the opportunity of studying first hand timber estimating, log scaling, wood lot thinning, and other management practices that are desirable in conserving our woods. They will receive instruction in the various activities handled by the conservation department such as fish, game, lands and many others. Last year the girls had such a good camp they have repeatedly requested another camp. It is expected that all of the delegates will go by bus, and will return late Sunday afternoon. The delegates from Charlevoix county will represent the activity in East Jordan, Boyne Falls, and Melrose township unit. For many years the conservation members have been setting out young pine seedlings. This year it is planned to have some wood lot demonstrations. These will be held early in October. The names of those attending this camp will be published at a later date.

War Time Clothing Campaign to Start Friday, September 25th

The Federal Extension Service and Office of Price Administration have requested the County Extension Agents to take the leadership in bringing important war time information regarding clothing to all farm people as promptly as possible. The College representatives have just returned from a regional meeting in Chicago where they were given the latest information on the importance of clothing conservation in the war effort.

All women leaders of the 69 local neighborhood war clubs are requested to attend one or two meetings scheduled for Friday, September 25th. The first meeting will be held in the new Charlevoix city hall building (basement) on Friday afternoon, September 25th beginning promptly at 2:00 (war time). This meeting will be held for the convenience of the various leaders in the western end of the county. The second meeting will be held in the basement of the Boyne City library on Friday night, September 25th beginning at 8:00 p. m. Each local war club leader may attend either one of these two meetings but should arrange to be present. Representatives from the Michigan State College will be present to outline and discuss the war time situation in regard to clothing.

Please remember that next to food, clothing is the greatest war time necessity. It must be conserved!

THE HOME FRONT IN MICHIGAN

We've been only ankle deep in war.

But we're wading in—and we've met a racing tide of scarcities, through which we must fight our way to victory. Our strength against the swirling currents is the strength which lies in control—control of scarce manpower, raw materials, fuel, control of foods.

Fuel oil rationing has been ordered in 30 eastern and midwestern states, including Michigan, made necessary by tanker losses in the Atlantic. Gasoline rationing, in prospect for the entire country, serves a less direct but most vital purpose—the saving of rubber.

Every day, by unnecessary and fast driving, we have been wasting enough rubber to rebuild 200,000 tires. In some localities, principally the southwest, there is no shortage of oil and gasoline but tires are wearing out there the same as they are everywhere else—wearing out eight times faster than they can be replaced.

It will take several weeks for the office of Price Administration to work out a nationwide rationing program. In the meantime, real Americans will ration themselves, stop unnecessary driving and keep speeds down to 35 miles an hour.

Unity, Sacrifice, Action

Meat products are among the foods that are scarce because of abnormal demands. Besides the huge requirements of our fighting forces, in the last three months we have sent to our Allies millions of pounds of pork, fish, dried beef and the like.

The OPA has been given authority to ration all types of meat and meat products, except poultry, game and lard. It will be some time though before OPA is ready to ration meat at the retail level.

In preparation for rationing in many fields, new all-purpose ration books now are being printed.

Share Alike

The Home Front's dread enemy, inflation, still threatens us with high living costs as the vastly increased buying power competes for scarce goods not yet under price control.

Today, we are paying $1.35 for what was a dollar's worth of food in 1939. Prices of food not under control have risen almost 10 per cent in a three month period. Food products and services under price ceilings have shown a slight decline in the same period.

The answer is evident—more extensive price control.

We're at War—All of Us

Despite the intensive drive for scrap metal, we're still not hitting our goal, which requires a monthly average of 2,833,000 tons in order to build up the required stockpile to keep the mills running through the winter and spring. We fell 15 per cent behind in July.

Steel shipping drums have been banned for use in packing some 200 food, chemical and petroleum products. This will save 100,000 tons of steel annually. Production of metal doors, metal frames and metal shutters for both civilian and military use has been halted. The secretary of agriculture has been authorized to ration farm machinery and equipment. Steel wire as a binding for paper and wood containers has been banned.

We must have steel to win this war. We must have scrap to make steel.

For a long time now you've been saying, "What can I do to help win the war?" and "I'll do whatever I am told to do to help lick Hitler and the Japs."

Well, there's one thing everyone can do and that is to collect all the scrap metal they can find around their house or farm. It may seem like a mighty small bit but added to the little bits collected by the other 130,000,000, it will mount into guns and planes and ships.

Slap the Japs with Scrap

War expenses for the U. S. last month topped the five billion mark. More than 10 per cent of our war expenditures are for our Allies. But the lend-lease is not a one-way street. They're returning this aid in countless ways, building naval bases and airports and supplying our troops abroad.

No Special Favors!

Harry F. Kelly is considerate. He is fair-minded. He is helpful. But special favors—at taxpayers' expense—they're OUT!

You remember the low-number automobile licenses that used to go to a privileged few. They seemed harmless—but they cost the State of Michigan $90,000 a year.

As Secretary of State, Kelly instituted a UNIFORM numbering and issuing system—eliminating "trick" licenses, giving every automobile owner BETTER service, speeding check-ups by law-enforcement officers and saving taxpayers more than a quarter of a million dollars.

As GOVERNOR, HARRY F. KELLY will continue his policy:

The GHOST PLANE by ARTHUR STRINGER

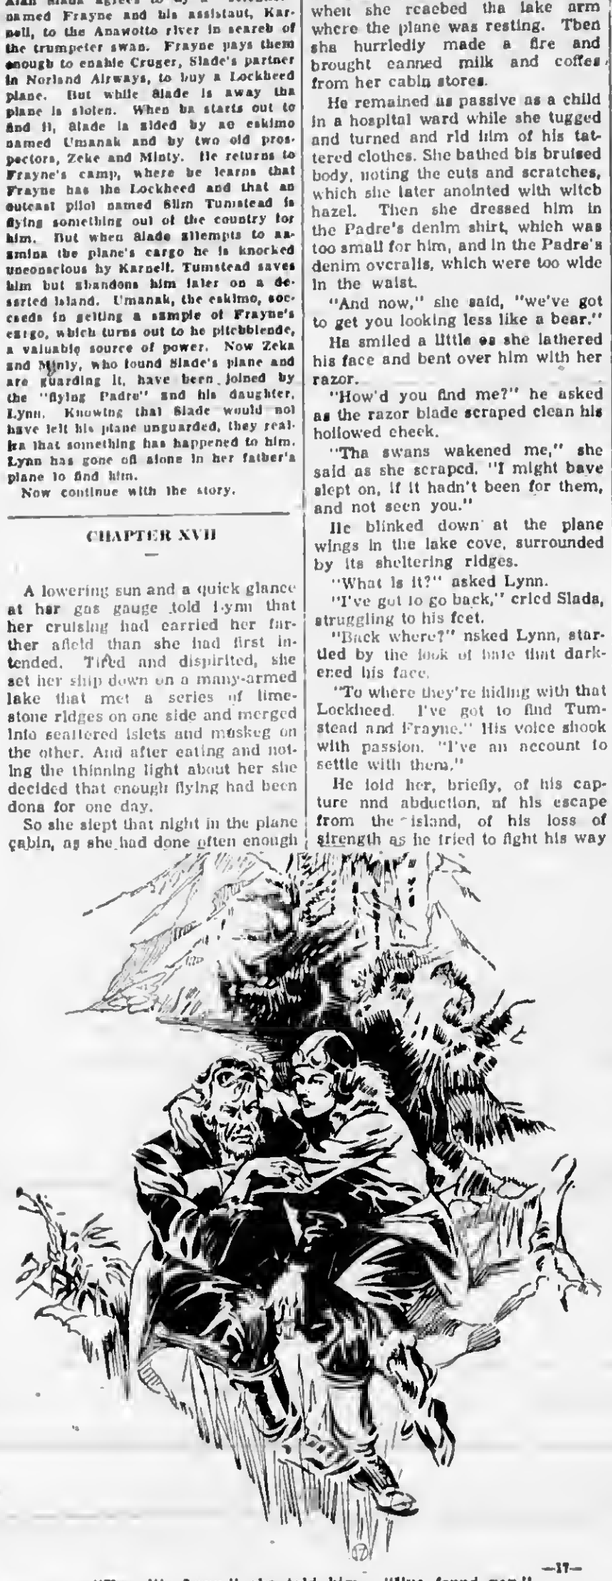
THE STORY SO FAR: Although he suspects him of being up to something, Alan Slade agrees to fly a "scientist" named Frayne and his assistant, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. Frayne pays them enough to enable Cruger, Slade's partner in Norland Airways, to buy a Lockheed plane. But while Slade is away the plane is stolen. When he starts out to find it, Slade is aided by an eskimo named Umanak and by two old prospectors, Zeke and Minty. He returns to Frayne's camp, where he learns that Frayne has the Lockheed and that an outcast pilot named Slim Tumstead is flying something out of the country for him. But when Slade attempts to examine the plane's cargo he is knocked unconscious by Karnell. Tumstead saves him but abandons him later on a deserted island. Umanak, the eskimo, succeeds in getting a sample of Frayne's cargo, which turns out to be pitchblende, a valuable source of power. Now Zeke and Minty, who found Slade's plane and are guarding it, have been joined by the "flying Padre" and his daughter, Lynn. Knowing that Slade would not have left his plane unguarded, they realize that something has happened to him. Lynn has gone off alone in her father's plane to find him.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XVII

A lowering sun and a quick glance at her gas gauge told Lynn that her cruising had carried her farther afield than she had first intended. Tired and dispirited, she set her ship down on a many-armed lake that met a series of limestone ridges on one side and merged into scattered islets and muskeg on the other. And after eating and noting the thinning light about her she decided that enough flying had been done for one day.

So she slept that night in the plane cabin, as she had done often enough



"Yes, it's Lynn," she told him. "I've found you."

before. Her sleep, for all her weariness, was both broken and troubled. When she awakened, in the gray light of morning, it was oddly like awakening to a call. She sat up and looked about, wondering as to the source of that ghostly summons.

She smiled when she heard it repeated. For what had come to her over the lake water draped with its morning mists was the echoing call of a trumpeter swan.

Lynn quietly opened the cabin-hatch and studied the lake's surface. A moment later her eyes coasted the nearer shoreline and through the scrub spruce she saw a bear crawl down to the water's edge and drink.

She thought, at first, that it was wounded, its movements were so slow and uncertain. Then the bear, with an effort, stood up on its hind legs. And the staring girl saw it was not a bear, but a man.

Lynn clambered down from the plane and hurried ashore. She coursed over gravel beds and gullies and pushed her way through a tangle of briars, her breath coming in shorter and shorter gasps as she ran. She did not call out. But gladness and anxiety swept through her in interlocking waves as she hurried on. For even before she confronted that squatting figure she knew it was Slade.

She dropped to her knees, in front of him.

"Alan," she cried.

His gaze remained empty and unresponsive.

"It's not a dream, Alan," she panted as she crowded closer to him and brushed back the tangle of hair from his face. She could see a little of the vacancy go out of his eyes.

"Lynn?" he mumbled, still incredulous.

"Yes, it's Lynn," she told him, encircling his ragged body with her arms. "I've found you."

Lynn noticed, for the first time, the gauntness of his tremulous body. She supported him as he sank to the ground, where he sat staring at his worn and battered flyer's boots.

"I lost my knife," he muttered.

"That doesn't count now," she told him. "There's food and everything we need in the plane. But I'm wondering if you can walk that far."

He laughed again, less harshly.

"I guess I could still walk a hundred miles for a meal," he said as he once more got to his feet. "It's what I've been doing . . . walking . . . walking!"

She eased him to the ground, along a slope of moss-covered rock, when she reached the lake arm where the plane was resting. Then she hurriedly made a fire and brought canned milk and coffee from her cabin stores.

He remained as passive as a child in a hospital ward while she tugged and turned and rid him of his tattered clothes. She bathed his bruised body, noting the cuts and scratches, which she later anointed with witch hazel. Then she dressed him in the Padre's denim shirt, which was too small for him, and in the Padre's denim overalls, which were too wide in the waist.

"And now," she said, "we've got to get you looking less like a bear."

He smiled a little as she lathered his face and bent over him with her razor.

"How'd you find me?" he asked as the razor blade scraped clean his hollowed cheek.

"The swans wakened me," she said as she scraped. "I might have slept on, if it hadn't been for them, and not seen you."

He blinked down at the plane wings in the lake cove, surrounded by its sheltering ridges.

"What is it?" asked Lynn.

"I've got to go back," cried Slade, struggling to his feet.

"Back where?" asked Lynn, startled by the look of hate that darkened his face.

"To where they're hiding with that Lockheed. I've got to find Tumstead and Frayne." His voice shook with passion. "I've an account to settle with them."

He told her, briefly, of his capture and abduction, of his escape from the island, of his loss of strength as he tried to fight his way down to the coast.

"And if you hadn't come," he concluded, "I'd have gone out the way they wanted me to."

"Then you mustn't go back," she maintained. "You've faced danger enough. We know what those men are now. They'll stop at nothing. And I don't want you killed."

He shook off her hand and faced her.

"Who knows what those men are?" he demanded.

She told him of Umanak's discovery and of the Flying Padre's flight that brought him to the two embattled old sourdoughs from the Kazakena.

Slade's eyes narrowed as he listened.

"Then my hunch wasn't wrong," he cried out as his face darkened with a newer hostility. He looked at the spruce ridges that stretched away to the south. Then he looked at the faded blue wings of the plane. "Let's get going," he announced with a brusqueness that brought her gaze about to his face.

"Not yet," she said, realizing how remote from her he stood in his man's world of conflict.

"What is it?" he questioned, puzzled by the intentness with which she continued to study him.

"If you go back there," she told him, "it will be like going into battle. It will—"

But he cut her short.

"It'll be battle all right," was the bark that came from his dry lips.

"We can't tell what will happen," she went on. "We can't be sure of anything. But before we go I want to be sure of one thing."

"Of what?" he asked, his eyes on the plane.

But after another look at his gaunt face, she knew there was no room for life's subtler hungers in that tired and broken body of his. And pride, coming to her rescue, kept her from answering his question.

"Let's go," was all she said as she stooped to gather up her scattered possessions.

Slade, at the controls, arrowed southward with his throttle wide open. Lynn, from time to time, was conscious of the grimness of his face. Yet she smiled as she realized that a part of his grimness was due to the assiduousness with which he was chewing dried beef as he flew. He had been hungry, she remembered, for a long time.

Then he stopped chewing and scrutinized the country under his floats. The emptier rock ridges had given way to more closely watered terrain, to a region of lakes and streams interspersed with dolorous stretches of muskeg and marshland.

"We must be getting there," he called over his shoulder as a still larger lake floated under them and was left behind.

"There should be smoke," Lynn told him. "Father said a fire would be kept going."

"Where?" asked Slade.

"Where you left your ship," she explained, already searching the blue-misted ridges before her.

But Slade was the first to catch sight of the far-off plume of signal-smoke. He could see the gray drift above the furred darkness of the spruce slopes. His jaw hardened as he changed his course a point or two and droned down on the many-armed lake that more and more took on an aspect of familiarity. His memories of that district clearly were not palatable ones.

"Where's my plane?" he demanded as they dropped lower.

"It should be here," said Lynn, busy searching the shoreline.

But it was not there. All Slade could see, after drifting into the lake arm between the ridges, was a ragged old figure with a rifle, watching them as they came. Behind him burned a huge fire of spruce boles, sending a drift of smoke up the air.

"It's Minty," cried Slade as their pontoons grounded on a gravel bar.

Lynn was the first to clamber down and hurry ashore.

"Where's Father?" she questioned.

But the ragged old sentinel with the rifle was watching the long-legged figure with the mooring gear in its hand.

"So they found you, Lindy," he exulted. "And you're back in the nick o' time, son. For there's hell let loose in these hills."

"Where's Father?" persisted Lynn.

Minty, finally conscious of her questioning, inspected her with a reproving eye.

"He's out scoutin' for you, lady. And be sure lost sleep wonderin' what'd happened to you. Where'd you find this puddle-jumper?"

"That can wait," said Slade. "What I want is that swan-hunter."

Minty spat and squared his shoulders.

"Then you've sure come to the right quarters, son," he asserted. "For he's barricaded over at that lake end o' his and he's slingin' lead at anything that comes within half a mile o' his hide-out."

"And that flyer of his, Tumstead?" questioned Slade.

"I ain't seen no flyer," answered Minty. "And I ain't seen no plane come and go. What he's tryin' to do, I'd say, is hold us off until a plane can swing in and pick him up."

Slade turned to his ragged old friend.

"Let me have that rifle," he said.

But Minty promptly backed away.

"Not on your life," he retorted. "I got use for this old girl."

He pointed toward the widening vista of muskeg country that stretched away into the north.

"Zeke's out there stalkin' that swan-hunter's side-kick. And I'm goin' to help him run down that human gorilla."

"You mean Karnell?" cried Slade.

"That's jus' who I mean, Lindy. The slinkin' louse tried to outflank us in the night. But Zeke's got him cut off from his camp-mate out there, dodgin' lead like a coyote. And I'm goin' out to back up my bunkie."

Even as he spoke the sound of a repeated rifle shot, thinned by distance, came to them.

"I'll go with you," announced Slade.

Lynn could see his gaunt face once more darken with hate. Then he turned to her.

"Stay here with the plane," he told her. He pointed to the fire. "And you'd better keep smoke showing until the Padre gets back."

She was able to forgive the peremptory note in his voice as she moved closer to him. He stopped, for a moment, to study her face. But he failed to fathom the source of her anxiety.

"You'll be safe in the plane," he told her. "If you're in doubt, or there's any threat of danger, you can take off."

"I wasn't thinking about myself," she said with reproving quietness.

"Then what's worrying you?" he asked matter-of-factly.

She caught at his sleeve.

"I don't want you to go, Alan."

His eyes remained preoccupied as he freed himself.

"Don't worry about me," he said. "I've got to go."

"But what good will it do?"

"I don't know yet," he retorted. "But Karnell tried to kill me. And I'm going to do what I can to round him up."

She knew enough of frontier life to realize there were times when women figured small in men's scheme of things. And this was another occasion, she remembered, when there was no room for tenderness in life.

"All right," she said, well-schooled in quick decisions from others. "I'll be here with the plane. When Father gets back I'll tell him which way you went."

She wanted to say more, but she knew it was useless.

"Sergeant York" to Show at Palace, Starting Saturday

In these days when folks are becoming ever increasingly American-conscious, it is fitting that the story of one of the greatest Americans of the World War should be hailed. That man is Sergeant Alvin C. York, whose amazing war feats included the capture of 132 Germans single-handed, and who was called the "greatest civilian soldier of the war" by General Pershing.

The story is vividly depicted in Warner Bros.' spectacular "Sergeant York," which will open next Saturday at the Palace Theatre, with the famous title role portrayed by the powerful actor, himself often called a "typical American," Gary Cooper.

Early reports from Hollywood and the press indicate that "Sergeant York" is more than the exciting story of a hero.

Walter Brennan, Joan Leslie, George Tobias, Stanley Ridges and a great many other film favorites comprise the splendid cast. "Sergeant York" was directed by Howard Hawks from a story by Abem Finkel, Harry Chandlee, Howard Koch and John Huston, based upon the diary of Sergeant York.

BY KEEPING telephone lines clear for war calls, you are making an important contribution to the speeding up of war production. War calls crowd the telephone lines today—especially Long Distance lines to the places listed at the right. We can't add enough new lines to handle all the increased traffic, because materials are more urgently needed to equip our fighters. But all of us can do our part by making the most efficient use of present facilities.

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN HELP

1. Make only the most essential Long Distance calls, and avoid these crowded lines especially.
2. Keep all your conversations as brief as you can.
3. When possible, give the number of the distant telephone you are calling.

And please don't call Information for a number when it's listed in the directory. The telephone calls you save help speed delivery of the weapons our soldiers need!

RATION FUEL OIL BY 15TH OCTOBER

Michigan Included in 30 States Covered by Order

Persons residing in 30 eastern and midwestern states are faced with the alternative of converting oil buring furnaces to coal burners or cutting fuel consumption as the result of an order providing fur fuel oil rationing.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson gave the following details of the fuel rationing program:

1. The program will start September 30, and machinery for handling coupons will be set up by October 15.

2. Rationing boards will decide how much fuel is needed for each home owner during the winter season, based on the 65 degree maximum temperature, and issue him coupons to purchase the entire allotment less the amount of oil he already has in his tanks.

3. Purchases between September 30 and the date coupons are issued will be compensated for by tearing coupons from the consumer's books.

4. Local boards will be allowed to make exceptions to the 65 degree temperature rule "to prevent actual suffering in cases where householders lack the financial means to make needed improvements or where sickness or other factors are involved."

Specific allowances would be based on the 65 degree average, past consumption, the amount of floor space in the home, characteristics of the furnace and other factors.

MICHIGAN'S FOREST FIRE RECORD IS GOOD

Heaviest Losses Occurred During Early Dry Period

In spite of a bad beginning caused by an early, dry spring, the conservation department's forest fire fighters this week complete the first six months of the forest fire season and enter the hazardous dry fall period with the creditable year-to-date record of 760 forest fires extinguished and only 11,500 acres burned over.

Of this 1942 season's loss (already greater than last year's) 80 per cent or 9,250 acres were damaged in the 400 fires that burned an average of 23 acres each in the first month. In the next five months there were fewer fires than in the first month, and those that did occur were held, with the aid of prevailing wet weather, to an average burn of six acres each.

With the abundant and heavy green vegetation that inhibited fires throughout the summer now drying out, conservation department officials again are reminding persons visiting wooded areas of the heightening fire danger, doubly significant now because of the volume of Michigan forest products going into war production.

"JOAN never had a beau," Joan's sister Emily confided to her visitor. "And you know one can't include girls like that in our parties. Anyhow, I doubt if Joan would care about the crowd any more than the crowd would care about her. Poor kid! I often wonder what will become of her."

"Oh, well," said Emily's house guest, who was deftly making up her face before the mirror. "Old maids aren't looked down on the way they used to be. She will probably find a school to teach or a typewriter to pound after a while, and very likely she'll be happier than you or I. Only I just can't believe Joan is satisfied for it to go that way. I never knew a young girl who didn't like beaus."

"Well, Joan doesn't. If she did she wouldn't be so standoffish, would she? Can't you just imagine Clark or David falling for an evening in the parlor?"

"But after all," broke in the soft tones of Joan, who had stepped quietly into the room, "she's only 22—much too young to have to consider how young she looks."

Emily laughed. "Thanks, old dear!" she said blithely. "But it's these late hours, you know. I admit you look younger, although you're actually a year older, but you'll have to admit that while I may grow old a bit faster I have more fun as I go, won't you?"

"Oh, I don't know," Joan sighed. "After all, what fun is there in wasting time on a lot of men who don't really interest you?"

"They'll interest you if you interest them." Emily laughed a bit sharply. "But it must be mutual, Joan, dear. There's the bell. It must be David and Clark. Now, he is a real catch, Joan, and every girl at the party will envy me tonight. Won't you go down and entertain them while we finish dressing?"

When the gay little party had gone Joan sat out on the vine-screened porch alone lost in thought. She had overheard a part of the conversation about her and it hurt a little. Would a fellow like Clark Howard think her hopeless? When she had said that she didn't care a lot for dances he had asked her curiously, "Well, what would you care to do on an evening like this, Miss Joan?" And Joan answered half bitterly, half earnestly:

"Why, I'd like to sit out on the porch with a handsome young man and listen to the radio. And very likely I'd make some fudge."

She wondered now if he were having a wonderful time dancing with her pretty sister, who was always clever and amusing.

"Is the fudge cooking?" a voice broke in. "And could I substitute for the handsome young man?"

"But," exclaimed Joan, with her engaging honesty, "you are the handsome young man! And I can put the fudge on immediately, only—" she hesitated.

"Oh, I know. You mean to remind me that I shouldn't have run away from the dance, but your sister had a waiting list of partners. And I really never get a chance to talk to you, you know, since you're so uninterested in our modern frivolities."

An hour passed all too quickly for Joan, and when Clark thought he had better get back to the dance he suggested that he come over another evening, and Joan laughingly agreed.

But that was the first of several stolen evenings for Clark and Joan. They found a world of mutual interests and Joan made delightful fudge. Or sometimes it was a delicious dessert with coffee, or sandwiches and tea. They said nothing to the others, Joan because of a shy fear of surprised, sarcastic comments, and Clark because, as he said, "he didn't want to spoil it."

But the time came when Clark's visit to Westfield was about to end.

"It's a great little town," he said to Joan, "and I hate to go, but after all, I'm rather anxious to get back to my practice, for I've a new incentive now."

When Joan glanced up questioningly he suddenly reached for her hand and drew her toward him in the seclusion of the vine-clad porch.

"I've found something in Westfield," he declared, "that I didn't know was to be found anywhere, a genuine, true, sweet, old-fashioned girl. You're the incentive, Joan! Please say you love me too, dear!"

That night as Joan entered Emily's room the latter was saying to Martha, "I declare, we've seen practically nothing of Clark Howard these last few weeks and I hear he's leaving tomorrow. I daresay Rose Trennen has got him."

"About Clark Howard," Joan put in, her cheeks flushing. "I think I have some news for you. We're to be married Christmas."

An amazed silence, which Emily was the first to break.

"Why, Joan Hayward, what a perfectly silly joke! My stars, it must be true!" for Joan was beamingly showing a new diamond ring on her left third finger. "Well, then, all I have to say is this, that if a man like Clark Howard has fallen for Joan, it's all tommy-rot about the modern girl being preferred. The old-fashioned girl must have a racket I should know about!"

CAUTION HUNTERS ON LIMIT OF WOOD DUCK

Daily and Possession Limit Is Only One Per Person

Lest hunters take the liftlag of the ban on wood duck shooting to be an invitation to kill the legal number allowed, the conservation department's game men are pointing out that the change in the law was made with quite a different intent.

Chief purpose of the change, they say, was to avoid penalizing the novice for an unintentional mistake in identifying duck species, and to prevent waste if the mistake was made. It definitely was not made to encourage wood duck shooting, they declare.

Rigidly protected for many years because it was believed to be in danger of extermination, the beautiful wood duck still is one of the better protected species. Hunters may not have more than one in a day's bag, and though it is lawful to have a two days' bag of other ducks in possession, the possession limit on wood ducks remains just one.

SURGICAL DRESSINGS PROGRAM IS DELAYED

Many Workers Will Be Needed When Material Is Received

Making of Red Cross surgical dressings, a program scheduled to start last week, has been delayed by failure of the material to arrive. As soon as the shipment is received, work will begin at the Red Cross room on the second floor of the city hall.

Last Wednesday afternoon, a small amount of material was made up experimentally by a group of volunteers. As soon as the material arrives, many workers will be needed to complete the large quota asked of this city.

The Red Cross room will be open four afternoons and two evenings a week, and announcement of the exact days and hours will be made later. Mrs. F. F. McMillan is in charge of the program.

Will send you my new address and will be looking forward to receiving the home paper soon. I love to hear the news from home and friends.

Thanking you for the past, will say hello and farewell to all at Charlevoix.

Though it will not dig a home of its own to live in, preferring burrows ready-made by woodchucks and badgers, the cottontail is not entirely unable to dig. At Swan Creek wildlife experiment station, biologist Arnold Haugen observed that cottontail young were in bowl-like depressions three inches deep and six inches across, dug by the mother rabbit in firm soil.
